Wrecked at Sea.

Galveston, Tex., Dec. 31.—The schooner Julia Ward has been wrecked at sea. She was of 661 tons and hailed from Rockport, Mass. Capt. Rich and his crew were rescued and arrived here to-day. The captain relates a tale of terrible suffering.

All the furnaces of Newcastle, Pa., are closing down to-day as the result of the demands on the part of the employes to pay for time and a half on Sundays and a correponding increase on holidays.

MADE BAD MONEY

AN EXPERT COUNTERFEITER IN MINNEAPOLIS LOCKED UP.

Several Buckets of Spurious Coin Are Found in His Possession—The Counterfeit Pieces Pronounced to Be the "Best" Bay Money That Has Been Made for Some Time—Probably the Last of the Gang.

Minneapolis, Dec. 31.—The maker of spurious money and the moving spirit in the counterfeiting gang who have plied their trade in this city for the past few years, was arrested to-day at his home, 616 Harrison street northeast. For the past year, or ever since the arrest of Ollinger, Ryle and Rice by Inspectors Hoy and Lawrence last spring, the East side officers have been keeping their eyes upon a man named Albert Morey, who lives at the above place. Private information came to the police but they could not get any positive evidence, so Mr. Morey was not arrested. Finally parties came to the police and informed them that they had been approached by Morey and asked to go into counterfeiting. They told the officers all about the way Morey did business. Another person had seen Morey dispose of some of the money. This evidence, together with what had come out during the Ollinger case, caused Lieut. John Cronin to secure a search warrant.

To-day Capt. Bosworth, Lieut. Cronin, Sergt. Mousso and Officers Chamberlain and Ollinger went to the house on Harrison street and found Morey in the barn attending to his horses. He at first looked surprised, but he was at once taken into the house. The officers advised him to tell all he knew about the manufacture of counterfeit money. He at first said nothing, but at last he saw there was no use of holding back, as the officers produced the search warrant.

Bucketsfull of the "Queer."

He led the searchers to a big pantry and there exhibited several large bucketsfull of coin. All the available space in the pantry was occupied by the spurious coin and the molds and other implements for the manufacture of the "queer."

The officers placed Morey under arrest and carted to the central station what they found. There were sixteen big and eight small molds; a lot of ladles of various sizes, and files. The money was next counted and $24 in 50-cent pieces, $74 in silver dollars and $345 in $5 gold pieces was found. The dates of the gold pieces were 1881 and 1880; of the 50-cent pieces, 1875 and 1893; of the silver dollars, 1880, 1890, 1886 and 1888. Experts looked at the coins, and, in their opinion, they are the best counterfeits that have been made for some time. The stamping work is excellent and the only possible way of detecting them would be by their weight, as they are a little lighter than the genuine coin.

Morey was divorced from his wife about a year ago and at present lives in the house alone. He rents it from Sam Simpson, a lumber merchant. Morey deals in mill wood when he is not employed in the more lucrative job of making money. It is believed that his arrest will put an end for some time to counterfeiting in this city, as the gang who has been responsible for the making and passing of the coin is now thoroughly broken up and disposed of.

ANOTHER BOND ISSUE.

All Arrangements Are Said to Have Been Completed.

Washington, Dec. 31.—There is now no reasonable doubt that another bond issue has been fully agreed upon, and that the details of a contract with a syndicate, of which J. P. Morgan is the head, have been arranged, so that nothing remains to be done to carry it into effect but for the secretary of the treasury to sign his name thereto.

Thus the president is prepared for any emergencies, and there is no doubt that should heavy withdrawals of gold for export again set in another issue would be announced. The fact that there have been no withdrawals for export within the last several days, although sterling exchange has ruled at, or above, the shipping points, gives credence to an opinion held in treasury circles that the market has already begun to feel the syndicate influence against exports. The amount of the next issue, it is almost certain, has been fixed at $100,000,000.

How Thompson Was Shot.

St. Paul, Dec. 31.—If Charles Thompson, lives twenty-four hours longer there will be no need of his making a confession. His story will be out. There were startling developments in the case last night, and to-day may mark the end of the great mystery. That Thompson was shot in Rice Park between the hours of 10 and 11 Friday night, is now the accepted theory. That he was attempting to hold up a man in company with a pal, is said to be beyond doubt. There is at least one man who heard the shot and saw Thompson reel away, groaning with pain and clasping his wound with his hands. That man is Kallias J. Johnson, a colored painter and paperhanger, living at 124 West Fourth street.

Killed His Brother-in-Law.

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 31.—Andrew McCann, a prominent citizen of Pratt City, last night shot and instantly killed Edward Barrett, his brother-in-law. Barrett wanted McCann to eject George Dressler from his house, Barrett being jealous of Dressler's attentions to a lady friend. This McCann refused to do, and a quarrel ensued with the above result.

So One Newspaper Says.

Vienna, Dec. 31.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Freie Presse telegraphs that Russia and France have actually promised diplomatic support of the United States in the Venezuelan trouble, and he adds that Russia is prepared to facilitate the United States loan with her own gold reserve.

Safe blowers entered the post office at Highland Park, Ill., last night, wrecked the safe and escaped with money and stamps amounting to between $1,000 and $1,700.

MINNESOTA VOTERS.

The Total Voting Population of the State 426,437.

St. Paul, Special.—The state census bureau has just finished the work of compiling the reports of the state enumerators showing the number of legal voters, nativity of the people of the state, etc.

It will be seen by comparison that of the 426,437 legal voters in the state, 363,813 registered in 1894, while only 291,932 voted leaving a balance of 134,505 legal voters, counting those who became of age during the interval between the elections and June 1, 1895, when the census was taken, who did not vote.

NEW MEN ON CARS.

Fresh Outbreak of the Philadelphia Trolley Car Trouble.

Philadelphia, Dec. 27.—The street railway trouble broke out afresh today, but was quickly quelled and cars are again running as usual. While it lasted several cars were stoned and their windows smashed, but nobody was hurt. The difficulty occurred on Girard avenue, the ex-strikers charging that the division superintendent, in sending out cars this morning, violated the company's agreement by giving preference to the new and non-union men. The old employes gathered together, and after watching the cars going out for some time with imported motormen and conductors, started a revolt. Obstructions were placed on the track and a mob of 10,000 people gathered and began to stone the cars. A squad of mounted police was called to the scene and in a short time the mob was dispersed after several arrests had been made.

At 2 o'clock this morning the brick stables attached to the handsome country residence of John Lomber Welch, president of the Union Traction company, in Germantown, were burned to the ground, entailing a loss of $20,000. The bitter feeling existing against Mr. Welch because of his attitude during the strike leads to a general belief that the fire was of incendiary origin. Mr. Welch does not think so, however. He says it was probably due to the carelessness of a servant employed in the stables. The police are investigating the matter.

RUSSIA'S OFFER OF GOLD.

Officials Excited Over an Incident That Happened Two Years Ago.

Washington, Dec. 27.—Great interest was excited in official circles here to-day by the publication in the Washington Post, under a New York date, of a circumstantial statement to the effect that the Russian government has offered to lend the United States government and amount of gold, up to $400,000,000—one-half of its total possession of this specie—in order to maintain its credit against assaults from the great money powers of other European nations, and that, learning of this tender, the Rothschilds, through Messrs. Belmont & Morgan, had made overtures to let the United States have any amount of gold needed.

The statement, it is learned, is accurate, so far as concerns the fact that Russia tendered the United States a part of its store of gold, but the natural inference that this offer was a recent one made in consequence of the late Venezuelan message and subsequent panic is not warranted; for it may be asserted positively and on excellent authority that the tender was in no manner influenced by the complications now existing between the United States and Great Britain as the result of the negotiations over the Venezuelan boundary question, and was in fact made two years ago.

Mr. William F. Thorne, aged seventy-three, died in Cincinnati early this morning. He had for a long time been a leading business man and prominent citizen.

KILLED IN A WRECK

AN OPERATOR'S ERROR CAUSES A BAD SMASH-UP.

Two Passenger Trains, Running at a Terrific Speed, Come Together Near Cincinnati—Two People Are Killed and Six Injured, Three of Them Probably Fatally—Several Passengers Slightly Injured.

Cincinnati, Dec. 31.—Two passenger trains collided on the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern near Coal City, fourteen miles from Cincinnati. They were the Louisville express and the St. Louis accommodation. The latter was an hour late. The first known of the collision here was when the wrecking train was sent out, accompanied by physicians, railway officials and others. They were followed by the newspaper men and others in carriages. The wildest rumors of the loss of life were soon circulated. The hospitals were put in readiness and police headquarters were promptly equipped for the care of the injured. When information was obtained from the scene it was found that there were two killed and six injured. Both engines were totally wrecked, as the engineers had very little time to check their speed. The combination car of the Louisville express and the express car on the train from St. Louis were telescoped.

Coal City is a coaling station on the road and had no telephone. When the engines came together they knocked out a telegraph pole, cutting off all telegraphic communication. It required some time for the railroad officials to get telegraphic communication with this city, and then the wire and the operator at Coal City were kept busy with orders. The Big Four tracks parallel those of the Southwestern at Coal City but their tracks were not obstructed.

Passengers arriving on the Knickerbocker express after 9 o'clock say their train shot by Coal City at great speed, as they had only a passing view but that there was a horrible spectacle of wreckage.

Dead and Injured.

The dead are: Fireman Wilson, of the Louisville express; unknown man, buried under the wreck. The injured: Fireman Himan Bruning, of the St. Louis train, very dangerously injured; Jacob Baer, of the copper shop in Lawrenceburg Ind., hip dislocated, leg, arm and head cut and bruised; Alonzo Pruitt, engineer of the Louisville express, internal injuries, left arm badly cut; James Gabriel, engineer St. Louis train, back and side injured; Fred Bluckam, of Aurora, passenger, severe scalp wounds; T. M. Voight, express messenger on St. Louis train, internal injuries, besides bad cuts and bruises; express messenger Elsenborn, of the Louisville express, slightly injured. Of the injured all are seriously hurt except Blackamp and Elsenborn. It is feared that Bruining, Baer and Pruitt are fatally hurt.

A special train arrived with the injured and they were at once taken to the hospital where complete arrangements for the care of them had been made. The cause of the accident was the failure of the operator at Sorra station to report to the Louisville train an order to wait at Delhi an let the St. Louis train pass there. The trains when they sighted each other a mile this side of Coal City were going at full speed and had but little time to slow up before the collision. The road is comparatively straight at this point, otherwise the casualty would have been terrific. The injury to passengers other than those named was very slight.

SLIPPERY AS AN EEL.

A Negro Thief Escapes After Being Strung Up.

St. Louis, Dec. 31.—For several weeks past a burly negro has been stealing all sorts of things from the Union market house, but has always escaped arrest, and the tenants of the market became exasperated over their losses. This morning the negro was caught while carrying off two horse blankets, and the cry of "lynch him" went up. A crowd of angry men seized him, bound his wrists, put a rope around his neck and strung him up by a block and tackle, hanging in the market house. But the negro was a fellow of great nerve, and while his tongue was protruding from his mouth and his eyes bulging from their sockets, he made a violent struggle, broke the cord which bound his arms and before the mob realized what he was doing he whipped out a big knife from his pocket, cut the rope around his neck, dropped to the ground and ran like a deer. He was overtaken, but he turned with his big knife and the crowd wavered, giving the negro a chance to dodge into an alley and escape.

An Interesting Fight.

St. Paul, Dec. 31.—The people of Hastings have secured in the Ramsey county district court a temporary injunction to restrain the fourth insane asylum commission from taking any action to locate the asylum at any other place than Hastings. The chances are that Hastings is a little bit late, as it is said that Anoka people had previously secured a voucher from Auditor Dunn for the $15,000 for the site. The case will probably be taken to the supreme court.

Judge Robbed Four Times.

Eau Claire, Wis., Dec. 31.—Burglars entered the residence of Judge Bailey Sunday night and took his wife's sealskin coat and a lot of silverware; total value, $400. No arrests. The robbery was not discovered until to-day. This is the fourth time the judge's house has been plundered.

Rickards Goes to Washington.

Helena, Mont., Dec. 31.—Gov. J. E. Rickards leaves to-day for Washington, D. C., where he will lay before the interior department his report about the depredations of the Cree Indians, their repeated violations of the game law and the refusal of the authorities of Canada, whose wards the Indians are, to heed his demands for protection.

If any one believes for a moment that patriotism is not a living breathing principle in the American heart he will have such ideas quickly dispelled by the evidences occuring all about him. Citizens of every nationality are outspoken in the defence of the position taken by the government upon the Venezuelan case. The children in the schools show in numerous instances the spirit of 1776 and 1861, Patriotism is by no means dead, and the temper of the American people will not brook interference in American affairs by any foreign power. America is for Americans and always will be.—Crookston Times.

There is a world of truth in the following from a contemporay: "Many an unwise parent works hard and lives sparingly all his life for the purpose of giving his children a good start in the world, as it is called. Starting a young man out with money left him by his relatives is like tying a bladder under the arm of one who cannot swim, Ten to one he will lose the bladder and go to the bottom. Teach him to swim and he won't need the bladder. Give your child a good education. See that his morals are pure, his mind cultivated and his whole nature subservient to the laws that govern man and you give what will be of more value than the Indies. You have given him a start no misfortune can deprive him of. The earlier you teach him to depend upon himself the better.

Benson will Quit 'em

East Grand Forks Courier.—C. M. Benson, judge of probate, and his popular deputy, Oscar C. Lindquist, spent Saturday and Sunday in town. Judge Benson who is serving his third term as judge of the probate court elected in both instances as a populist by populistic voters and on a populistic ticket, expressed himself rather forcibly to the reports regarding the populists Polk county, and wishes it, distinctly understood that henceforth he is an out and out republican,

It seems strange that when a populist official disgraces himself his office and his party, he immediately seeks refuge within the ranks of the republican party. The party does not need such men and the sooner they leave the better, We are of the opinion there will be no no great sorrow within the ranks of the peoples party,

The opening to settlement of 890'745 acres of the Red Lake and White Earth reservation, which comprised part of the Chippewa Indians lands in Minnesota, is provided for in a schedule submitted today by the commissioner of the general land office to the secretary of the interior, which doubless will be immediately approved. Of the lands, 838,746 acres are in the Red Lake reservation and 51,999 in the White Earth reservation. The opening will take place at 9 o'clock a m on some day about June 1. No proclamation will be issued, but the publication of the publication of the official action will be made in a few days. Of the lands ceded by the Indians from the original 3,500,000 acres, constituting the Red Lake and 796,672 acres, the White Earth reservation, the government reserves 1,661-255 acres in the former and 37,819 in the latter as timber lands. The schedule provides that the timber lands be paid for at the rate of not less than $3 per 1,000 feet to be sold at public outcry. After appraisal by agents of the general land office. The opening of other reservations will follow in a few months.

MINNESOTA STATE NORMALS.

AT
WINONA, MANKATO, St. CLOUD AND MOORHEAD.

These schools are organized for the training of teachers for the public schools of the state.

ORGANIZATION.—Each school comprises two departments—the Normal Department and the Training Department or Model School.

The Normal Department embraces:

(a) An elementary course of two years for teachers of rural district, and elementary grades.

(b) An advanced course of five years for teachers of advanced grades.

(c) A professional course of two years for graduates of high schools.

(d) A kindergarden training course. [at Winona, St. Cloud and Mankato.]

ADMISSION.—Graduates of high schools and and colleges and teachers holding county superintendents' first and second grade certificates are admitted, without examination.

All others are required to pass an entrance examination.

EXPENSES.—Tuition is free to all who pledge themselves to teach in Minnesota. Text books are furnished at a rental of $3 per year. Provision is made in each school for economical living. The average cost of furnished rooms with board is about $3 per week. The Ladies' Home at St. Cloud offers board, furnished room heat and light at $3 per week. The new dormitory at Moorhead, and the ladies' Home at Winona furnish similar accommodation at a slightly higher rate. Winona accommodation $3,50 per week.

The next school year opens at Winona September 2nd; at Mankato, September 2nd; at St Cloud September 3rd; at Moorhead September 3rd.

Seeing Them Burn

Close competition breeds impetuosity, and in our earnest pushing for trade it often happens that we mark goods away down just for the fun of

Seeing Them Sell

Somebody has exclaimed: "Oh, the impetuosity of the idiocy of the tumultuous idiot!" This remark will never apply to you if in your rush for bargains you get into the right store, which of course is ours.

We print a likeness of the skeleton of this remarkable paleontological reptile because some of its physical characteristics are synonymous with our business methods. Perhaps the most striking similarity may be found in its

Its little finger is very large: and so are our bargains. The paradox of a little finger being big may be likened to the paradoxical inducements we offer you.

Profits and Hind Feet Small

Its hind feet are out of all proportion to its fore feet, just as our profit is overshadowed by the buyer's. Its large head represents the size of our stock. The many years that have elapsed since the time when this creature flourished will hint at the wearing quality of our goods.

POLISHING FURNITURE.

How to See "Your Face Reflected" In the Shining Tables.

It is a most satisfactory state of affairs and an evidence of careful and dainty housewifery if when entering the room it is evidenced that the chairs, tables, cabinets and other polished furniture surfaces reflect the light, glistening as with much careful rubbing and showing absence of dust and grime.

There is no one of the housekeeper's duties that requires more careful attention than the care of furniture surfaces. Dust will settle, dampness and steam moisten it, and though a room may be carefully put to rights every day some dust is bound to adhere, especially in corners and the crevices of carvings and ornate work, that, if neglected, presents anything but a lovely appearance. If there are children, the imprints of tiny fingers, so hard to keep free from soil, are sure to adorn the edges of tables and form traceries on chairs and other household goods.

The aid of a cabinet maker every month or so to clean the furniture would prove too costly and the repeated varnishings of such articles as require it too much trouble. Therefore a cleaner that will keep the furniture looking nice, remove the stains and soil and does not cost a great deal in time and money is a great boon to housewives.

To reach this end there is nothing better than a mixture of linseed oil and kerosene. Some furniture dealers use linseed and turpentine, but it is not so satisfactory, as after repeated usings the turpentine roughens the polished surface.

If the article to be polished is very much soiled, wash thoroughly with warm soapy water, drying as quickly as possible. Then with a flannel rag dipped in a mixture of two parts linseed to one of kerosene rub the surface thoroughly. Let it stand awhile until you have rubbed another piece, and then with a perfectly clean piece of flannel free from oil polish it until it shines to your taste. This is an easy method of keeping furniture bright, and it does not injure the daintiest wood, the odor soon evaporating if the window is opened.

If there is much furniture to clean and it is badly soiled, mix a small quantity of the oils at a time so that it will be all used, and a very soiled rag should not be tolerated. Clean rags and a little clean oil at a time give much better results. Then be careful to rub every trace of the cleaner from the furniture, or the result will not be what you desire.

To clean fairly well the arms and backs of upholstered furniture that have become dingy use a little gasoline. Use clean flannel for this also, and after dusting briskly with a whisk broom rub with flannel dipped in gasoline; then set in the air until the odor has evaporated. Polished or painted floors, grained or varnished doors, dingy baseboards or any surface that requires polishing, or that the housekeeper desires to make shine, will do so most agreeably if treated, to a vigorous rubbing with the linseed and turpentine after first cleansing with soap and water.

Bronzes and bent iron work, fenders and grate fixings all look brighter and fresher for a little rubbing with the oily rags, and the room and its furnishings that you have thus treated present a look of dainty, refined cleanliness that is worth a great deal of work and infinite trouble to produce.—Philadelphia Press.

His Art Gift.

She was visiting at the house of the eminent politician.

"I hear," she said, "that you have a valuable addition to your art collection."

"My art collection?" he repeated.

"Yes. I take it for granted that you must have one."

"I have ever striven, madam, to cultivate an appreciation of the beautiful."

"And wasn't it beautiful in the voters to remember you as they did?"

"I don't quite follow you, ma'am," said the eminent politician, growing red in the face.

"Why, I was told that they gave you a beautiful marble heart, and I'am just dying to see it."—Washington Star.

Why He Stopped His Paper.

A recent subscriber to a Georgia newspaper writes to the editor to stop his paper and makes this explanation:

"I think people autent to spend their muney fur papurs mi daddy didn't and everybody sed he was the intelligentest man in the kentry and had the smartest family of bois that ever dug taters."—Atlanta Constitution.

Female Spiders.

The female spider is always larger than the male, and, if accounts be true, is of a rather peppery disposition. When the husband becomes obstinate and will not obey orders, the loving wife eats him up to get rid of him and seeks a more obedient spouse.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

BESIDE A GRAVE.

Out of the grass that is over thy breast,
  Hearing my coming, a bird took her flight.
Where shall she travel for holier rest,
  Scattering dew on the robes of the night?
Was she thy soul for a moment returned
  Out of God's hand to the temple of rust,
Touching the bosom of clay she has spurned,
  Leaving her tears on thy forehead of dust?

Friend of my heart, I was sad all the day,
  Hearing thee ask for me, hearing thee sigh.
Now I am coming at the evening to pray
  Under the darkening dome of the sky,
Calling by blossom and crying by bird.
  Have I not felt thee in lily and lark?
All of thy tender, imperatives heard,
  Comfort thee, comfort thee, friend in the dark.

What shall I tell thee? Night changes to morn.
  Woodlands are sweet with the call of the dove.
Motherly finches contented in thorn
  Nurse for their husbands a nestful of love.
What is all beauty if thou have no part?
  Would that life's rule might be dead for thy sake,
Friend, as I moan from the tuft on my heart.
  Oh, to be sleeping and know thee awake!

—Norman Gale in Windsor Magazine.

The Ideal Schoolboy.

The ideal schoolboy is an orderly machine, always obedient, receptive, submissive, ready in the cricket field and with real or simulated enthusiasm for football, despising all other games, and conservative to the backbone. He is the darling of the master, who sends him home with glowing reports and arms full of prize books. It seems never to occur to any one that there may be natures to which the classical languages and history make no appeal, who have not the gift of the mathematician, and who do not even care to play at cricket or football. If such appear in a public school, they have a bad time of it, dragging out their miserable days at the bottom of the form, regarded as fools by the masters and as muffs by the boys. And yet among these school failures there may be Liebigs or Darwins or at any rate there may be and commonly there is the material out of which good and useful citizens are made if only they had a chance to show what they can do.—Nature.

Rough on Chelsea.

A Chelsea (Mass.) man recently died, says the Boston Budget, and in a conversation between him and a friend at a Spiritualistic seance the following colloquy ensued:

The friend, on being called for by the departed one, asked, "Who's that?"

"Your old chum, Jim Wilson."

"Well, Jim, I suppose you are partaking of celestial glory?"

"Not a bit of it—I struck the other place."

"Great Scott, that's awful!"

The spirit smiled. "I know that's the popular idea," it said, "but, my boy, it's a great sight better than Chelsea."

The story would indicate that the medium must have played to very poor business in Chelsea.

Stage Realism.

One of my best friends in Plymouth was Benjamin Haydon. His son, the artist of celebrity, was at that time a spirited and intelligent little fellow about 10 years of age, who used to listen to my songs and laugh heartily at my jokes whenever I dined at his father's. One evening I was playing Sharp in "The Lying Valet" when he and my friend Benjamin were in the stage box, and on my repeating the words, "I have had nothing to eat since last Monday was a fortnight" little Haydon exclaimed in a tone audible to the whole house: "What a whopper! Why, you dined at my father's house this afternoon."—Bernard's "Retrospection of the Stage."

Rotten Row.

It is a royal prerogative, belonging exclusively to the reigning sovereigns, to drive down the middle of Rotten row, London. The queen has only availed herself once or twice of the right. From this ancient privilege came the name Rout du Rois, whence the corruption "Rotten row."

Poverty Cottage.

If ever household affections and loves are graceful things, they are graceful in the poor. The ties that bind the wealthy and the proud to home may be forged on earth, but those which link the poor man to his humble hearth are of the true metal, and bear the stamp of heaven.—Dickens.

North Carolina has a mica output of 100,000 pounds a year. New Hampshire produces about 25,000 pounds, South Dakota 18,000 pounds and New Mexico 1,000 pounds. The mica of North Carolina is of the best quality and brings the highest price.

The proverbial wisdom of the populace at gates, on roads and in markets instructs him who studies man more fully than a thousand rules ostentatiously arranged.—Lavater.

Bombardment of the residence portion of towns, now forbidden by the laws of war, has been repeatedly practiced in spite of this prohibition.

"I am still of the opinion," said Mr. Billtops, "that the most exasperating of little things is a pen that won't mark."—New York Sun.

Moonstruck is borrowed from astrology. It formerly described one who was driven mad by sleeping in the rays of the moon.

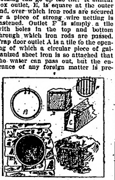
PROTECTING TILE OUTLETS.

Various Practical Methods Are Suggested.

Unless special care is taken to protect the outlet of a tile drain, there is danger of its being more or less injured. If it is in the pasture stock tramping about it are liable to crowd the tile out of place or break them. Where land washes very easily heavy rains will frequently displace them. It is also sometimes desirable to so close the opening in the drain that muskrats, rabbits and other vermin cannot enter it during a dry time and build an obstruction. Several such devices are illustrated in the cut.

Outlet D is particularly suited to a tile which has its opening in a bank of a creek or ditch some distance from the bottom. It is merely a wall of stone or brick laid in cement. This protection prevents the washing away of earth from about the outlet or a displacement of tile or earth by freezing. Where stone is abundant this style of an outlet is as practical as any and more substantial than many others. Outlet C consists of a wooden box made of two-inch hard wood, open at one end, which is slipped over the end of the drain. At the outer end a door, hinged at the top, is so arranged that the water will readily flow out, but nothing can go up the tile. A similar box outlet, E, is square at the outer end, over which iron rods are secured or a piece of strong wire netting is fastened. Outlet F is simply a tile with holes in the top and bottom through which iron rods are passed. Trap door outlet A is a tile to the opening of which a circular piece of galvanized sheet iron is so attached that the water can pass out, but the entrance of any foreign matter is prevented. Outlet B is similar, with a square tile for the end. These last are seldom made in the West, but are more generally in use in the East. When obtainable, they are more easily fitted with a piece of sheet iron. Often a small sewer tile is used to finish the lower end of a drain. The object in all these cases is to prevent an obstruction to the flow of water and to protect the drain.



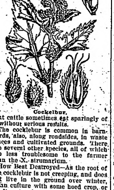
Various Styles of Drain Outlets.

Destroying Cocklebur or Clotbur.

Description—The cocklebur is a rapidly-growing, coarse weed with an irregularly branching stem that grows to height of from one to two feet. The leaves, which are borne on long leaf stalks, are broadly triangular in general outline, and more or less toothed and lobed on the borders. There are two kinds of flowers borne on separate heads or clusters on the same plant. The male or staminate flowers are produced in roundish heads at the top of the stem. After shedding their pollen these drop off, and the female or pistillate flowers, which are in clusters of two or three at the base of the male spike, enlarge and form thick, hard, oblong burs beset with stiff, hooked prickles, and bearing two strong beaks at the upper end. These burs, like those of the burdock, adhere to clothing and to the coats of animals. The upper portion of a plant of cocklebur is shown in Figure 5. At the top of the stem the heads of male, or staminate flowers are seen, and at the base of the leaves those of the female or pistillate flowers.

At the right, near the top of the figure, is a staminate flower enlarged; at the left of the base of the main stem is a head of pistillate flowers, showing the bur-like covering with its hooked prickles, and at the top the protruding styles; at the left is shown the same when older, and at the right the same when cut through lengthwise. Each bur, when mature, incloses two seeds, one of which may germinate the first year, and the other may lie dormant until a later time.

It has been said that the plant is poisonous to cattle, but this is probably a mistake. It is at least known that cattle sometimes eat sparingly of it without serious results.



Cocklebur.

The cocklebur is common in barnyards, also, along roadsides, in waste places and cultivated grounds. There are several other species, all of which are less troublesome to the farmer than the X. strumarium.

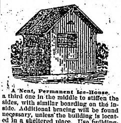
How Best Destroyed—As the root of the cocklebur is not creeping, and does not live in the ground over winter, clean culture with some hoed crop, or seeding to clover or meadow grass, with frequent mowing, will keep it under subjection. It should be carefully prevented from seeding, not only in cultivated grounds, but in waste places as well, and this is the only means that will prevent it from becoming troublesome. It is often necessary to go through corn and stubble fields in August or September for that purpose. Fortunately, nature helps us to curb this noxious weed by making it the host plant for several parasitic fungi.—From Wisconsin Experiment Station Bulletin No. 39.

Clover After Clover.

It is a curious fact about clover that when a clover sod is plowed late in the fall and sown with winter grain it is impossible to get a good clover catch on this land the following season. We have seen this tried a great many times. If a seeding is desired, timothy should be sown heavily in the fall, as no matter how much clover seed is sown in spring, very little will be found by harvest time. The trouble is that the soil on the late turned sod cannot be got into proper mechanical condition. The sod holds the furrow up, leaving a vacant place under the surface, until its rotting in the spring causes the furrow to collapse. This occurs just about the time the young clover germinates. As it catches hold of the soil the latter falls back and leaves the young clover plant exposed to the air, and a hot sun in April or May soon finishes it. Possibly a liberal use of the roller to compress the soil in the fall might make the clover seeding better, but there is sure to be a falling down of the furrow as turned in the fall when the sod begins to rot the following spring.—American Cultivator.

Permanent Farm Ice-House.

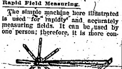
The end view of an ice-house, designed for use on a farm, is illustrated below. The wall consists of boards, standing perpendicular and nailed to a light frame of eight or twelve-inch scantling at the top and bottom, with a third one in the middle to stiffen the sides, with similar boarding on the inside. Additional bracing will be found necessary, unless the building is located in a sheltered place. Use building-paper on the under side of the outside boards. Fill the eight or twelve-inch space with sawdust. Use the kind of lumber suitable to the builder's means, as the cost of the house will correspond with the quality of lumber used. The foundation is fixed to drain thoroughly and is filled to a depth of six inches with cobblestones and a floor of two-inch plank placed upon them. Have the floor boards an inch apart, to allow drainage. Put ten inches of sawdust on the floor, or, if not available, use finely-cut rye straw. Oat straw is not as good for this purpose as rye, for, being soft, it packs too closely. In putting in the ice, leave a foot of space between it and the wall and pack this with sawdust or straw, as the wall of ice goes up. Place boards across the door spaces to prevent too heavy pressure on the doors. When the house is full, put a layer of sawdust or straw, eight or ten inches thick, over the top. The triangular windows at the ends provide thorough ventilation, which is an essential matter in keeping ice. Much cheaper temporary ice-houses can be constructed, or a stack of ice buried with sawdust or straw, will keep ice far into the summer.—Farm and Home.



A Neat, Permanent Ice-House.

Rapid Field Measuring.

The simple machine here illustrated is used for rapidly and accurately measuring fields. It can be used by one person; therefore, it is more convenient than a tape line or surveyor's chain. Make the wheel of such size that one revolution measures exactly 16½ feet or one rod. Have each spoke 32½ inches in length. They should be made of a stuff a little heavier than a lath, and the points should not be very sharp, or they will sink into soft ground, and the distance will not be accurate. Make the hub of two circular pieces of inch board screwed face to face together, holding the spokes firmly in the grooves previously cut. There should be eight spokes, and at the ends they should be just 24¾ inches apart, from center to center. Tie a white string to one of the spokes and count it as it comes around.—Practical Farmer.



Root Crops.

Root crops are cutting more of a figure in the economy of the farm in this country each year. Dairymen and sheep breeders have found that the feeding of roots is a decided advantage in their business, and feeders of fat stock are awakening to the fact that the putting on of flesh can be done better by a mixed ration than by the use of grain alone. A stockman with a liberal supply of mangels, turnips, carrots, etc., is in much better position to feed to advantage than if he had nothing but grain to depend upon. After a crop of roots is once harvested and conveniently stored it is easily fed. If only enough are secured to afford a change in the bill of fare occasionally the benefits will be great enough to pay for the trouble and time in securing them. In many of the foreign countries feeders do not think their stores of feed for the winter complete unless the root cellars or bins are full. It will be so in this country when feeders understand the value of these crops.—Denver Farm and Field.

Farm Notes.

The spring plans should be laid during the long winter nights.

Every farmer should have the bulletins of the experiment stations.

See that the barn and barn lot is well drained, and that there is a good walk from house to barn.

There need not be such a thing as a run-down farm if a proper rotation is followed, with clover as one of the crops.

Farmers' mutual insurance companies should be patronized in preference to the Eastern companies, whose rates are exorbitant.

Increase the farm in depth instead of buying more acres. Subsoiling without turning out the clay would be a great benefit to some soils.

Reports from Texas state that this year's crop of sugar cane will be short. The freezes of last winter seriously damaged the cane stubble, causing it to mature dry and hard.

According to department agricultural statistics for 1890 the value of the corn crop, in round numbers, was $592,000,000; hay crop, $571,000,000, and cotton crop, $285,000,000.

The farm boys should be allowed to see as much of the bright side of life as possible. There is no better place than the farm for those who like farming; but the farmer, like all others, should avoid going in debt.

Barn manures are generally more economically used when applied to farm crops than when exchangedy p farm crops than when applied to orchards, says an exchange, yet they can be used with good results, particularly when rejuvenating old orchards.

Saves a Fortune.

Monterey, Tenn., (Special)—One of our prominent citizens here, Col. James E. Jones, secretary and treasurer of the Cumberland Mountain Coal Co., is on the high road to make his fortune, and attributes the fact to his recent cure from the tobacco habit. He was an inveterate user of tobacco for many years, consuming so much as to make serious inroads on both his purse and his health. One box of No-To-Bac completely cured him, and he gained seven pounds in less than two weeks. Within three days after starting to use No-To-Bac the desire for tobacco was entirely gone. Col. Jones says to all tobacco users that No-To-Bac will do as recommended and is worth by far more than its weight in gold.

SAVED!

In case of danger the Indian was ever ready to act and often too at the expense of personal bodily harm to himself. This promptness and self-reliance in cases of accident has been the means of his saving many lives. Equally alert has he ever been for greater dangers; those arising from a disordered condition of the kidneys, liver, stomach or blood, which he knew as well as the best physician of to-day would eventually result in death.

His remedy for these troubles was always a medicine compounded from roots, herbs, barks and gums, not roughly thrown together, but carefully compounded, the secret of making it having been handed down from generation to generation. This same remedy known as KICKAPOO INDIAN SAGWA, is to-day still made as it was formerly by the Indian and is known and recognized the world over as one of the greatest blessings ever given to man.

If you are ailing try this wonderful medicine. A cure in every instance is speedily effected and in no case has harm ever resulted from its use. Sold by all druggists.

SUPERIOR'S BLEAK SHORE.

Shipwrecked Sailors Often Cast Into a Wilderness.

The recent accident to the steamer Missoula tends to show more clearly than anything that has occurred the vast area of Lake Superior, and the possibility of a vessel's crew reaching land after shipwreck and yet being unheard of for a couple of weeks after starting on a voyage. The shores of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota on the big lake are traversed by railways and telegraph lines, and the towns and small settlements on the American side of the lake, even to the islands, furnish ready means of communication with the larger cities; but not so on that part of the Canadian shore north of the lakes, where a wilderness inhabited by a few fishermen and Indians exist. This is especially true of the Canadian shore just above Sault Ste Marie, and for a long stretch of country to the north and east of the point where the Canadian Pacific railway turns in to the shore of the lake and traverses it toward Port Arthur and Fort William.

When the Missoula broke her shaft and was rendered helpless she was less that twenty-five miles from Caribou island on the course down toward Sault Ste. Marie. She was somewhat off the regular course of vessels bound down from the head of Lake Superior, but if she had been able to make any headway toward the Sault, or care for herself at all on the course she was following, she would have been picked up very soon after the accident by some passing vessel. But a southerly wind drifted her out of the course of even the few vessels trading to Canadian ports at the head of the lakes, and she was working over toward the wildest part of the Canadian north shore territory when her crew was compelled to abandon her.

A glance at the chart will show that Brule Point, where the crew of the Missoula first made land is scarcely more than seventy-five miles from Sault Ste. Marie, where 15,000,000 tons of freight pass through a canal in a single season, and yet the men in one of the Missoula's yawl boats spent nearly two days working along the shore of the lake before they found any more sign of life than a deserted fisherman's shanty, in which they built a fire and dried their wet clothing. The fishing season had closed, but even fishermen are scarce in this territory during the most active periods. It is not strange, therefore, that the men from the Missoula were nearly a full week in finding means of communicating with the owners of the vessel after they had landed on the dreary north shore of Lake Superior.—Detroit Free Press.

PLANS FOR A MAMMOTH SPAN.

Pittsburg Capitalists Contemplate a Big Plane for That City.

A charter was issued at Harrisburg yesterday to the City Incline Plane company of Pittsburg, which proposes to build a gigantic incline plane from a point on Fourth avenue over the Monongahela river to the top of Mount Washington. It is reported that the company is backed by several wealthy Pittsburg men. The plane they have in view is designed to carry passengers from the center of the business portion of the city to the top of Mount Washington at a comparatively easy grade and without the discomforts of transfers and slow service. The engineer has prepared plans for the structure, which provide for a total length of about 3,500 feet, and a width of 40 feet, with double tracks and a grade of between 9 and 10 per cent.

The colossal feature of the enterprise appears in the great suspension span across the Monongahela river, 1,300 feet in length, which would make it the second longest span in the country, only being exceeded in length by the great Brooklyn bridge, which has a span of 1,565 feet long. The towers at either end average 250 feet in height, and the floor of the structure, as planned, will cross Carson street almost 200 feet above the grade. The Mount Washington end of the plane, which in reality is nothing but a gigantic high grade suspension bridge, will be 350 feet above city datum.

The cars are to be operated by cables, and run at high speed. This will be rendered possible by the peculiar construction of the plane, which is nothing more than a larger model of the high-speed suspension bridge being erected. The plane is of the suspension type, with a stiffening truss riveted to the steel columns, the strain being transferred to the masonry. No obstructions will be placed in the way of river interests. The promoters for this reason expect no opposition.—Pittsburg Times.

OLD RAT STOOD GUARD.

Warned Young Rodents of the Dangers of the Trap.

The shrewdness and sagacity of aged members of the rodent family have been demonstrated in numberless instances, but an incident recently witnessed by Supt. Tyler of the city hall is worthy of remark. The yard of a house adjoining a stable on Seventeenth street, above Fairmount avenue, has been infested with rats for a long time, and a few days ago a member of the family set a large wire trap in the yard. Mr. Tyler was seated in the rear room of a Grayson street house and watched results with great interest. First one rat scudded across the grass and took an observation. In another minute a dozen little rats came trooping along with the evident intention of sampling the cheese. Just then a lean, long, gray old rat, with his tail chopped off, probably from a previous experience with traps, appeared and chased all the little rats away. The old fellow kept watch all the afternoon and effectually prevented a single rat, young or old, from entering the trap.—Philadelphia Record.

A Lawyer's Yarn.

Attorney A. C. Vogelsang of San Francisco tells this story: "Dennis Spencer, the Napa luminary, was called upon by a Chinese one evening when the following dialogue ensued:

"'One Chinese kill another Chinese with a hatchet; how much you charge make him clear?'

"'I'll take the case,' said Mr. Spencer, 'for $1,000.'

"'Allee light,' said the Chinaman, 'I be back after while.'

"In about a week he returned to Mr. Spencer's office and laid down $1,000 in gold coin on his table. Mr. Dennis swept the coin into the drawer.

"'Well, the Chinese, he dead.'

"'Who killed him?'

"'I did.'

"'When did you kill him?'

"'Last night.'

A NOVEL TRAVELING EXHIBIT.

The John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., always on the alert for something good, have struck a novel idea to introduce, exhibit and advertise their famous northern grown seeds. This is done by means of an advertising car, an illustration thereof appears herewith. This car is in charge of three experts who are thoroughly familiar and versed with seed growing. The car inside and out is a marvel of beauty and elegance and is at our regardless of cost and is being run and exhibited in Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, and other states. Upon entering it, one is transported at once into a very fairyland where flowers and vines and forage and fruits and vegetables luxuriate and abound in great abundance. Of course the great specialties which have made the John A. Salzer Seed Co. leaders among seedmen, such as fine vegetables and vegetable seeds, are exhibited to perfection, and then there is an endless array of farm seeds, corns, wheats, oats, rye, barley, sand vetch, lupine, lathyrus, sacaline, amber cane, kafir corn, Jerusalem corn and hundreds of other varieties of seeds and crops on exhibition. Particular notice is due to their marvelous collection of heavy cropping potatoes, their $1,000 oat, just imported from Russia, and Silver King barley, cropping in 500 different places in America in 1895, over 100 bushels per acre.

The car is visited daily by hundreds, yea we may say thousands of people, and nothing so catches the eye and rivets the attention of the farmer than the great bed of different varieties of grasses, clovers and fodder plants that are exhibited in one end of the car, or as one great dairyman of Elgin, Ill., said upon seeing this magnificent display of grasses, "I have seen the World's Fair and Barnum's Circus, but this exhibit beats them all!"

It is only possible in a newspaper article to give but a faint idea of the beauty and attractiveness of this car. It must be seen to be appreciated but it only strengthens the idea amongst farmers and others that a firm that can exhibit such excellent products, grown from their own seeds on their own farms, is the firm to tie to when you want choice northern grown seeds. Seeds that never disappoint! They issue a large catalogue of farm and vegetable seeds which is mailed to any address upon receipt of 5 cents for postage. W. N.

PIANOS OF PAPER.

They Are Exquisite in Tone and Elaborately Decorated.

"All manner of articles in place of wood have been used in the manufacture of pianos," said the manager of one of the greatest of English piano makers.

"Perhaps the most successful of all these is paper, of which many pianos of exquisite tone and appearance have been made. The duke of Devonshire has one of the finest specimens of the paper piano, this being of French make, and decorated most ornately with pictures by well known French artists. The duke gave 500 guineas for this, mainly, no doubt, on account of its ornamentation.

"Ivory pianos are by no means uncommon, and the dowager countess of Dudley has a magnificently-carved specimen. Pianos of ivory are, I might say, made every year in numbers, principally for Indian princes and rich Spanish-Americans. Many pianos of solid silver are made; indeed, one was only recently completed by a London firm for the Nizam of Hydrabad, and piano cases have, at various times, been made of bronze, a species of aluminum, glass, porcelain, and in combination, mother-of-pearl."

Why a Deaf Man Is the Best Man to Put Up Stoves.

The householders in the eastern part of the city have been much amused during the past two weeks by a small negro boy who goes around, accompanied by his father, and tries to get jobs for the latter. He always has good reasons why his paternal relative should be selected instead of the numerous other colored men who are seeking for similar jobs. The old man is deaf and dumb, but this does not prevent his being a fine hand at doing small jobs. In fact, in some lines of work, according to his son, this is an advantage.

"We got ter give pap de job ob puttin' up dat stove," he said the other day, when a job of this nature was in prospect. "Dere ain't nobody lak him when it comes ter puttin' up stoves."

"Why is he such an expert as that?" said a lady, to whom he was talking.

NOW A CARDINAL

THE BERRETTA CONFERRED UPON THE PAPAL DELEGATE.

The Ceremonies Take Place in the Cathedral at Baltimore in the Presence of a Large Number of Catholic Dignitaries — Cardinal Gibbons Presides and Archbishop Kain Delivers the Sermon.

Baltimore, Jan. 7.—The berretta was conferred upon Cardinal Satolli yesterday in the cathedral in the presence of representatives of Pope Leo and Catholic dignitaries from all part of the country.

The initial step in the ceremonies of the day took place in the palace of the cardinal, shortly after 9 o'clock in the morning, when Mgr. Sbarretti presented his credentials to Cardinal Gibbons. The credentials, which came from the holy see, authorizes Mgr. Sbarretti to act as the ablegate of the pope, deputize Cardinal Gibbons to confer the berretta, and announce to Mgr. Satolli his elevation to the cardinalate. They were also accompanied by the berretta, which from that moment was in the custody of Cardinal Gibbons.

Cardinal Gibbons, in receiving the documents and the berretta, responded briefly, expressing his high appreciation of the honor conferred upon him, and congratulating Mgr. Sbarretti upon the manner in which he had performed his duties in this country.

While this scene was in progress within the palace, the procession was forming in front of Calvert hall, a block away. At 10 o'clock it was ready to start. First came the processional cross bearer with the crucifix raised high in the air, and flanked on either side by a boy in cassock and surplice. Following him were a long line of students form the various Catholic college, after which came seminarians from St. Mary's, then priests, then the Franciscan monks in their garb of brown. Following these came the members of the faculty of the Catholic university in Washington, in long robes of black, lined with many colored silks, their heads adorned with the shovelboard hat of the scholar. After these came half a hundred bishops and a score or more of archbishops, the purple and gold of glistening in the cold, clear air, their immense trains being held up by boys, also in rich and brilliant vestments. In this formation they marched through the cathedral to Charles street, and passed the palace of the cardinal, where they were joined by his eminence, who took his place last in the line. Upon his head he wore the red berretta, an exact duplicate of the one which he was soon to confer upon the man who will, for some time at least, share his honors in this country. Upon his shoulders hung the beautiful cloak of cardinal silk and ermine, with half a dozen train bearers, clad in cardinal velvet and gilt braid, following in his wake. In this order they swept along up Mulberry street to the cathedral again, where they filed into the venerable old pile through the main entrance-way. Mgr. Satolli was not in the procession, but as the head of it reached the altar, he, accompanied by Mgr. Sbarretti, Marquis Sacripanti, the member of the noble guard who brought the cardinalate insignia here, and the priests who had been deputized to assist him in the coming ceremony, entered the cathedral from a rear door leading fro inthe palace, and advanced to the front of the altar. The students and seminarians followed to the right and to the left as they passed in front of the high altar, finding seats on either side. The others in the procession advanced within the sanctuary and took the places reserved for them. As the procession wended its way down the center aisle, the organ, a full orchestra, and a chorus of fifty voices, rendered

A Triumphal March.

When Cardinal Gibbons reached the altar he bowed low to Mgr. Satolli, who returned the salutation, and each, accompanied by his assistant priest and deacons of honor, sought the throne upon which he was to rest during the greater part of the ceremony. That of Cardinal Gibbons was on the Gospel, or left side of the altar; that of Satolli upon the Epistle, or right side.

When the two persons most prominent in the ceremonies of the day had taken their places, Marquis Sacripanti, clad in the scarlet, gold and white uniform of the noble guard, wearing high top boots, and sword and helmet on, advanced from his post near the center of the altar and deposited the cardinalitial documents and the berretta. Then he crossed the altar and stood in front of the throne occupied by Satolli, lifted his helmet, and, falling back, took up a position to the right of Satolli. On the same side stood Eugene Kelly of New York, and on the opposite side of Satolli's throne stood Mr. Charles Astor Bristead, also of New York, chamberlains to the pope. Both were clad in the regulation evening dress.

As soon as all the principal actors in the spectacle had assumed their positions, Dr. Rooker, of the University at Washington, advanced, and, in Latin, read the documents to Satolli and Gibbons from the pope. The reading of the papal briefs having been finished, Mgr. Sbarretti advanced to a point in front of Cardinal Gibbons' throne and delivered an address in Latin.

Cardinal Gibbons Speaks.

When Mgr. Sbarretti had finished speaking, Cardinal Gibbons responded briefly in Latin, and then spoke in English.

The vast audience became all attention as it neared the most interesting point in the ceremony, that of actually conferring the berretta. Cardinal Gibbons descended from his throne and advanced to the front of the altar. Behind him came his attendants, Father Magnien bearing the berretta. As Cardinal Gibbons reached the altar and turned to face the audience, Satolli arose, and, escorted by Sacripanti and Chamberlains Kelly and Bristead, walked with brisk step toward Cardinal Gibbons. Upon reaching the illustrious prelate, he knelt and bowed his head. Cardinal Gibbons took the berretta from the silver salver on which it rested, and, slowly unfolding it, held it high up so that the audience could see it. Then stooping, and with what seemed to be a softly murmured prayer, he placed it upon the head of the new cardinal. Cardinal Satolli rose, and, for the first time in its history, there were two cardinals upon American soil.

Advancing to the front of the altar, Cardinal Satolli then delivered an address.

Upon finishing his address, the newly made cardinal, who, up to this time, had worn the robes of an archbishop, retired to the inner sanctuary, and in a few minutes returned clad in the gorgeous apparel of a cardinal. He was seen in these but a few moments, however, as he was almost immediately robed in the white and gold vestments of the mass, which he was to celebrate.

Sermon of Mgr. Kain.

Assisted by his priests and deacons, he proceeded with this amid the very breathless attention of the vast audience. When the gospel was reached, a moveable pulpit was pushed to the center of the auditorium, and Archbishop Kain of St. Louis, ascending it, delivered the sermon.

At the close of the mass, Cardinal Gibbons rose and said that he had the interesting announcement to make that the pope had cabled his congratulations and that he had authorized the speaker to pronounce the apostolic benediction upon all those present.

At his request, Dr. Rooker read the cablegram, which Cardinal Gibbons said he wished particularly to say was spontaneous and not evoked by any suggestion from this side of the Atlantic. It was as follows:

"To His Eminence, Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop of Baltimore: The extraordinary splendor accompanying the conferring of the berretta upon Cardinal Satolli, gratifies the holy father beyond measure, and he asks your eminence to express his satisfaction. Furthermore, as a token of his deep appreciation he empowers your eminence to impart to all present at the ceremony the apostolic benediction."

The cardinal pronounced the benediction, and the ceremony was ended.

IMMURED AND DISBARRED.

Enforcement League Attorney Root's Punishment.

Valley City, N. D., Jan. 7.—In the contempt case against Herbert Root, attorney for the state enforcement league, Judge Rose sentenced the defendant to thirty days in jail and fined him $200. He also disbarred Root from practicing in his district. No time was allowed for appeal, and Root was placed in jail. The new codes allow appeals in contempt proceedings, and the case will be carried to the supreme court. The case has attracted unusual attention over the state, and in view of the varying decisions of the supreme court of a number of states the result will be closely watched. Root got himself disliked because of the zeal he displayed in his efforts to close up the blind pigs. It is said the prohibition element will attempt to vindicate Root by electing him to the legislature and defeat Rose in his candidacy for re-election to the judgeship.

SAVED FROM DEATH

SHEA NOT GUILTY OF THE MURDER OF ROBERT ROSS.

Just Forty-Eight Hours Before He Was to Have Met Death in the Electric Chair John McGough, a Fellow Convict, Confesses That He Committed the Murder for Which Shea Was to Die.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 7.—The climax of one of the most dramatic and sensational criminal incidents of the state's history was made public to-day when, just 48 hours prior to the execution of the death sentence upon Bartholomew Shea, another man confessed to the murder, and Shea steps from beneath the shadow of the death thrown by the electric chair. The invitations for the electric killing of Shea had been issued, the state electrician was already upon the ground at Dannemora prison, the governor had decided, as exclusively stated in these dispatches on Saturday, not to interfere in the carrying out of the sentence, and Shea had resigned himself to his fate, when another prisoner in the institution, a comrade of Shea's and participator in the election outrages, when the tragedy occurred, confessed to the crime.

The man who voluntarily confesses to the crime and who practically steps from a prison chair to the menacing shade of the electrical death, is John McGough of Troy, now serving a sentence of 19 years and 6 months for shooting and attempting to kill William Ross, a brother of Robert Ross, who was supposed to be Shea's victim. In some way known only to convicts, McGough had contrived to keep informed as to the success or the failure of the applications for commutation made in behalf of Shea. When Shea was re-sentenced to die the 23d of December, it is believed that McGough was ready to confess, but when he learned that a respit had been granted he withheld his confession. After the holidays he learned that the efforts to obtain a commutation for Shea had not ceased, and so he made no sign. On Saturday, when Warden Thayer was made aware that the governor would not interfere, and arrangements were being made for the execution, McGough sent for the warden of the prison, Walter N. Thayer, and told him he wished to make a statement.

Makes a Confession.

The warden had McGough taken to the office, and told him to put down what he had to say in writing. McGough wrote a communication of about two pages, and, signing it with his full name, handed it to the warden. To the surprise of the warden and his deputies, the paper contained a decided statement that he, and not Shea, and shot and killed Robert Ross. The statement contained no details of the shooting other than the bold confession of the fact.

Warden Thayer went at once to the telephone, when McGough had been taken to his cell, and called up the executive chamber. He asked the governor to please receive a messenger whom he said would arrive, and then at once despatched the prison stenographer, Edward M. Coughlin, to Albany, who arrived here this morning, and found Gov. Morton at the mansion. The governor, upon learning the nature of the communication, sent at once for the pardon clerk and Shea's counsel, Galen R. Hitt. After a brief conference, the governor decided to grant a respite of four weeks, during which time counsel could take the proper means to bring the matter before the courts for a new trial. Mr. Hitt will go before the supreme court to-morrow morning and ask for a trial for Shea and the production in court of McGough.

NEW BOND ISSUE.

Secretary of the Treasury Carlisle Issues a Circular.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Speculation concerning the amount and character of the new bond issue was set at rest last night when Secretary Carlisle made public a circular on the subject. The loan will be a "popular" one, and the circular, which is dated Jan. 6, gives notice that the government will sell $100,000,000 thirty-year 4-per cent coupon or registered bonds dated Feb. 1, 1895, for which purchasers will be required to pay in gold coin or gold certificates. This is the first issue by the present administration of such a large amount of bonds at one time. The circular also contains an intimation of a possible further issue of bonds should the issue or sale of an additional or different form of bond for the maintenance of the gold reserve be authorized by the law before Feb. 5. It was almost midnight when Secretary Carlisle's circular was made public, too late an hour to obtain the opinions of public men on the action of the government or the prospect of the absorption of the bonds by the people. The fact that the bonds will be issued in sums of $50 and multiples thereof, and be payable in instalments is a feature which it is believed will make them regarded with popular favor. The main reason for dating the bonds a year back is said to be in order to give the public a better opportunity to judge their market value by comparing them with the gold fours issued at that time, so that their bids can be made to conform with the market value of those bonds on the first of February.

VICTORIOUS INSURGENTS.

They Are Sweeping Through Pinar del Rio.

Havana, Jan. 7.—The insurgents today passed into the province of Pinar del Rio and are now overrunning that province with fire and sword. The passage was effected near Batabano at Pozo Redondo, and Gomez burned the village of Gabriel on the way and partially destroyed the towns of Guira, Melena and of Alquizar. The work of destruction in Havana province has been as complete as was that in Matanzas, and the sugar lands of Pinar del Rio are fast being put into the same desolated condition. The whole island of Cuba outside of the city of Havana is now in the hands of the enemy. They have not annihilated the Spanish forces, nor have they routed the whole army in any single pitched battle, yet the situation is completely in their hands, and so completely have they outgeneraled the Spanish that, to all appearances, Campos' army might as well be in Spain for any check it puts upon the movements of Gomez's army. The latter's progress has been accompanied with continual accessions to his forces by volunteers, and he has captured enough horses, rifles and artillery to add immensely to the effective strength of his men. He has practically carried his base of operations with him, and has usually countermarched over a different route from that of his advance, apparently counting with confidence upon living upon the country as he went along. There is little doubt really felt here that he will get as much or more sympathy in Pinar del Rio than he did in Santa Clara and Matanzas, and the general fear here is now that, after sweeping over Pinar del Rio, he will come upon Havana from the west, co-operating in an attack with the forces of the insurgents which have been east of Havana for several days past. The advance guard of Gomez beyond Batabano has cut the line of telegraph and cable communication with the eastern part of the island, upon which Campos principally relied for directing his forces in Santiago de Cuba, Puerto Principe and Santa Clara.

TRAINMEN KILLED.

Fatal Result of a Blunder on an Ohio Road.

Chillicothe, Ohio, Jan. 7.—At 11 p. m. last night two freight trains stood on a switch at Schooley's Station, seven miles east of here. The first train pulled out, and the conductor, thinking that the second one would follow, left the switch open. Ten minutes later the east bound express came along at 40 miles an hour, and, running onto the switch, collided with the train standing there. Both trains were badly wrecked. Engineer Tom Michaels, of the express, had both legs and arms cut off, and died this morning at his home in this city. His fireman, Leon Mathers, was instantly killed. Engineer Fitzsimmons, of the freight, escaped without serious injuries, but his fireman, George Addis, and another fireman, J. H. Cox, were killed. Jesse King, the front end brakeman, was also killed, and Postal Clerks J. B. Edgington of Loveland and J. D. Murphy of Greenfield were badly injured. Conductor Tom Brown, of the express, had to walk two miles to telephone the news to this city. Conductor Hendershot, of the freight, is responsible for the disaster, as he left the switch open. The passengers in the express were badly shaken up, but none were seriously injured.

THAT BUCKET NOT FOR SALE.

Whitewash May Be Yet Used at Jamestown, N. D.

Jamestown, N. D., Jan. 7.—A sudden drop has taken place in the asylum investigating proceedings. Burke Corbet of Grand Forks came here on the 2d inst., to look over the field and arrange for the proposed thorough investigation, when suddenly typewritten notices were sent out to witnesses subpoenaed for the 7th containing the following startling information: "You will not be required to obey the subpoena commanding you to appear and testify," etc. These notices were all signed S. K. McGinnis. After the notices had been served, Mr. Langlie, the state examiner, appeared on the scene and denied having any knowledge of the service of notice for witnesses not to appear. Mr. Langlie also denies that he employed Mr. Corbet of Grand Forks to prosecute the case. A few new subpoenas were served to-day on business men of this city to appear and testify to dealings with them in the purchase of coal and groceries for the asylum. It goes without saying that the investigations into the rumors of immoral practices at the institution has been abandoned.

Jameson Not Shot.

London, Jan. 7.—It is reported that Hon. Cecil Rhodes, premier of Cape Colony, has resigned, but Gov. Sir Hercules Robinson has declined to accept the resignation. Colonial Secretary Chamberlain has telegraphed asking if it were true that Dr. Jameson was shot, adding that Mr. Rhodes had telegraphed a positive denial of the rumored gathering of a second force of the Chartered South Africa company's troops at Buluwayo. President Kruger has replied that he had given no orders to shoot freebooters who had been taken prisoners, but that they would be punished according to law.

Dr. Wood Dead.

Faribault, Minn., Jan. 7.—Dr. G. W. Wood, one of the best known physicians and surgeons of the state, died at his home in this city to-day of consumption, aged 53 years. The funeral will be held to-morrow (Tuesday). Dr. Wood was born in Frost Village, Canada, and graduated from the McGill Medical college. He came to Minnesota in 1869. He served one term as state senator and two as mayor of the city of Faribault.

Commander Drops Dead.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 7.—Commodore Lewis Kingsley, of the training ship Essex, which is lying off Yorktown, Va., dropped dead on board his vessel. Bicycler Saves a Train.

An instance where a wheelman has been able to avert a serious railroad accident is reported from Barcelona, Spain. On the road to Lerida the highway runs along the track for quite a distance, and a bicyclist who was out touring, noticed how the two last cars of a freight train broke loose on a steep grade, and began to run back with ominous rapidity. He hurried in the same direction along the road, and with great presence of mind, he announced the fact to the engineer of a train standing on the track, who at once started back to avoid getting the full force of the two cars; thus, what might have been a great disaster, was averted; still, the force of the collision was so great that one of the two freight cars was demolished and the front of the engine partly dismantled. Except for a severe shaking-up, no one was hurt on the train.

BREVITIES.

H. F. Ives is at Crookston this week on business.

Go to Johnson & Marshall's for lime cement, etc.

Miss Anna Abrahamson is visiting in the village this week.

Mrs. Carl Olson is visiting her son in the country this week.

Wm. Bloom, of Crookston, is doing business in town today.

W. C. Stranahan made a short trip to Thief River Falls last Friday.

W. F. Kelsey is doing some collecting in this vicinity this week.

Jas. Meehan of Thief River Falls, was in town on business today.

M. Burns, of Thief River Falls, was in town a short time today on business.

Miss Mary Kyle returned last Friday from a two weeks visit with relatives at Crookston.

Elmer Stranahan left last Monday for St. Paul after a two weeks visit to relatives in the village.

Prof O,Brien returned last Friday from Red Lake Falls where he had been spending the Holidays.

Oscar Olson came over from Fosston the latter part of last week and spent several days visiting his parents.

Miss Carrie Hoff spent a couple of days at Thief River Falls the latter part of last week visiting friends.

Last Saturday President Cleveland added another star to Old Glory by signing the proclamation admitting Utah to Statehood.

A detachment of the Salvation Army of Crookston will arrive next Monday and will hold a series of revival meetings the next two weeks.

The coldest weather so far this winter was experienced last Friday the thermometer registering 42 degrees below the goose egg.

The train today brought no empties to our elevators and as a result all of the houses were obliged to close their doors this afternoon being filled to the roof.

A number of the citizens of the village gave a pleasant surprise party to Miss Clara Holvorson at her fathers residence in the town of Rocksbury. An enjoyable time was reported by all who attended.

A large crowd turned out to the dance given for the benefit of Mrs. M. Handrickson last Wednesday evening. About $30 were cleared which together with $40 collected in the village will be applied to pay off the mortgage on her home.

J. L. Johnson, S. M. Dainard, H. E. Ives, Jas. Dainard, C. A. Brink and R. H. Aimer were summoned to appear before the grand jury Last Monday and give testimony in regard to saloons here keeping open on Sunday and after 11 o'clock evenings.

The Swedish Lutheran Social held last Friday evening was a social and financial success. The musical programme was excellently rendered and was enjoyed by all. The goods offered for sale by the ladies aid society were all sold at fair prices and after the auction refreshments were served. All attending report that they were well pleased with their evenings entertainment.

The young ladies of the village have determined to show the young men how things would be done if it were leap year all the time. They have secured Brinks Hall and hired good music and a first class caller and will give a leap year ball next Friday evening. The ladies will defray all expense and all that will be expected of the young men is that they stay at home evenings so that they may be found when wanted.

How often do you see a team standing out in the cold wind when the thermometer is down below zero? We see it every day. But where is the man that owns the team? Oh, he is toasting his shins by a warm stove enjoying a quiet smoke or a hot one. Many a good horse has been ruined in this way —Crookston Tribune.

Things have not been getting a bump on in district court matters, at least so far as can be seen today. The grand jury are investigating the St. Hilaire saloon matters and it is said they have extended to Thief River Falls also. If anything has been done, however it does not yet appear on the surface.—Crookston Tribune.

Yesterday the secretary of the treasury issued a call for a popular gold loan to the government of one hundred million dollars on bonds to run thirty years at four per cent interest. The call was anticipated as an announcement in the dispatches of Saturday and the responses have already commenced to come in from All day today telegrams have come in from banks and private individual offerings to take some of the bonds, and the indications are that a large portion of the loan will be made by the people of the United States within the next few days. The patriotism of the American people has been aroused and the result can be foretold.—Crookston Times.

Real estate taxes for 1894 not paid by the first Monday in January are listed as being delinquent and will be offered at public auction the sale to commence on the first Monday in May. The real and personal taxes for the year 1895 will also be due on the first Monday in January which date will fall on January 6th. The personal taxes for 1895 will become delinquent on March 1st, and the real estate taxes on June 1st next. In case of default of the former a ten per cent penalty will be added on March 1st and on and after April 1st the sheriff will be entrusted with the collection. The real estate taxes for 1865 will not become delinquent until June 1st, 1896 when a ten per cent penalty will be added.—Crookston Tribune.

The committee appointed by the county board to investigate the affairs at the office of the judge of probate have been diligently at work for the past few days, and now have their report ready to submit to the board. It is understood that the report will present quite a list of irregularitis in Judge Bensons office, and will recommend that the commissoners ask Gov Clough to investigate the affairs of the office. Probably in anticipation of this report it is said that Judge Benson stole a march on the commissioners by making the first complaint himself. He is reported to have already written the governor, making complaint against the commissioners for persecution and asking that they be removed.—Crookston Times.

The first annual meeting of the county board was the chief drawing card at the court house today. The new board organized by electing Anton Lindem chairman for the ensuing year. The board then adjourned until after dinner when Mr. Lindem announced the following standing committees,

Finance—Rhinehart, Kirsch, Norland.

Bonds—Kirsch, Oppegaard and Rhinehart.

Roads and Bridge—Norland, Oppegaard and Rhinehart.

Taxes—Kirsch, Rhinehart, Norland.

The bids for doing the county printing for the ensuing year were then opened. There were four bids. The papers represented being the, Tidende, Journal, Times and Tribune of Crookston, the McIntosh Times, Fertile Journal, Thief River Falls Press McIntosh Tribune St. Hilaire Spectator and Fisher Bulletin. The combination bid of the McIntosh Times, St. Hilaire Spectator, Fisher Bulletin and Crookston Times were awarded the contract and all official notices of the county ordered published in these papers. All the commissioners voted in favor of awarding the contract to these papers except Commissioner Rhinehart who voted to have the contract awarded to W A. Hammond on the ground that he was a republican and the commissioner would not vote to give the printing to a combination of democratic and populist papers.

The next matter of interest was the election of a janitor at the court house for the ensuing year. The vote was by ballot and there was a deadlock during a large number of ballots, But the choice finally fell upon C. Shefstad he being given three votes of the five votes cast. But a motion to reconsider carried and when the next vote was taken G. W. Engstram was given the place.—Crookston Times.

Close competition breeds impetuosity, and in our earnest pushing for trade it often happens that we mark goods away down just for the fun of Somebody has exclaimed: "Oh, the impetuosity of the idiocy of the tumultuous idiot!" This remark will never apply to you if in your rush for bargains you get into the right store, which of course is ours.

HAS A FROG A SOUL?

Huxley's Paper on the Question and What Its Object Was.

I shall never forget the dismay with which many of us heard Huxley's paper on the question, "Has the frog a soul, and of what nature is that soul, supposing it to exist?"

I am sure that he must have written it with an ironic smile, foreseeing how he would puzzle most of his hearers with his biological statements. He pointed out that if the frog has a soul at all it must have two souls, for if the spinal cord is divided both the divided parts manifest separately precisely the same kind of purposive action, though they do not co-operate. "The rational principles are specially present in each, because these are nothing else than the functions of the gray matter, and the gray matter in each continues to exert its inherent powers. The separated head and trunk may be sent a hundred miles in opposite directions, and at the end of the journey each will be as purposive in its actions as before."

Of course a great many of his hearers were ignorant of the physiological facts which he narrated, and many of those who were not entirely ignorant of them had never considered them in relation to the problems he attacked, as to whether, for instance, a human being with his spine broken has or has not a separate reason or will in those lower limbs which manifest every sign of sensation, without the smallest consciousness in the man himself that he has suffered what he appears to observers to suffer if these lower limbs are irritated or tickled.

I need hardly say that the discussion on this paper was not very "nutritive." The Metaphysical society can hardly be said to have had a mind of its own on the question whether a frog has a soul or not. And I do not suppose that Professor Huxley himself had any distinct opinion on it. He certainly held that a great part of the organization of every living being is strictly that of an automaton without a conscious mind, and I believe he thought it probable that such creatures as frogs, even when they give signs of pain, are not always suffering, since they give the same signs of pain as men give under conditions when the men, if questioned, will affirm that they have not suffered at all. But the real object of Huxley's paper was to bewilder, and with the greater part of the Metaphysical society he certainly succeeded, all the more, perhaps, that he himself was very uncertain as to what the legitimate inference as to the consciousness of the frog ought to be.—Richard H. Hutton in Forum.

The Italian Cibesco.

The cibesco's duties were many and arduous. He was expected to attend his lady's loves and bring her the day's news; to keep an eye upon her servants; to accompany her to the church, to the ballroom, to the theater and to carry her prayer book, fan or scent bottle, as the case might be. Meanwhile his own wife would be receiving all these attentions from some other lady's husband, and no one thought a whit the worse of any of the three parties to the arrangement. Society was scandalized only when the wife proved false to the lover.

Many writers, Dr. Johnson's Italian friend Barotti among them, have labored to prove that the custom was perfectly innocent, and innocent in one narrow sense it may have been. Nevertheless sturdy John Bull shakes his head at this systematic philandering and regards it as anything but harmless, even if technically innocent. And as philosophy also shakes her grave pate at the whole business and the social system out of which it grew the reader will probably judge that John Bull, for once, at least, is perfectly right.—Macmillan's Magazine.

Ignatius Donnelly.

Ignatius Donnelly has resigned the presidency of the State Farmers' Alliance of Minnesota. Mr. Donnelly says:

I feel I have too much to do, and that the work should go into more youthful and energetic hands. I have done my part. I desire for the rest of my life to devote myself to literary work and to writing for the columns of The Representative. God seems to have decreed that I should never possess any high position from which I could carry out my ideas for the good of the human family. Even the privilege of working for reform in the narrow field of the legislature of the state is denied me. With a brain busy with schemes for the welfare of men and a heart full of benevolent impulses, I am left as utterly powerless as if I had been transferred bodily to the remotest wilds of Alaska. Corporate power has built a wall of fire around me through which I cannot pass. But at least, through the columns of The Representative, I can reach out and influence the minds of men in this state, as through my books I have been able to rouse millions all over the world from their torpor. And so when I pass the dark gates I shall not, I trust, go with hands altogether empty.

BURIAL ALIVE.

Popular Fear of It and Devices to Prevent Its Occurrence.

"When once the dread of being buried alive takes hold of a man he usually becomes a maniac on the subject. The terror of the awful possibility of the thing seems to become a sort of second nature to him, and he spends the rest of his life in devising ways and means to prevent such a calamity happening to himself or to other persons."

The speaker was a man connected with one of Chicago's largest cemeteries, and the incident which brought out the remark was a remarkable one. A man in walking through the cemetery had seen a grave which was not filled in, although the coffin was deposited in it. Instead of the earth being thrown in the grave was covered with boards. On these boards were the flowers that had been used at the funeral. The men connected with the cemetery seemed disinclined to talk about the incident, but finally one was found who was willing to tell what it meant.

"There is a woman in that grave," he said. "Her husband is a prominent Chicagoan and is what might be called a crank on the subject of being buried alive. When his wife died, he delayed the funeral as long as possible, but even then the idea that his wife might yet be alive seemed to haunt him. At his request tests were applied, and he was assured there was no possibility of any spark of life remaining. But he had read of cases where even the doctors had been mistaken, and he resolved to take no chances. So he made arrangements with the cemetery management to allow the grave of his wife to remain open a certain length of time. He comes here every day, but this morning he said that the grave could be filled in tomorrow."

Then the man talked of some of the schemes and ideas that possess the minds of some men and women who are filled with the dread of being buried alive or of fearing that some of their friends might meet such a horrible fate. He told of some of the devices that have been invented with this motive in view and of the time spent by managers of cemeteries in listening to the inventors.

"One man," he said, "has a scheme by which he would fix a wire in the coffin of a person when it was buried. This wire is to be carried into the office of the cemetery, and the thing is to be arranged so that with the slightest movement in the coffin an alarm will be set off in the office or wherever the wire leads. Then the idea is for all haste to be made in disinterring the coffin and if possible save a life.

"Another man would place chloroform in the coffins of all persons. Then if the occupant should happen to be alive and should make the least movement the chloroform would be released in such a way as to quickly end the matter and prevent the unlucky victim from enduring any of the horrors of the situation. In this case there is no way of knowing whether the person was alive or dead when buried.

"Another way to insure death is by means of the old dagger plan. Like the chloroform idea, it merely provides for death in case it has not taken place before burial. This dagger idea is from the Italian, and the plan of it is that as soon as a certain weight of earth rests on the coffin lid a powerful spring is released which in its turn releases a dagger so placed that it will penetrate the heart of the person in the coffin. This idea has been used for years in some parts of Italy, but I have never heard of any one placing such a contrivance in a coffin in Chicago, although of course it could be done, and nobody but those who did it would be the wiser. Sensible people, however, when in doubt about death having taken place will have the coffin placed in the vault, and then it can be watched daily until there is no doubt as to dissolution."—Chicago Tribune.

We Favor Europe.

"I have a new question which I ask nine out of ten of my friends," said United States Marshal John Henry McCarty yesterday, "and I find that less than 1 per cent answer it in the affirmative."

"What's the question?" queried United States District Attorney Macfarlane.

"Have you ever climbed to the top of the statue of Liberty?" replied the little marshal.

"No," returned Mr. Macfarlane, "and I never will."

"That's the answer I usually get," rejoined Mr. McCarty. "If the statue of Liberty was located in Europe, what a scramble Americans would make to climb up to the top of her light shedding torch!"—New York Mail and Express.

An Old Lady's Advice.

The following advice, given to a young married woman who was visited by another older and more experienced one, may be helpful to some of our readers:

When the visitor rose to go the hostess came with her to the door, and out upon the pleasant piazza, which, however, looked a little dusty in the corners.

"Oh, dear!" said the young wife, "how provoking the servants are! I told Mary to sweep the piazza thoroughly, and now look how dusty it is."

"Grace," said the older woman, looking into the disturbed young face with kindly humorous eyes, "I am an old housekeeper. Let me give you a bit of advice. Never direct people's attention to defects. Unless you do so they will rarely see them.

"Now, if I had been in your place and noticed the dirt, I should have said, 'How blue the sky is!' or 'How beautiful the clouds are!' or 'How bracing the air is!' Then I should have looked up at that as I spoke, and should have gotten you safely down the steps, and out of sight without you seeing the dust."—Household.

comes to stay

There is more than one food which will cause the body to increase in weight. A free supply of sugar will do this; so will the starchy foods; cream, and some other fats. But to become fleshy, and yet remain in poor health, is not what you want. Cod-liver oil increases the weight because it is a fat-producing food. But it does far more than this. It alters, or changes, the processes of nutrition, restoring the normal functions of the various organs and tissues.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with hypophosphites, is pure cod-liver in a digested condition. So that, when a person gains in weight from taking Scott's Emulsion, it is because of two things: First, the oil has acted as a fat-producing food, and, second, it has restored to the body a healthy condition. Such an improvement is permanent: it comes to stay.

SCOTT'S EMULSION has been endorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. (Ask your doctor.) This is because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

When You Are a Guest.

In an article on "Some Social Graces," Ruth Ashmore in January Ladies' Home Journal writes of the guest and host, etiquette of invitations, of the table, wedding customs and various minor social points. To the woman who is the gest at a friend's home she thus advises: "If your visit is to be one of several days or weeks you must make your hostess, if she has not been wise enough to state it in her invitation, understand in your answer not only exactly what time and hour when you will arrive, but exactly the day and hour when you will leave, and you will show great wisdom if, no matter how much you are enjoying yourself, you refuse to prolong your visit. During your stay you must find everything pleasant that your hostess arranges for you. Ask no special service of a servant. You must neither expect nor ask that your laundry be done in the house, and you must take great care not to leave the dainty toilet table or the pretty room in disorder. After your return to your home you should write a letter to the lady you have been visiting, thanking her for all the kindness she has shown you, and sending your regards to the members of her household."

The T. M. Roberts Supply House of Minneapolis had an enormous holiday trade. Over 100 employes worked night and day handling the immense volume of business. Unfortunately some of the oldest and best employes were taken suddenly ill of typhoid fever, and, as a result, errors and delays have occurred. They are now in shape, however, to handle orders promptly and satisfactorily, and any errors that are made will be corrected.

A Simple Dancing Class.

A model little dancing class of a modest kind has been formed by some young people who are to meet once in two weeks, dance until 10 o'clock, wear little gowns with white aprons, and then have very simple refreshments. MODERN LOCHINVAR.

By Mrs. M. L. Rayne.

A PECULIAR feature of the season of romantic youth is that known as the elopement period, when Young Lochinvar has reached the conclusion that he has more right to the girl of his heart than her father, mother, brothers, sisters and all other relatives combined. He does not stop to analyze feelings or motives, so does not make the discovery that his conduct is the result of a lapse into savagery, his earlier ancestors having doubtless been barbarians, who snatched their savage brides from the family, but in obeyance of the ancient marriage customs. No, our modern Lochinvar imagines himself a valiant knight who hurries to save his beloved lady from the cruel restrictions of doting parents, who know that her esquire has not a flat to his name, or enough coin of the realm to sustain life in two persons with average appetites. They ask him to wait, but he, ignoring the poetical truth that all things come to him who waits, does not have patience to endure the long result of time. "This is a matter," he says in that manly, resolute way his sweetheart admires so much, "with which parents have nothing whatever to do;" and with the same weapon attributed to Sampson, he suggests a rope ladder, a moonless night, a fleet horse which may belong to his prospective father-in-law, and a rapid drive in the direction of a minister (creeds do not form an important element in an elopement); then the two can defy any law of separation—for the present.

Gilbert Harding and Gussie Marston were lovers, and they had planned an elopement.

"He was a squire of high degree,
She was a lady fair to see."

This is a trifle overdrawn, but it applies to their case better than any other two lines in poetical literature. He was really a clerk in a haberdashery store, and she had just been graduated in a sweet gown trimmed with real lace. She knew absolutely nothing of anything but school lore, and was as helpless and ignorant as a girl usually is who influences a young man to begin his career by running away with her. He was quite sure; however, that he knew enough for two, and what was a man good for anyway, if he couldn't face the world and fight its battles for the girl he loved? So the time was set for the elopement, the stony-hearted parents refusing to consider his suit, because, forsooth, he was poor!

But Gussie loved him all the better for his poverty. She had heard it said that her father was poor when he married her mother, and they had been happy and prospered. She did not reflect that young people of to-day want to begin life where their parents left off.

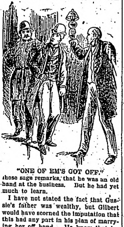
It was the night of the elopement. There was no moon and the electric lights were dim and flickering. Gilbert had engaged the services of a best man—his chum, Bob Kennedy, who was also a friend of Gussie's and who was to pilot Gilbert through the wing of the house where Gussie was to meet them, when the two would escape by a side door.

The girl had taken her favorite brother Tom into her confidence, but Gilbert did not know this. Tom was to entertain the old folks and keep them in the family sitting room until after nine, the hour which was set for the elopement.

"The great mistake that people make when they elope," said Gilbert, "is in setting the hour too late, when the least sound attracts attention to them."

It might have been supposed from those sage remarks, that he was an old hand at the business. But he had yet much to learn.



"ONE OF EM'S GOT OFF."

I have not stated the fact that Gussie's father was wealthy, but Gilbert would have scorned the imputation that this had any part in his plan of marrying her off hand. He knew that instead of the paternal benediction of the novel, "bless you, my children; bless you!" he might receive the paternal taboo, and be left to love, ashes and a crust in a cottage. But he was willing, brave boy, to risk it.

An open window in an unused and unlighted wing of the building is always a suspicious incident. A policeman was regarding this one from a convenient tree on the opposite side of the street; but love is blind, so Gilbert did not see him. He went through the window with the agility of a fireman.

"H-i-s-t!" came from within.

"W-h-i-st!"

These were the pass words.

"Is it you?"

"Yes—it's me," was the hasty and ungrammatical reply.

"Where's Gussie?"

"Gussie who?"

This time the voice was a growl. Gilbert saw the form of a man, but it did not resemble his friend Bob.

"What will we carry the swag in?" asked the voice with a growl.

Good heavens! a burglar! Gilbert felt that his only safety lay in keeping up the delusion of the other that he was a pal—he must get out and find Gussie.

"Give it to me," he said in a disguised tone, as rough as he dared make it.

"Stow that, pard, I ain't goin' to run no risk of that sort—I've got the silver, but the jewelry—"

Flash went a pistol, and the report had scarcely ceased when Gilbert's hands were pinioned, and the policeman was calling for help. The real burglar had made a dash for liberty, and escaped through the window.

"W-w-h-a-t does this mean?" demanded old man Marston, as, purple with rage and excitement, he came hurrying in with a light.

"One of em's got off," said the policeman, "but here's t'other rascal safe enough," and he bowed up the sickly features of Gilbert Harding, who was ready to faint, but made a bluff to meet Gussie's father.

"Ha, ha, Mr. Marston; quite a joke, taking me for a burglar; ha! ha!"

"It doesn't look very much like a joke to me, young man," said the father sternly; "what were you doing entering my house feloniously in the night?"

Sure enough it didn't look much like a joke now that he saw it on both sides. Where was Bob Kennedy, that he did not step forward to help his friend out? Where was Gussie? Where was his own vaunted courage? He dared not look Gussie's father in the face, and say: "I came to steal your daughter."

"Will you kindly explain to the policeman that you know me, sir, and that I am not a burglar?" he managed to say at last.

"I know you, certainly," croaked the old man, "but if you are not a burglar what are you doing with my family silver piled up there? You can explain the matter in court. Officer, do your duty. Take this man to the station!"

Did Gilbert hear aright? He had not time to discuss the matter, or indeed to say another word. Some philosopher has remarked quaintly that when a man begins to go down hill, it seems as if all creation was greased for the occasion. So the way for the departure of the policeman and his prisoner was made very expeditious. The other members of the family made themselves invisible, so there was no one to whom he could appeal, and doors opened and shut like magic for them to pass through. And it seemed no time at all before the unhappy lover was locked in a cell at the police station.

But he did not languish there all night. Bob Kennedy, who had been late in keeping the appointment, appeared to bail him out, and after rousing several officials—each of whom was the wrong one—from their beds, he rescued his friend, and then consoled him with a cold bottle and a hot bird in the early morning hours.

He took Bob's advice to leave town on a business tour and to remain until such time as Father Marston's wrath had cooled. There was no notice of the burglary or his arrest in the newspapers, and he left it to Bob to explain away any lingering suspicion against him.

He was to say that Gilbert saw the open window, and followed the burglar to intercept him, or any other harmless untruth that seemed to fit in.

Bob did his part so well that before Gilbert's return he read in the society columns an announcement of that faithless friend's engagement to the versatile Gussie. And then it dawned upon him that there had been no burglar as well as no elopement. And he immediately wrote himself down a name of three letters.

Love and Religion.

Here is an interesting story of the effect of Christianity upon the love-making of Ceylon. I find it in The Missionary Review of the World: "It is the custom among the Singhalese," writes a missionary of Ceylon, "to receive a dowry with the bride; and this varies from 50 rupees to 20,000 rupees. A dowerless girl has not much chance nowadays of getting married. However, there are exceptions. A young Christian man fell in love with a very poor, fatherless girl, who at the time was also a Buddhist. He wished to marry her, but would not do so until she became a Christian. He put her under the care of a catechist and his wife, who taught her, and he paid for her board and lodging. After a few months she was baptized, and a month later married, the bridegroom paying for her wedding attire."

ALASKA BOUNDARY

AN INTERVIEW WITH SENATOR DAVIS ON THE DISPUTE.

He Declares That the Contention of the United States Is So Manifestly Sound That It Is Useless to Arbitrate—England Is Anxious to Secure a Large Amount of Very Valuable Land.

Washington, Jan. 14.—Senator Davis, of Minnesota, of the committee on foreign relations, has been giving considerable attention to the Alaskan boundary dispute. He has found nothing in his investigations which would cause him to change the lines which have always been understood as the boundary, and upon what both countries have been proceeding for many years. He says that the only question in dispute is whether the ten marine leagues from the ocean meant from the main land or from the adjacent islands.

Mr. Davis says that this does not event present a case for arbitration, because it is manifestly plain that the shore of the main land of the continent is the basis of the true line. It is also evident from the selection of the mountain range as a line that the men who drew the boundary agreement meant that the line should be ten leagues from the ocean where it touched the main land. Islands, he says, always go with the shore, and when a question arises as to whether an island, no matter at what time settled or claimed, belongs to one country or another, it goes always to the country owning the main land, if the main land is adjacent. So it is with the islands of Alaska. It became the property of Russia, because Russia owned the main land of the shore, and became the property of the United States when Alaska was sold to this country.

The desire of Great Britain for a portion of the Alaskan coast is plainly apparent, declares Senator Davis, when it is considered that there is a vast country in the Northwest Territory which can reach the seaboard only through a pass in the North Rocky mountains, and thence across the strip of land owned by the United States. East of the Rocky mountains and east of the Alaskan coast is a country of Almost Inestimable Value, known as the Peace River country. There may be 100,000,000 acres of fine tillable or pastural ground there. It has the benefit of the warm currents from the Pacific, which makes it a milder climate than in those portions of the Northwest Territory still farther east. It is desired by Great Britain to open up this great wheat and stock producing country, and secure a short route to the sea. A branch of the Canadian Pacific road could be built through this Peace River region, and by a pass through the mountains to the seacoast without much trouble and by a much shorter haul than by railroads further south. This would give the Canadian Pacific another Western terminus, would build up a British city right upon the flank of the Alaskan position of the United States, and there would be another great naval station and a military post commanding our Alaskan territory, and the protection which the Alaskan coast now gives to this country would be largely nullified. The object of Great Britain is quite plain. Upon the great fertile lands to be opened by building a road to the coast through the Peace River region there would be vast fields of cereals competing with the grains raised in our states along our northern border. Senator Davis does not think this government will ever seriously consider the question of arbitrating the Alaskan boundary.

VENEZUELAN COMMISSION.

It Meets Again and Gets Up Its Own Newspaper Report.

Washington, Jan. 14.—The Venezuelan commission resumed its sessions at the diplomatic room of the state department, the session lasting from 10:30 to 3:30. When the meeting was adjourned, the following statement of the proceedings was made public:

"The commission met at 10:30, all members being present. The fourth floor of the Baltimore Sun building was selected for offices. The commission will meet daily at No. 1412 Massachusetts avenue northwest (the residence of Justice Brewer) until such offices are fitted up. Dr. Gilman presented to the commission a sketch of a preliminary physical map of the disputed territory. The commission adjourned without having selected a secretary or other officers, but carefully examined the claims of the several applicants."

Crossed the Big Bridge.

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 14.—Passengers arriving from Cuba to-day report that Roloff's band has passed over Puentes Grande (the big bridge near Havana). The Spaniards had stretched heavy chains across the bridge to prevent the passage of cavalry. This did not deter the insurgents. The Havana theaters have suspended, and the Italial Opera company, which has just arrived, will not play. The produce exchange is forming five battalions for the defense of the city. A double guard now surrounds all the government buildings.

DIED ON A BLUFF.

Terrible Suffering of a Shipwrecked Crew.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 14.—Ten days of suffering from cold and privation on a rocky bluff, during which time seven of the crew, including the captain and mate, met their death, the other mate and seamen meeting with terrible accidents, tells the tale of the wrecking of the big four-masted English ship Jeanette Cowan on Vancouver Island, otherwise known as the Boneyard of the Pacific ocean. This frightful news was brought to this city this afternoon by a tug which had but a few hours before landed 14 members of the ill-fated crew at Port Townsend. The officers of the tug tell a most harrowing story of the wreck and of the men and of its surroundings as found by them. The vessel struck New Year's day. Capt. Thompson died several days after the ship struck the reef, and the cook and a seaman and the man who ran the donkey engine died the following day, the latter becoming violently insane. The other three men who lost their lives were the second mate and two apprentices. Nine members of the crew were left on the shore in a cabin about a mile north of the place where the ship went on the reef.

The tug first sighted the wrecked ship on Saturday afternoon. No sign of the crew could be seen on the shore. The sea was running pretty high, but tw boats were lowered and a start made for the ship, which was standing up majestically, her lower topsail set and straight on to the westward. The stern was high in the air and the rudder, broken square in two. A portion of the crew could be seen On Top of a High Bluff, on which a tent had been pitched. A sight met the gaze of the rescuers that will not be forgotten for years to come. Seated about a fire were 13 men, all wearing an expression of utter hopelessness and misery. First-Mate Charles Legall, who was lashed to a chair, suffering from a fractured leg, told Mate Hall, of the tug Tyee, the story of the disaster. He said the Cowan came from Cape Town, South Africa, for Royal Roads, B. C., and was 108 days out when she reached Cape Flattery on Dec. 19. There was a terrible storm off the cape, and the vessel stood off two days before trying to come in. Then she was driven quickly t the northward by a strong southwest wind, and sought shelter in the treacherous waters of Barclay Sound to avoid being driven ashore on some more exposed point. The Sound afforded but little shelter, and she was driven on the rocks. This was at 2 o'clock on the morning of Dec. 31, and a snow storm was coming on. The ship seemed to be breaking in two, and it was decided to leave her at once, and with the aid of a line made fast ashore the entire crew was taken off. Capt. Thompson died three days before the arrival of the Tyee, from exposure, and the three others on the next day from the same cause. The second mate and two apprentice boys met their death while trying to make land in a small boat the night the ship struck.

NEARLY A HOLOCAUST.

Fire in Banker Keough's House at Sturgeon Bay, Wis.

Sturgeon Bay, Wis., Jan. 14.—Fire in the residence of Banker James Keough, at an early hour this morning, came near resulting in a terrible holocaust, and, as it was, four members of the family and the domestic were badly burned and one severely cut with glass. Mr. Keough's burns are of a very serious nature. Mrs. Keough was sick in bed, and the smoke and burns she received, it is feared, will cause her death. All the members of the family were sound asleep, with the exception of the two eldest girls, who were just returning from a party when the lamp in the sitting room exploded, filling the room almost instantly with burning oil. Mr. Keough saved four children by heroic dashes through the flames. Up stairs were two daughters. When awakened the down stairs part of the house was ablaze, but one rushed down and outdoors, receiving only slight injuries. The other feared the result, and broke the window, being badly cut. By this time the young men outside formed a human ladder, three high, by standing on each other's shoulders, and were enabled to reach the distracted girl, who was also cut about the body in getting out, being clad only in her night dress.

Wisconsin's Celebration.

Milwaukee, Jan. 14.—Between 400 and 500 representative Wisconsin men will attend a conference in this city this week to discuss the question of celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the admission of the state into the Union with a big industrial exposition in 1898. The list of delegates includes many commissioners elected by county bords, mayors of cities, presidents of state agricultural, industrial, commercial and educational associations, and of similar local organizations.

Masked Men in Business.

Fort Scott, Jan. 14.—Two masked men early this morning held up G. S. Knox, the night agent of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas in this city, together with two passengers, J. C. Kinney of Harwood, Mo., and Carl Fortnler of Olathe, Kan. After securing what jewelry and cash they had, one of the robbers covered the three men with two revolvers while the other robbed the company's safe. The agent says only $34 was taken from the safe and a like amount from the men.

Charged With Forgery.

Minneapolis, Jan. 14.—Andrew J. Bay, a man quite well known in real estate circles, was arraigned in the district court to-day on a charge of forgery in the first degree. He pleaded not guilty, and bond was fixed at $1,000, with the trial set for Feb. 3, because of the probable failure to secure bail.

Gen. Harrison in New York.

New York, Jan. 14.—Ex-President Benjamin Harrison passed the day very quietly at the Fifth Avenue hotel. He had no visitors. During the forenoon Gen. Harrison called upon his daughter, Mrs. McKee.

WAR TALK WANES

ENGLAND AND GERMANY WILL NOT HAVE A FIGHT.

While the Strained Relations Have Not Disappeared, They Are Fast Receding—It Is Now Feared That the Trouble Over Transvaal Will Some Time Cause a General War in Europe.

(Copyrighted, 1896, by the Associated Press.)

London, Jan. 14.—Interest in the Transvaal question in its immediate bearings has revived to some extent, while the incidental straining of relations between Great Britain and Germany, which so completely placed the Boers in the background of the picture for a time, has in its turn receded, but by no means disappeared. There is little apprehension of war with Germany over the present complications at least, and the British public has a reassuring sense that if there is to be a war, England is right ready for it. The prompt and efficient measures of the naval authorities, and the formidable show of strength that is the result, give John Bull a feeling of confidence. There are no further explicit announcements of movements looking to an alliance of the powers against England to-day. Nevertheless, it is keenly perceived by the public that the sentiment displayed by the German government has a far wider bearing than the present dispute in the Transvaal, and there are visions of future complications which may involve the whole of Europe.

A dispatch from Johannesburg, in the Transvaal, dated the 10th, says that it is reported from Pretoria that Dr. Jameson and other officials have been started for Natal, where they will be handed over to British authorities, to be tried under the laws making it a punishable offense to prepare a warlike demonstration against a friendly state. According to this dispatch, several further arrests have occurred at Johannesburg. Seventy warrants have been issued and all passports have been stopped. Business is stagnant in consequence of the existing condition of affairs.

A Cape Town dispatch says: "A proclamation issued by Sir Hercules Robinson, governor of Cape Colony, removes Dr. Jameson from the position of administrator of Mashonaland. He is replaced by Mr. F. J. Newton, secretary of the British colony of Bechuanaland.

Quieting Down in Germany.

(Copyright, 1896, by Associated Press.)

Berlin, Jan. 14.—There is distinctly less stress of feeling here to-day in regard to the international complication growing out of the Transvaal crisis, and the German press, as a rule, devotes less space to it than for some time. The tone of the comment of the newspapers, which means so much in this land of press censorship and inspired expressions in newspapers, is rather more peaceable, and there is less talk of active hostilities and more hope expressed of an unarmed settlement of the question at issue. Expressions of irritation at the British government and of rancor against the English people are still more or less bitter, however.

Jameson Will Be Transported.

Pretoria, Transvaal, Jan. 14.—The rank and file of the prisoners who composed Dr. Jameson's raiding party have started for Natal. Dr. Jameson and his officers remain here, but it is expected they will leave shortly for deportation to England. A large safe which was consigned to one Farrar, one of the imprisoned Rand leaders, was opened by the customs officers, and was found to contain 100 revolvers and 7,000 rounds of cartridges.

The passport restrictions which were imposed during the crisis have been removed and furthermore commanderings have been stopped. But the burghers are already under arms, and have been ordered to remain in the vicinity of Johannesburg. Dr. Jameson and his officers are still at Pretoria, where Sir Walter Hely-Hutchinson, governor of Natal, has arrived. The high court has placed an injunction upon all the bank balances and other property belonging to those arrested for complicity in the revolution.

Thompson Recivers.

St. Paul, Jan. 14.—Charles Thompson has so far recovered from the bullet wound received the night of Dec. 27 that he is able to leave the house. He walked out for the first time yesterday, and seemed none the worse for the exercis. Strangely enough the first place that he went was to church. He was present at the afternoon service at the Gospel Tabernacle on Market street, across from Rice Park. Mrs. Thompson accompanied her husband. Rev. Thomas C. Horton, the pastor of the Market Street church, has taken a great interest in Thompson's case. He believes that the man was innocent of any attempted crime at the time of the shooting. It is said that he credits Thompson's own story.

Race War in Oklahoma.

Perry, Okla., Jan. 14.—A climax is expected here to-morrow in the fight that has been raging for months between the whites and negroes over the school question. After the recent decision of the supreme court, which declared that the schools must be open to the children of all races and color, the school board voted to suspend all schools indefinitely. The negroes very promptly secured a writ of mandamus ordering a reopening of the schools. To-morrow the schools will contain both whites and blacks; and to-day there are all kinds of rumors of impending trouble.

Fell Between Cars.

St. James, Minn., Jan. 14.—Oscar Alling, a brakeman on the Omaha road, fell between the cars while passing over the train near Lake Crystal, and was instantly killed. He was single, and had no known relatives in this country.

Gen. Francis C. Barlow, a former attorney general of New York state and widely known lawyer, died yesterday, aged 61 years. His death was attributed to the effects of grip, contracted a year ago.

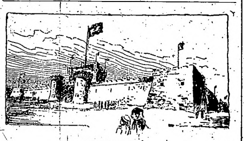
ST. PAUL'S CARNIVAL.

An Excellent Programme Arranged for Carnival Week.

Fort Karnival, the beautiful palace of pleasure now being erected in St. Paul as the amphitheater in which to hold the carnival of winter sports, is to be 660 feet long by 300 feet wide. It will be built of rough ice, and the walls will be fifteen feet high at the lowest point. From that they will range up to thirty-five feet, and the main tower will loom up grandly above the white structure. Within the fort proper will be located two toboggan slides, each 200 yards in length and running in opposite directions. This will obviate the necessity of a long and tiresome walk back after riding down, as was the case formerly. Now the pleasure-seeking—and toboggan-riding is an exquisite pleasure, under safe conditions, such as will prevail in Fort Karnival—simply slides west on one of the "chutes," then gets into the other one and returns to the starting point.

A coasting slide for boys is also provided that will be under the eye of a competent manager. It is so arranged that the little fellows cannot get hurt, nor get in the way of tobogganers or spectators.

An old-fashioned block house is being erected within the ice fort, to accommodate the horde of workingmen engaged in preparing the pyrotechnic displays, which will be especially gorgeous this year. The famous Pain's Fireworks company has sent a crew of experts to make the special pieces right on the ground. St. Paul's carnivals have become noted for the displays of fireworks made in the bombardments; and this year the directors promise something that will surpass even the best of former years. A great many new set pieces will be featured on the night when the stormings occur and every member of the many uniformed clubs will be liberally supplied with hand fireworks. These, when directed to one point from thousands of individual hands, will produce an effect which must be seen to be appreciated. Some of the fireworks will be visible for many miles from St. Paul and some of the bombs can be heard for fifteen miles. That these should be perfectly harmless indicates the wonderful progress made in the pyrotechnic line within the past five years. On the last night the block house will be destroyed.



FORT KARNIVAL.

Adjoining Fort Karnival, and in reality part of it, is Aurora Skating rink, 600 feet long and 300 feet wide. It is here that the national amateur championship races will be held, beginning on Monday, Jan. 27 and continuing three days. A track has been specially built for these races, six laps to the mile, and besides this there are rinks for general skaters and for the curlers. These rinks are superior to any ever made in Minnesota before, and they are to be so regulated that strangers can secure skates and feel as much at home as the St. Paul skaters.

The St. Paul carnival opens Tuesday, Jan. 21, and continues until Jan. 30, inclusive. The complete programme is here given, so far as made up to date:

Tuesday, Jan. 21, 10 a. m.—Arrival of Indians. Escort to Fort Karnival by detail of carnival clubs. Reception of visitors. At 2 p. m.: Opening of skating rink. Opening of curling bonspiel. Testing the Efficiency of a Motorman.

Many street railway companies are alive to the fact that the motorman is one of the most important factors in the street car service, and rewards of various kinds are now being offered for motormen who have run their cars on schedule for a certain length of time without an accident. Another point from which the railway companies are approaching the question of the ideal motorman is the matter of economy in the consmption of motive power of the car. It is a well known fact that two motormen can take the same equipment over the same route in the same time and yet use vastly different amounts of power. This suggests a rigorous mathematical method of fixing the value of a motorman. All that is necessary is to let him run a given car, loaded up to standard weight, over a given track in an exact prearranged time, making a definite number of intermediate stoppages. An electric meter in the car would give the motorman's figures of merit; which would, of course, be the reciprocal of the number recorded by the meter. This reciprocal should be indicated on his certificate, and his wages might be regulated accordingly.

$400 IN PRIZES ON OATS AND CORN.

Last year we offered $200 for the biggest yield on oats. 209 bushels Silver Mine Oats won the prize. This year we offer $200 more on oats, $100 on Silver King Barley, a barley yielding in 1895 116 bushels per acre, and $100 on Golden Triumph Yellow Dent Corn, the corn of your dreams!

What's Teosinte and Sand Vetch and Sacaline and Lathyrus and Giant Spurry and Giant Incarnate Clover and lots of such things? They'll make you rich if you plant a plenty. Catalogue tells you!

If you will cut this out and send it with 10c. postage to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., you will get free 10 grasses and grains, including above oats, barley, corn and their mammoth catalogue. Catalogue alone 5c.

Pasteur's Debt to Women.

Pasteur was one of the great men who attributed his success partly to his wife. When he was investigating the silk-worm epidemic of 1849, Mme. Pasteur and her daughter were his devoted helpmates, giving up pleasures, and sometimes duties, to watch the growth of the little insect and examine the condition of the tiny egg. It was work never before undertaken by women. The greatest patience and care were required to select and isolate the uncontaminated eggs. Pasteur in his private life would often refer to his wife and daughter as sharing the honor of the great discovery and vast labor, which restored wealth to an almost ruined country and joy to a despairing people.

Broke the Tobacco Trust.

St. Louis, Mo., (Special).—Col. William A. Kirchoff, general western manager of the American Tobacco company, has startled his numerous friends by stopping the use of tobacco. For years he has smoked twenty strong cigars daily and a less quantity would leave him nervous and ill. The habit was undermining his health, and he tried to quit, but could not until he took No-To-Bac, the medical miracle that has cured so many thousands of tobacco-users. Col. Kirchoff's craving for tobacco has entirely gone, and he feels better than ever before. He is a great No-To-Bac enthusiast now. Over 300,000 bad tobacco-users have been cured by No-To-Bac, and the loss to tobacco manufacturers is easily over $1,000,000 a year.

It is claimed that a man standing at one end of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado shouted the name of "Bob," which was distinctly audible at the further end, a distance of thirteen miles.

Agents wanted to sell Underwriters Fire Extinguisher. Exclusive territory. Good profits. R. E. Rider, Gilfillan Blk., St. Paul.

The celebration of Christmas as a special festival is said to have begun in the first century, and during the life of the Apostle John one tradition of the church accredits him with inaugurating the custom.

WORK OF CONGRESS

Proceedings in the Senate and House of Representatives.

Washington, Jan. 8.—The session of the house to-day was exceeding brief. Mr. Broderick (Rep., Kan.) preferred a request for unanimous consent for the swearing in of Clarence F. Allen, to represent the new state of Utah. He explained that Mr. Allen's election was regular and there was no contest, but, as the governor and other state officers did not assume their offices under the president's proclamation until to-day, their signatures to Mr. Allen's credentials, of course, had not been made. Mr. Crisp (Dem., Ga.) did not question the facts as stated, but thought Mr. Allen should not be sworn in until a report had been made upon the case by a committee. The matter was referred to the judiciary committee, with leave to report at any time.

On Mr. Hitt's motion, a resolution was adopted appointing Hon. W. L. Wilson on the board of regents of the Smithsonian institution.

Washington, Jan. 9.—The senate was treated to one of Senator Vest's characteristic speeches. He arraigned the supreme court for the income tax decision; he laid the responsibility for the lack of revenue at their door, when they exempted the "sordid wealth of the land" from taxation; he contrasted the records of the present and past administrations; he threw some light upon heretofore unknown chapters in the history of the McKinley law; he denounced the financial dependence of this country and of others upon the monied influence; he attacked the president and the secretary of the treasury for their proposition to retire the greenbacks and place the circulation in the hands of the national banks; he quoted Secretary Carlisle against himself, and in conclusion declared that the conflict between bimetallism and the gold standard was irresistible, and that the sooner it was decided, the better it would be for our public and private life.

The other feature of the session today grew out of the introduction by Mr. Chandler of a bill for a popular loan through the issue of postal savings certificates. In the course of Mr. Chandler's remarks, the cable replies of the Prince of Wales, the Rothschilds, and others to the New York World were alluded to, and Mr. Lodge claimed that the editor of the World had been guilty of violating section 5335 of the Revised Statutes in holding communication with officials of another government, the purpose of which "was to interfere with a measure of the United States."

Another brief session of the house was held, at which the only important business transacted was the admission of the new member from the new State of Utah, Mr. Allen, and the adoption of resolutions calling upon the attorney general for information concerning the enforcement of the anti-trust law, and for recommendations of new legislation on the subject and on the secretary of the treasury for statistics concerning the seal fisheries of the Bering sea.

Washington, Jan. 10.—The subject of the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands was broached in the house by Mr. Spalding (Rep., Mich.), in the form of a resolution. The resolution provided that the Sandwich Islands be erected into a state, to be called the State of Hawaii, with a Republican form of government, to be adopted by the people, through deputies in convention, with the consent of the existing government. Conditions were imposed that questions of boundary or complications with other governments be transmitted to the president to be laid before congress for its final action before Jan. 1, 1898; that all property pertaining to the republic defense be ceded to the United States, but the state retain all other property and the United States to be liable for none of its debts. The resolution proposes as an alternative that Hawaii may be admitted as a state by treaties between the two governments, with one representative in congress, and proposes an appropriation of $100,000 for making the treaty. The resolution was read by unanimous consent and referred to the committee on foreign affairs.

Mr. Wolcott of Colorado, who has been absent in Europe for some months, was present in the senate and took prescribed oath. Mr. Hale, from the committee on naval affairs, reported back favorably a bill authorizing the secretary of the navy to increase the number of enlisted men in the navy, and gave notice that he would call it up at an early date. Mr. Butler (Pop., N. C.) offered two amendments to the free coinage substitute for the house bond bill. The first prohibited the sale of interest bearing bonds without the express consent of congress, and the second made it mandatory on the secretary of the treasury to redeem greenbacks and treasury notes in silver so long as the market price of 412 1-2 grains of silver was lower than that of 29 1-2 grains of gold. At the conclusion of the morning hour the senate adjourned.

Washington, Jan. 11.—The debate on the senate free coinage substitute for the house bond bill was again postponed owing to the intervention of Mr. Stewart, the Nevada Populist, who insisted upon making a speech in favor of the Elkins resolution as amended by the Butler amendment to prohibit the further sale of bonds except by the express consent of congress. The free coinage substitute was called up at the end of Mr. Stewart's speech and now has the right of way, so that the vote upon it can be postponed no longer. Mr. Stewart's speech predicted the failure of the popular loan proposition of the administration, intimated that the loan had already been underwritten by the gold syndicate, reiterated the senator's well known free silver views, and concluded with an appeal ofr the financial as well as the present independence of the United States. In the morning hour Mr. Baker introduced a resolution somewhat expanding the Monroe doctrine, and made a speech in favor of its adoption as a formal and unequivocal declaration of our policy with reference to the Western hemisphere.

In the house the following resolution was referred to the committee on foreign affairs: "That the president of the United States is hereby requested to forthwith ascertain whether Great Britain is advancing her outposts on the territory in dispute between her colony of British Guiana and the republic of Venezuela, or is reinforcing posts heretofore established with her troops, police or ordnance, and should the president become cognizant of the fact that British military or police force is advancing to invade or reinforce, or since the 17th day of December last, has invaded or reinforced posts formerly occupied within said disputed territory, he demand the immediate withdrawal of said soldiers and the reduction of the police force in such territory to not a greater number than were occupying the British outposts on the aforesaid 17th day of December, 1895."

Washington, Jan. 12.—Senator Nelson introduced a bill providing for a revision of the entire banking system by amendments to the Revised Statutes relative to national banks.

Mr. White (Dem., Cal.) made a speech in favor of some practical modifications of the senate rules. He did not mince his words in his characterization of the rules and the "ancient fictions" they perpetuated. The great evil which he especially inveighed against was that which permitted interminable debate on any question and placed it in the power of a single senator to hold the senate at his mercy so long.

At the conclusion of Mr. White's speech, Mr. Morgan (Dem., Ala.), formerly chairman of the committee on foreign relations, introduced a joint resolution congratulating the republic of Transvaal in Africa for the stand for liberty which it had taken, and directing the president o f the United States to transmit the action to the republic of Transvaal. The Morgan resolution was referred to the foreign relations committee.

Mr. Jones (Dem., Ark.) then took the floor and made a speech on the free coinage substitue for the house bond bill.

In the house, Mr. Tawney (Rep., Minn.) offered a resolution relating to pension claims. It recited that it was frequently charged by pensioners and applicants that the medical division of the pension bureau fails to properly regard the reports and findings in pension claims made by various boards of the United States examining surgeons. An objection to its consideration was was made by Mr. McClellan (Dem., N. Y.).

Mr. Odell (Rep., N. Y.) offered a resolution to direct the committee on banking and currency to report an amendment to the general banking laws giving power to banking associations to invest not to exceed 50 per cent of their lawful reserves in bonds of the United States to be hereafter issued under the acts of June 14, 1875, and May 31, 1878. Objection was made to Mr. Odell's resolution, and it was referred to the committee.

Then the changes in the house rules recommended by the committee on rules were reported by Mr. Henderson (Rep., Iowa), and were debated section by section.

Washington, Jan. 14.—The house put in the day in discussing the proposed changes in the rules, and finally it adopted all of the amendments recommended by the committee on rules, including the method of establishing the presence of a quorum which was proposed by J. Randolph Tucker of Virginia in the Forty-sixth congress. An attempt by Mr. Curtis of New York to abolish the custom of eulogizing dead members was unsuccessful.

Congressman Tawney introduced a bill for the relief of Conrad Bohn of Winona, already alluded to in these dispatches. Congressman McCleary introduced a bill making the mile-square reservation, which includes the pipestone quarries at Pipestone, Minn., a national park. Congressman Towne introduced a resolution directing the committee on foreign affairs to investigate and report on the establishment of a court of arbitration by the United States and Great Britain to settle controversies that may arise between the two countries affecting the honor or autonomy of either.

A car load of baled flax straw went through this place yesterday from Stephen consigned to the Deering Harvester Company at Chicago. Agents of this company have been scouring this part of the state looking for this straw for some time but flax raising is hardly more than an experiment with any of the farmers and he has found it a difficult matter to secure any. It is understood that the Deering company are paying a good price for the straw as there is an apparent stringency this year. They use the straw in their mills for making twine.—Crookston Tribune,

The leap year dance in Brink's hall last Friday night was by far the most enjoyable party given in St. Hilaire in a long time. The ladies have proven without a doubt that as entertainers and managers they are unequaled, Everything passed off without a hitch good order prevailed and first class music was furnished. Considerable credit is due Miss Mary Kraude and Miss Minnie Olson for the managment of the affair.

The Red River Dalen which had a stormy career in this city for several years and an equally cyclonic existance in East Grand Forks is still in evidence in Grand Forks. The plant and property were sold Friday under mortgage sale the claim being about $90, The plant was bid in by S. Brokke. A legal tangle is now on between Bydal and and Brokke over the ownership of the remnants of the institution.—Crookston Times.

He is a man of undoubted energy and we predict that he will make things lively here in the spring.

The county commissioners reapportioned the county into commissioners districts at the meeting last week, The first and fourth districts were reduced and the second third and fifth were increased in size, This district loses the townships of Louisville, Gentilly Lake Pleasant and Terrebonne, Under the new plan all of the districts have as near as possible the same number of people while before this and the first district had nearly one half of the population of Polk county.

There was a time when each winter people in this section began to talk of going elsewhere to better their condition And many of them went—some west and some south Most of them have returned no better, if as well financially, as when they started. But they gained valuable experiance, and others have profited by it. As a consequence you hear very little talk of people going elsewhere. They are all satisfied with the Red River Valley—its healthfulness, its productiveness and its climate; its society its churches and its schools, its opportunities for investment of capital in mercantile and and manufacturing industries, and for paying good returns for industry and skill. No section offers better inducements or can show a more contented or prosperous people.—Crookston Times,

The jury in the Duffy libel case brought in a verdict of guilty, and Judge Ives granted a stay of 60 days before passing sentence.—Crookston Times,

As reported in yesterday's issue of the Tribune the county commissioners have passed resolutions favoring an investigation by the governor into the affairs of the office of the judge of probate. The action of the board is based upon a report of the committee heretofore by them appointed to inquire into this matter, This committee seems to have done considerable work, considering the means means at hand, and have undoubtedly been conscientious and faithful to the public welfare in their labors and great credit is due them and the board to whom they belong for their fearless stand in this matter,

Judge Benson was elected on the populist ticket as was a majority of this committee and the board yet this matter of politics has not at any time seemed to enter into the controversy, Such examples of faithful performance of public service, regardless of personal or political reasons, is indeed refreshing in these days when politics are too often regarded above all other considerations, The Tribune does not wish to be understood as expressing an opinion one way or the other in this matter but leaves that to the governor, who will undoubtedly deal justly with Mr. Benson and the people of Polk county.—Crookston Tribune,

AMATEUR MASSAGE.

The Different Movements of the Hands, and What They Are For.

The benefits of massage are so well known that it is needless to recount them, and no ill person should be denied the invigorating effects of "the laying on of hands." Many persons are kept from the curative effects of massage by the thought of expense, skilled masseuses receiving high wages. To enable the home attendant or friend in some degree to take her place is the aim of this article.

The skilled masseuse must know the body, with the location of nerves and muscles, that he or she may be able to give such as need it special treatment.

Massage supplies to the feeble the exercise they are unable to obtain otherwise and includes a series of movements of limbs, fingers and toes, as well as the strokes of the masseuse's hands. These, somewhat violent, should not be tried without the advice of the physician, and no direction for their use is included in this article.

The strokes given in massage are for restfulness or for the purpose of rousing blood vessels and other organs to action and may be light or hard, the same variety of stroke being varied to suit the patient. No rule can be given for this, as judgment is something given only by nature and experience.

Massage must never be given to weary, and the masseuse should have a hand firm, but soft, flexible, sensitive and strong. Even an amateur may have this kind of hand, and practice will make it full of healing to the sick.

The masseuse must stand or sit in a position comfortable for herself, or otherwise she will be unable to give comfort. It is the rule to rub the limbs toward the body. Beginning at tip of fingers, rub with steady stroke toward the shoulder, varying the force according to the wish of the patient, and covering the whole arm. Starting with the toes, rub toward the thighs. The rubbing of the abdomen is in a circular course. On the back it follows the course of the backbone and must have some force to it.

With all the motions, in a general treatment the arms are taken first, then legs, chest, abdomen, back—from one end to the other of the spine.

Rubbing with the flat hand is the ordinary method known to every one. There is also rubbing with the tips of the fingers, which is very soothing when done lightly and often induces sleep when practiced on the head and wrists.

An invigorating motion is given by resting the base of the hand on arm or body, placing tips of fingers firmly on the skin and drawing toward the base of hand, working in this manner from wrist to shoulder and from foot to thigh. The hand is never flat when doing this, but bent to give purchase to the action of the fingers.

It will be found that the motion of kneading the flesh, which is almost precisely that of kneading bread, will give both stimulus and a restful sensation to the invalid. On the limbs this is taken from side to side, not up and down, as the former, but like it in that it starts at the wrists and ankles, working upward.

Last of all, and often omitted save in cases of sluggish circulation, comes percussion, which is slapping the entire body from hand to shoulder, from foot upward, the head being omitted. This may be done with the entire hand flat, or with it bent so that only the fingers, thumb and base of hand touch the flesh, and must be done carefully, as even gentle blows on tender surfaces are often not beneficial.

Practice will make these hints plain and enable any one with a sound body and sympathetic nature to aid in curing the sick or in making their sufferings more easily borne, and there are many women and children who will take massage from those they love who will not take it from a more skilled masseuse who is a stranger. These notes are written to those who long to help others, and who know nothing of massage save rubbing, which soon wearies both persons concerned. By using these four motions a beginner can give an hour's massage without becoming greatly fatigued, and their benefit is marked to the sufferer.—New York Ledger.

Called Down.

"Put that fellow in one of the basement rooms," remarked satan carelessly.

"Fellow! Basement!" sputtered the new arrival. "I would have you to know, sir, that I was a prominent citizen in my late home, sir."

Satan smiled. "That may have been," he said, "but you won't cut any ice down here."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

ODD NAMES AND OLD ONES.

What Parents Are Responsible For In Selecting Names For Tots.

Molly, Polly, Annie, Maggie, Peggie, Nancy and Nan are as much in vogue today as in the olden time, and in all probability will continue to be given as Christian names to baby girls for all time.

We do not find Frenchwomen taking their ancestors to task for bestowing upon them ungainly names, for the taste of the French in names is proverbial. There is no Peggie in the French tongue. When they tired of Mary, they changed it to the sweet name Marie. Ann became Annette, sprightly and bright.

Some parents refuse to give first names to their children, preferring that the children themselves should choose their own names. It is often a positive handicap to a man of parts to have an ineuphonious name. In many cases ignorant parents have gone wrong in their selection of names for their offspring, and more than once a girl baby has been called Jezebel and a boy baby Ananias. The Rev. James B. Walely, a Methodist minister, who preached many years in New York, told, with great enjoyment, of a lisping mother who took her baby to the font in the church to be christened. When the worthy divine took the child in his arms, preparatory to christening it, he asked the lisping mother what he should name it. The parent replied "Luci'thir." Indignantly the minister remarked:

"Lucifer! Lucifer! Never will I name a child that." Then he continued, as he sprinkled the water upon the brow of the girl baby, "George Washington, I baptize thee," etc., and the girl was thereafter so called.

It is a fact that fashion in names changes in cycles of less than a century. At present there seems to be a tendency toward odd names. Some of the popular ones are Dorothy, Rhoda, Edna and Angeline. Ada is quite common, and Almira comes down, it would appear, from the country towns to adorn city beauties. Agatha, Viola, Maude, Jessie, Olga, Odette, Olive, Inez, Isabel, Hortense, Rosalind, Beatrice, Naomi, Mignon, Mildred, Lilian, Leonora, Kathleen, Ida, Estelle, Gertrude, Gladys, Grace, Genevieve, Gabriella, Henrietta, Edith, Felice, Fedora, Frederica, Eunice, Florence, Eloise, Emeline, Eleanor, Elsie, Effie, Doris, Eveleen, Cora, Cynthia, Cloe, Cordelia, Beulah, Bertha, Blanche, Ruth, Veronica, are among the hundreds of uncommonly odd names, chosen not only for their oddness, but for their euphoniousness as well, while their meaning adds interest to them and makes the burden of their weight an easy load to carry.

A mother sometimes delights in perpetuating the name of her grandmother, who bore the name of her great-grandmother, and thus these very old names descend by the choice of the parent. Ann nowadays sounds harsh, and Betsy seems common. Betsy comes to be Bessie and Ann Annie, and an instance is known of Mindwell having the audacity to call herself Minnie. Jerusha has printed on her visiting cards Jennie, and Mehitable loves to hear herself styled Hitty.—New York World.

Burial Alive.

Burial alive is by no means so uncommon as we like to believe. Under the present laws of Great Britain no sworn certificate of death is required. A physician must declare what he believes to have been the cause of the death of a patient, but the fact of death need not be certified, nor so much as ascertained. In Germany all supposed corpses are either inspected several times by a local official or sent to a mortuary, where signs of life may be watched for. Authorities agree that decomposition is the only infallible sign of death, and urge delay in burial when there is room for doubt. "As a German," writes one gentleman, "I should be afraid to die in England (excuse the paradox) for fear of being buried alive."—London Tit-Bits.

Stephen Girard, Hero.

A tablet "in commemoration of the courage and humanity displayed by Stephen Girard during the epidemic of yellow fever prevailing in Philadelphia in the year 1793," in Girard college in Philadelphia, discloses a phase of character in the philanthropist not generally understood. During the fever epidemic he gave up his business and his luxurious home and assumed the superintendency of a yellow fever hospital. He took up the work others recoiled from, and did the work because it was his duty.—New York Evening Post.

Tommy Suggests a Remedy.

"I can say of our neighbor, Hurkalong," observed Mr. Tucker, "that he gives away a great deal in charity and that his left hand never knows what his right hand is doing."

"Why doesn't he take boxing lessons?" asked Tommy Tucker.—Chicago Tribune.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment [illegible] sum of one hundred and thirty-two [illegible] which is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Ole P. Stokke and Tehee Stokke his wife, Mortgagors, to Dakota Investment Company, mortgagee, bearing date the 2nd day of August 1890, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota, on the 7th day of August 1890 at 2:30 o'clock p. m. in Book 43 of mortgages on page 54 [illegible] and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The south west quarter of Section twenty in Township one hundred and forty-nine of Range forty-seven in Polk county and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk county at the front door of the court house, in the city of Crookston in said county and state, on the 8th day of June 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt, and interest, and taxes if any on said premises and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

THE DEFENSE OF DAMLI.

It was sultry in the smoking room. For one thing the weather was hot, for another, the commodore had just finished a yarn. Markham always maintained that the atmosphere became sulphurous after the commodore had recounted a personal reminiscence, but then he was given to exaggeration. Still we felt grateful that the story had passed off without the intervention of a thunderbolt, and sat gasping relief and credulity. Then Mildmay, from sheer nervousness, I believe, not from any desire for a recurrence of the Ananias episode, stirred up the colonel. The colonel was sitting behind a big cheroot, evidently incubating a kettle wherein to cook the commodore a cabbage.

"Wonderful escape that, sir!" said Mildmay, addressing the colonel.

"Yes, sir. We in the service in the old days, before it became a school for step dancing and circus riding, used to have experiences which the country never heard of. Adventures were common as bilberries, sir, in those days. Gad, sir, a British soldier in those days thought no more of walking 1,000 miles through the enemy's country than you do of step dancing around the park.

"Probably, sir, you've never heard of the defense of Fort Damli? No, sir, I don't blame you, sir, if you have not heard of a feat of arms which preserved half a continent for her majesty, God bless her! We've all heard of suppressed dispatches and ingratitude in high places lest the feather bed step dancers should be replaced by men.

"It was in—never mind the date, sir, and never mind the place. If I mentioned them you would recall the episode, and it is not for me to boast by telling the full extent of the services it was my good fortune to render this country.

"A foreign power (no, sir, I will mention no name—damme, sir! I hope I know my duty better than to rekindle international complications) had stirred up the niggers against us. I was in command of Fort Damli, sir, at that time, with a handful of men—a mere handful—but men, sir, such as your dancing schools do not turn out nowadays.

"Fort Damli is built on a promontory running out into the sea and is only get-at-able from one side. The niggers had massed all their forces in the plain in front of the fort. Twenty thousand of them, sir—or rather, as I wish to guard against exaggeration, I will say that I counted 19,863—a-swarming over the plain thick as cheese mites in a Stilton.

"I had ninety-three men all told, including a one-eyed drummer boy, but we laughed at them, sir. Whenever the niggers came at the fort we loaded our big guns with broken bottles, bedsteads, war office regulations, which was about the only thing they had supplied us with from home, and mowed them down by the dozens. When they reached the walls my boys, giving them cold pig, took tea with the niggers.

"I used to sit on the powder magazine, smoking a cheroot, as comfortably as I'm doing now. Gad, sir, how it all comes back to me! That little devil of a drummer used to nip out after the fight and mend his drum with niggers' skins. After about a fortnight of it we had the niggers piled up three deep facing the fort.

"Well, we had held that fort for seven weeks—no, damme, let's be accurate, for forty-eight days—and we looked like holding it for seven years, or until there wasn't a nigger left to come on, when one afternoon, it was about half-past 4 on Feb. 21—I'm not likely to forget that date in a hurry—Lieut. Simkins of the Bombardiers, my subaltern, came to me and said: 'It's all up, sir. We haven't a round of ammunition left, and the niggers are preparing for a general assault tonight.' He was a brave man, was Simpkins—fell afterward at Seringapatam, cut clean in half by a cannon ball—but he looked a bit scared then.

"'Is that all?' I said, off-hand. 'Then we shall have some fun with the bayonet. I am surprised at you, sir, for reporting such a trifle.' After this rebuke I turned away, when the little drummer almost ran into me in his excitement.

"'Captain,' said he, saluting—I was only a captain in those days—'three men-of-war reported in the bay.' I looked out to sea and saw, as plainly as I see you, sir, three frigates standing on the horizon, flying the—flying the flag of the foreign power which was aiding and abetting the niggers.

"Well, sir, I must admit that when I saw these ships and remembered that we had not a grain of powder in the whole blessed fort, I admit that for a moment I felt at a loss. Another man, who was less anxious to keep to facts, might tell you that he never hesitated, but I, wishing to deal with things as they were, I confess I felt at a loss.

"But only for a moment. Lieut Simpkins said, with a sort of grin, 'Now, sir, you had better surrender to the Fr—to the foreign power.' 'Sir,' I answered, drawing myself up, 'a Tomlinson dies, but never surrenders.' I beg your pardon? Yes, sir; quite right. By a perversion of history these words were attributed to Blucher at Sedan. But I hope you will allow that I ought to know when they were first uttered. Blucher may have adapted them; I make no complaint. Well, as I said, for a moment—a breathing space—I felt that the game was indeed up. I sat down on one of the now useless forty-pounders to review the situation. As I meditated my eye fell on some coils of telegraph wire which Hudson of the survey department had brought into the fort before the outbreak of the disturbance, to connect us with the capital. As my glance fell upon it a thought flashed through my brain.

"'Saved!' I cried, leaping from the cannon. 'The captain's got 'em again,' remarked that devil's imp of a drummer boy. Without heeding this breach of discipline, I sent for Hudson. In a few words I whispered my idea to him. 'Captain,' he cried, 'you are a genius, a marvel, a'—However, it is not for me to repeat the compliments, perhaps not altogether undeserved, he paid my resource.

"With his help I wound the telegraph wire around two cannons, connecting every two guns with a spool of wire. In this way we connected every two guns with a spool of wire. In this way we connected eight guns on the land side of the fort and six commanding the bay. The wires from each gun were taken into the powder magazine, where Hudson had rigged up an infernal machine of his own devising.

"We had hardly completed our work when night fell 'You are sure they haven't any muskets?' Hudson said to me before we separated for the night. 'Perfectly,' I answered. 'Only spears and knives.' 'Then it ought to be all right,' he murmured, 'but how about the ships?' 'Let's settle the niggers first,' I replied. 'Sufficient for the day are the ructions thereof.'

"With these remarks he left me, and I sat in my powder magazine awaiting events. The hours crept by very slowly. I tingled with excitement, for I knew the next hour would determine our faith. At length, in the pitchy darkness, the drummer boy, with his only eye glowing in the blackness like a carbuncle, whispered softly: 'Captain, they're coming!' Still I waited.

"Then, in the deathlike stillness, a yell broke on the startled air. I knew the crucial moment had come, and I—I pressed a button. There was a whirring sound. Then all was quiet again, until a cheer from my men rang out, and I knew that all was well. Seizing my club, I hurried out into the darkness. Everything was dark as—as the war office—and the fort was deserted.

"Just outside the gate I stumbled across a body. I turned it over with my foot. It was a nigger in full war paint and unarmed. Then I knew that my plan had succeeded. Hurrying forward, whither a dull thud, varied by an occasional groan, guided me, I found my gallant Bombardiers clubbing for dear life—for the bayonets and barrels of their muskets had been removed by my orders—among a scurrying crowd of savages.

"Well, sir, we banged and banged, until we could no longer raise our arms. As day broke I ordered the drummer to beat to quarters. He was nowhere to be found. Shouting to my men, I ordered them to retire to the fort. Then the sun rose, and what a sight met our eyes! Every cannon in the fort was studded with spears and knives as thick as a pudding is of plums, as close as a pin cushion is of pins.

"What had happened will be obvious to you. By the telegraph wires and an electric battery in the powder magazine I had turned all my cannons into electro-magnets of forty horse-power. Consequently, as soon as the enemy were within range I turned on the current. Every steel weapon in the hands of the niggers simply whirled out of their grasp and stuck like horse leeches to my magnets.

"The absence of the drummer boy was soon explained. As, against my distinct orders, he had been wearing a hanger when I turned the current on, he flew against the nearest gun and stuck there as a C. O. does to a decoration. It took six men to haul him off.

"Then, in the joy of victory, a sudden dread came over me. How about the three men-of-war? The foreign power ought to have landed its myrmidons by this time. Scourged by my misapprehensions, I hurried to the seaward battlements of the fort. There, in the gray dawn, a strange sight met my eyes.

"Nailed to the cruel rocks to the westward of Damli lay these three men-of-war, hopeless wrecks, buffeted by the waves against the grinding crags. What had happened was simple enough. Damme, sir, it flashed across me in an instant. The force of my seaward magnets had been such that it had deranged the compasses of these vessels. Following their distorted guidance, they had run ashore on the reef westward of the fort.

"Even as I watched, I saw a boat push off from the wrecked flag ship. At once I donned the graceful uniform of my regiment, the Munchausen's Own, as the service fondly termed it, and drew up my gallant ninety-three in platoons to await our vanquished foe. A tall officer, of gallant bearing, his dripping uniform decorated with a star, stepped ashore.

"'Field marshal,' said he, bowing to me with a grace that left me no doubt that I was standing in the presence of a prince of the blood royal, 'I have the honor to surrender to you my sword!'

"'Not field marshal,' I replied, accepting the sword, as I marked the diamonds flashing in its hilt, 'only a captain of her Majesty's loyal regiment of Munchausen's Own.' 'Ah,' said his highness, turning to his followers, 'what chance have we against a nation where such men are only captains?' Bowing low, he followed me, my prisoner, into the fort.

"That, sir, is the true history of the defense of Damli. The end is plain. After my victory they sent a general from home who reaped its fruits, who was rewarded by a grateful country by sticking every condemned letter of the alphabet after his blighted name. But the nation has yet to learn to whose resources they owe the victory of Damli. You were pleased, to observe, sir? Eh, sir? What, sir? Your obedient servant, sir. Walter, two of the same, with a slice of lemon."—New Budget.

FINANCE AND FINESSE.

Shrewd Scheme by Which the Learned Member Was Worked.

Here is a story about a member of parliament well known for his knowledge about all questions of finance. This wise statesman was approached by a reputable-looking man, who said, with a deferential but not servile, manner: "Excuse me, sir, are you not Mr. Blank?"

"I am," said the M. P., with affable dignity.

"I believe you are well informed upon all financial questions?"

"My friends and the press are kind enough to say so."

"You have given much attention to the subject, I think."

"More than to anything else."

"And no doubt you could give a satisfactory answer to almost any question I might ask?"

The member saw that he was being "interviewed," and wished to say something that would look well in print.

"Well, I have a question in finance that I should be greatly pleased if you would answer to my satisfaction."

"Very good. What is it?"

"Will you lend me a sovereign for a day or two?"

The M. P. produced the sovereign.

"By George!" he said, afterward, "he could have caught me for five just as well if he had only known it."—Amusing Journal.

A Near-Sighted Astronomer.

Schiaparelli, the astronomer who first discovered the so-called "canals" of Mars, did so with a much smaller telescope than those in use in many other observatories at that time. And yet he is a very near-sighted man. Garrett P. Serviss of Brooklyn, in speaking of his first interview with the eminent Italian, said a few days ago that Schiaparelli would hold a visitor's card within five or six inches of his eyes in order to decipher it. The singular part of this story is not that a man with such an infirmity should be able to outdo other astronomers, for keenness of vision depends rather upon the retina than the convexity of the lenses of the eye, and the eye-piece of a telescope can be focused so as to suit the latter. But it does seem a little odd that the gifted scientist in question should habitually refrain from wearing eyeglasses. Possibly he has a theory as to the effect of their use upon his visual powers.—New York Tribune.

The Pace That Kills.

Fast Work and Fast Eating Make Three Score Years and Ten a Ripe Old Age in These Days.

(From the Cincinnati Enquirer.)

The American people live too fast, eat too fast and drink too fast. This has brought upon many of us a train of nervous and stomach disorders that are very difficult to manage. Investigation and chemical analysis to discover such compounds as will help those suffering from such ills has resulted in the discovery of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which has taken very high rank as a specific remedy.

H. P. Owens, a traveling man thirty years of age, who is well known in this community and generally liked, because he is a bright, energetic young fellow, resides with his mother at 335 Central Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio. He has been a victim of dyspepsia which took the form of continuous constipation, and, strangely enough, his mother suffered from the same trouble. Mr. Owens testified to the merits of Pink Pills in a most enthusiastic way, and said to the Enquirer reporter:

"I am glad to say anything I can for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, because they did me great good, and other people ought to know of their virtues as a medicine in stomach troubles. It was some time ago when I felt a heavy feeling in my stomach, and I grew very constipated. I did not consult a doctor, but having heard of the Pink Pills I bought a box of them. In two or three days the heavy feeling in my stomach disappeared and my bowels were regular: I did not have to use more than a box of them before I was well. Since that time I have only occasionally been troubled with constipation, and I never get worried, because I know just what to do. Mother was also troubled with indigestion and the Pink Pills did the same for her they did for me—cured her, didn't they, mother."

When appealed to Mrs. Owens answered: "That is right. I found it was a great medicine, so easy to take and so quick and lasting in its results."

Mr. Owens continued: "I believe that these pills are also good for nervousness. When I had my stomach trouble I was also quite nervous and that disappeared with the dyspepsia. The Pink Pills were all that is claimed for them. You can make any use of this testimonial you see fit."

H. P. Owens has occupied several positions of trust in this city. He was for a time an employe of the Commercial-Gazette. He will go on the road in a few days for a prominent business house here. Mrs. Owens is quite as enthusiastic as her son about the Pink Pills and her host of lady friends can verify her good opinion of this wonderful remedy if they feel disposed to do so at any time. Where the testimony is so general and unanimous as to the excellencies of Pink Pills as the Enquirer has found it to be there is certainly good reason to believe all the good things said—about the safe and simple remedy.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., at 50c per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

Rice in the Bible.

A book before us says: "Rice is not mentioned in the Bible, as it did not grow in the countries in which the Bible happenings occurred." We think the author is mistaken. The fact that the word "rice" does not appear is no evidence of the non-existence of a product that in the Bible era was feeding the majority of the world's people. From the earliest ages the blanket expression, "corn," has been used to cover all manner of grains and seeds used for food. In England the word now applies to barley, rye, oats and more specifically wheat; in Scotland it usually means oats, while here it only refers to maize. The word "corn" frequently occurs in the Bible, and when we consider the enormous commerce of Palestine, particularly in the days of Solomon, it is natural to suppose that rice was among the imports and that, like wheat and other grains, it finds shelter under the blanket term "corn."—Aberdeen Examiner.

We will forfeit $1,000 if any of our published testimonials are proven to be not genuine. The Piso Co., Warren, Pa.

KIDNEY TROUBLES.

One To Many Causes, But Always with One Result, A Life of Agony Fraught with Horror, Death.

There are many people to-day who are unknowingly suffering from some severe kidney disease. This dreaded trouble should not be neglected. Swollen joints, pains in the small of the back, watery sacs under the eyes, a general bloating of the entire body, a loss of appetite, sleeplessness and nervousness are a few of the many symptoms that attend this awful affliction. The blood becomes filled with the germs of the disease and carries it to other parts of the body; so that when a patient suffering from this trouble dies, the entire body is found to be filled with disease cells. Do not hesitate or experiment if you are in this condition. You cannot begin too soon to look for help. Take at once that greatest and surest of cures, Kickapoo Indian Sagwa. Thousands attest its value for this trouble.

One of the many who testify to its curative powers is J. A. Kaisar, of Kewanee, Ill. He writes as follows: "I would say that I was almost down with my back, and consulted a splendid physician who said my left kidney was badly affected. I could hardly get up when I was sitting or lying down. I had taken the doctor's medicine, but it did me no good at all. I took Kickapoo Indian Sagwa and it cured me."

This same result is obtained in every instance. It cures always where a cure is possible. Above all, it is absolutely harmless, as it contains no poisonous ingredients of any description, being made entirely of roots, barks, herbs and gums of the Indians' own gathering. You can buy it at your druggists $1.00 a bottle, 6 bottles for $5.00.

ABOUT THE PEANUT.

How and Where They Grow and Are Cultivated and Harvested.

The peanut is not a nut at all. It is a ground pea, and is called a nut because it has a nut-like shell. The plant blossoms in the air and sunlight, but after the blossom has "fallen off" the stem upon which it was plows or punches itself into the ground several inches, where the seed portion of the flower begins to enlarge and develop into a pale yellow, wrinkled, curved "pod" with a slight drawing together in the middle. If the stem does not find its way into the ground within a day or two after the flower falls off, the stem dies. The surface of the pod is netted.

The peanut has never been known to grow wild, and it is not known where it is native. A hundred years ago the peanut was a leading article of food in Africa, and the slave traders loaded their vessels with them and the negroes lived on them on the voyage.

It grows abundantly in Japan, China and in all East India countries. It was not much cultivated in the United States until 1866. Their extended cultivation was the result of the war. Until then there had been large importations from Africa, but since 1870 this country has raised all it has used. Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee produce most of the crop of the United States. Under good conditions before the land has been exhausted by raising the same crop too long, they can raise from 50 to 100 bushels to the acre.

The pea vines are better food for cattle than timothy hay and almost as good as clover. Peanut meal is good food for cattle. A bushel of good peanuts weighs about twenty-two pounds. The peanuts are plowed up, rather than dug up. The plow turns up the soil and loosens the vine and pods from the earth, and they are then pitchforked out of the ground, the earth being carefully shaken from the plants. They are plowed up in the morning, pitched into rows soon after and at night pitched into a stack about a pole, seven feet high. Rails are laid below the vines so that the lower pods will not be pressed into the earth and be spoiled. The vines are so placed as to have the pods inward toward the pole and a space is left for air next to the pole. On the top of the stack is hay or cornstalks to keep out the rain.

The stack is left from two to three weeks, and then women and children pick the good pods from the vines. This is slow work and quite expensive. Some farmers leave the vines two days after plowing before they are shaken out, and some make their stacks 14 feet high. Some leave them in the stacks less than two weeks, and then put them in barns till they are ready to market them or have the leisure to pick them.

Some farmers pick them from the vines by machines. The pods are cleaned by machinery before being put in sacks. A sack holds four bushels. Peanuts well put up and kept in a dry place are good for many years.

There are about 4,000,000 bushels of peanuts raised in the United States each year. The rest of the world raises five times as many as the United States, or 20,000,000 bushels.

The peanuts are of four grades. The first three grades are for three grades of venders of roasted peanuts. The fourth are for confectioners for "burnt almonds," or peanut candy.

The American people pay $10,000,000 for peanuts, not to eat as food, but to nibble for fun.

JACK TARS OF OTHER DAYS.

When Ships Were Full Rigged Sailors Were Athletes.

A proportion of the blue jackets of any full-rigged ship were necessarily athletes. The "upper yardman" in a line-of-battle ship or a frigate were exceptional men in this way, and much more so, perhaps, just about the time that sail power was receiving its death warrant than ever before. These young men had to race aloft to nearly the highest points, at top speed, eight or ten times a week, when the ship was in harbor, to keep their heads and maintain their breath while "holding on by their eyelids," as the phrase went, and manipulating with a careful and measured order of action the various and intricate arrangements for "crossing" or "sending down" the royal and top-gallant yards. It was all done at full speed, for it was universally held that the upper yardman gave a character to the whole ship, and that one which was foremost in the exercise was ever considered "the smartest ship in the fleet." The upper yardmen were always the coming men. They had the most opportunities for distinguishing themselves, were the best known, and were most under the eye of the authorities. They developed great muscular power in chest, shoulders and arms. Their lower extremities suffered, and one always knew the men who had been upper yardmen by their tadpole-like appearance when they were bathing.

But in the modern steam line-of-battle ship and frigate these extremely athletic specimens formed a very small minority of the "ship company," and none of them could lose his turn at being upper yardmen so long as the ship's reputation depended upon the speed with which the upper yards were crossed and sent down. In harbor the rest of the blue jackets had the handling of the yards and sails for exercise once or twice a week, but at sea the use of sails or propulsion grew less and less important and most of the work aloft was more of an exercise and less of a necessity.—North American.

Luminous Heads in Boston.

There is an organization in Boston known as the Society of Psychical Research. The other evening, at one of the meetings, a certain person, said to possess remarkable occult powers, volunteered to give an exhibition, which offer was gladly accepted by the society. The "professor" was a woman, slightly built, with pallid cheeks and dark raven hair. One of the members, while not particularly skeptical, thought he would try a little experiment on his own account; so, before going to the meeting, he provided himself with some pieces of phosphorescent paper that in the dark lit up like a glow worm. This he tore into small pieces, and, just before the lights were extinguished, contrived to place three or four bits of paper on the "professor's" head. Then he sat down and waited. When the room was dark the "professor's" cranium emitted a pale light, visible to every one in the room but the "professor" herself. In a few minutes the phenomena began, but, strange to relate, when a tambourine in one corner of the room began to sound, the illuminated was there also, and the moving about of the operator could be easily traced. The suppressed mirth told the "professor" something was wrong, and when the light was turned on and the paper discovered the remarks were far from spiritual. There were no more manifestations that night.—Boston Post.

It Wears Off.

"So you have been admitted to the bar, have you?" said the old cynic, pleasantly.

"I have," replied the young man, proudly.

"Felt a little backward and diffident at first, I suppose?"

"A little."

"Of course; but it'll wear off. You'll be calling yourself judge inside of thirty days. They all do that now."—Chicago Post.

Ghosts Are Pale and Shadowy,

Say those who profess to have interviewed them. Whether spooks are tallow-faced or not, mortals are whose blood is thin and watery in consequence of imperfect assimilation. When invalids resort to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and use that unequalled tonic persistently, they soon "pick up" in strength, flesh and color. It should be used also to prevent malarial, rheumatic and kidney complaints, and to remedy constipation, sick headache and nervousness.

Vienna Bicycle Riders.

In Vienna all bicycle riders, before obtaining permission to ride on the public streets, must pass an official examination. They are required to ride between boards laid on the floor without touching the sides or edges of the boards. At the word of command they must be able to dismount either right, left or backward. Until the rider passes this strict examination satisfactorily a license to ride on the public highway is refused. That is all very well in its way. For a government to take such parental care of its people is regarded by many as evidence of a high state of civilization, but the fact is that, so far as New York is concerned, the most serious accidents, those causing loss of life, have nearly all befallen experienced riders. It is the experts who are killed—those who take great risks.—New York Home Journal.

They plead over-indulgence in wine as an excuse.

It was reported at Philadelphia that Gideon Marsh, ex-president of the defunct Keystone bank, whose vast embezzlements wrecked that institution, is back in the city. He fled in 1891, when a price of $5,000 was set upon him by the city. It was said Marsh has been in the Mills Eye hospital and is about to surrender himself.

It has been reported to the probate court at Salem, Mass., that Capt. John Allen of Manchester, trustee of the estate of the late Harry Roberts of that town, is short in his accounts to the amount of $100,000. When Mr. Roberts died the estate valued at $280,000, was left to Capt. Allen in trust, and it is claimed that nearly one-half of this money has either been lost or hopelessly involved in speculation.

HER FAVORITE SON.

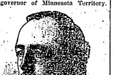
SENATOR C. K. DAVIS OF MINNESOTA A PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITY.

The Western States Almost Unanimously in His Favor, While He Is Considered the Second Choice of a Great Many More—Something of the Career of Minnesota's Brilliant Son.

The increasing frequency with which the name of Senator Cushman K. Davis of Minnesota is favorably mentioned as the Republican candidate for president in 1896 is attracting attention. That he will have the solid vote of the Minnesota delegation, and that of six or seven other Western states and territories is now practically assured. That he is the second choice of many of the leading Republicans of the nation is well known to all who observe the inside workings of the party leaders. He is receiving daily attention from the principal newspapers of the country, always with flattering commendation. Extracts from over seven hundred journals, representing thirty-two states, have been collected. These facts create an increasing demand for information as to his career and his public record.

Cushman Kellogg Davis was born at Henderson, Jefferson county, New York, June 16, 1838, of New England ancestry, his father's family being from Massachusetts and his mother's from Connecticut. His father removed to Wisconsin in 1838 and settled in Waukesha, on a farm, where the son was brought up. This was then a wild, frontier country, and the family endured all the privations of pioneer life. From boyhood he was an ardent student, a characteristic he has maintained throughout his busy career. He passed his first three collegiate years in Carrolton college, Waukesha, Wis., and thence went to the University of Michigan, where he graduated in the classical course in 1857. He studied law with Alexander W. Randall, afterwards the war governor of Wisconsin, and was admitted to practice in 1859. His first vote was cast for Abraham Lincoln in 1860. After a thorough preparation, he commenced the practice of law in Waukesha, Wis. In 1862 he closed his law office and went into the war as first lieutenant of Company B, Twenty-eighth Wisconsin infantry. He served nearly two years in the Army of the Tennessee, in Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas and Mississippi, a part of that time on responsible staff duty. In 1864, being disabled by the hardships of the service, he resigned from the army, and, like many others, sought and found in Minnesota a restorative of health thus impaired.

He settled in St. Paul and formed a partnership with Gen. W. A. Gorman, ex-governor of Minnesota Territory.



Cushman K. Davis.

Capt. Davis was at once recognized as a promising lawyer and brilliant orator. He was quickly sought out and pressed into service as a campaign speaker. In the fall of 1866 he was elected to the state legislature from one of the St. Paul districts, and served efficiently in that capacity. Shortly afterwards he was appointed United States district attorney. His record in this office was one of fine professional success, and soon brought him to a leading position at the bar, and also to a prominence in the political counsels of the party.

In June, 1873, he was nominated as the Republican candidate for governor, after a memorable contest. He was duly elected, and his official record was in every respect creditable.

Gov. Davis declined a re-nomination, and retired to private life at the end of his two years' term. He resumed the practice of law, which he pursued with ardent devotion and ever-augmented success. But his eloquent voice and pen were in frequent demand on occasions of public ceremony, and he always filled the full measure of the occasion—thus constantly increasing and extending his oratorical fame. He was also an interested, active participant in political affairs.

In 1884 the Blaine men of Minnesota selected C. K. Davis as their standard-bearer, and sent him as a delegate-at-large to the Chicago convention. Here he made the principal nominating speech for Blaine, and contributed largely to his nomination. For ten years he was recognized as the Blaine leader in the Northwest, and has inherited much of that magnetic statesman's strength.

During all of 1886 the state press, with striking unanimity, advocated the election of C. K. Davis as United States senator. When the legislature of 1887 met, it was found that the sentiment in his favor was so strong among the members that Senator McMillan gracefully withdrew as a candidate for a third term, and on the roll being called for the Republican legislative caucus Gov. Davis received every vote. The legislature confirmed the caucus' decision, and he was elected for the term of six years, commencing March 4, 1887.

Senator Davis' fame had preceded him. He received a hearty welcome from his illustrious colleagues, and was soon assigned to positions of commanding influence, seldom conceded to new senators. An early and conclusive evidence of his prompt recognition was his appointment to the chairmanship of the committee on pensions. No such important trust was ever before committed to a senator in the first months of his career. Thenceforward he had charge of all pension legislation, general and private, and the zeal, intelligence and patriotism of his acts earned for him the special gratitude and devotion of the veterans of the war.

In the earliest months of his service in the senate, Senator Davis gave significant utterance to his sympathy with the veterans, as well as to some well grounded principles of statesmanship. This utterance is contained in his report (No. 1607) dated June 28, 1888, on President Cleveland's numerous vetoes of private pension bills. That report became the text book in the presidential campaign of 1888, and largely contributed to the election of President Harrison. It not only proved that Cleveland had been inconsistent and unjust in many of his vetoes, but that his exercise of this power was wrong in principle, unconstitutional and a plain usurpation of the prerogatives of legislation. This report created a profound impression on all parties. It stopped at once the wholesale vetoes, and it thoroughly aroused the ex-soldier element of the country to the fact that the Democratic administration was distinctly hostile.

It was due to Senator Davis, very largely, that the rights and claims of the Northwestern territories were presented with such clearness that their admission could not be postponed. His speech of April 11, 1888, on the bill for the admission of South Dakota is the most remarkable of a remarkable series of able and eloquent addresses, even when brought in comparison with those made by the oldest and ablest members of the senate. Many of the speeches of this memorable debate deal with signal ability on one or another of the various topics embraced in the great question. That of Senator Davis alone covered all with a fulness and dignity that made it at once a model encyclopedic, historic and judicial statement, ranking among the best examples of parliamentary eloquence. It was his maiden speech, and it established a reputation so high that it has since required the exertion of his best powers to maintain it. It practically closed the debate on the subject in the senate, and compelled a reluctant opposition to perform an act of justice in the house. Among the score of speeches delivered in the senate and house pending the bill for the admission of the two Dakotas and the new states of the Northwest, this speech remains the jurist's and statesman's vade mecum on the legal aspects of territorial history, as well as on the more equitable and reciprocal rights, duties and privileges of the territories and the nation.

After his appointment to a position on the committee on foreign relations, Senator Davis came rapidly to the front as an authority on diplomacy and international law. His previous studies in that line, his general grasp of large questions, and his special faculty of analysis and research enabled him to render services seldom expected of new men on the committee. His expositions of the Monroe doctrine have been among the most luminous heard on the floor of the senate.

Senator Davis illustrates his Americanism by his speech in the senate delivered in the month of April, 1892. It was called out by the proposition of Herr Cahensly, a member of the German parliament, appealing to the foreign nations to denationalize American institutions, by planting colonies on our soil in compact masses so as to perpetuate foreign customs, languages and allegiance through generations unborn. This scheme was denounced by Senator Davis in a speech which attracted profound attention at home and abroad, for it was given great circulation in Europe, by translation into many foreign languages.

As the first term of Senator Davis approached its conclusion it became evident that he was practically the unanimous choice of his party for re-election. The Republican state convention which assembled in St. Paul in May, 1892, to elect delegates-at-large to the Minneapolis national convention, after listening to an able speech from him on the issues of the day, adopted, by a rising vote, a motion endorsing him for his own successor. When the state convention met in July, to nominate a state ticket, the unprecedented action was taken of formally announcing him as the senatorial candidate of the party. In neither convention was a dissenting voice raised. A Republican legislature was chosen, and Senator Davis was re-elected for the term ending March 3, 1899.

About July 1, 1894, Senator Davis performed the unpremeditated act which gave him at once a national prominence. As a result of the Pullman strike interstate commerce was paralyzed in Chicago and its suburbs, mail trains were stopped and anarchy seemed about to prevail. A committee of assumed labor leaders at Duluth wired Senator Davis, asking him to support a resolution introduced by Senator Kyle, which was plainly intended to embarrass the authorities and encourage rioters. The senator promptly returned the following telegram:

"To D. D. McInnis, Duluth, Minn.:—I have received your telegram. I will not support Senator Kyle's resolution. It is against your own real welfare. It is also a blow at the security, peace and rights of millions of people who never harmed you or your associates. My duty to the constitution and the laws forbids me to sustain a resolution to legalize lawlessness. The same duty rests upon you and your associates. The power to regulate commerce among the several states is vested by the constitution in congress. Your associates have usurped that power at Hammond and other places, and have destroyed commerce between the states in these particular instances. You are rapidly approaching the overt act of levying war against the United States, and you will find the definition of that in the constitution. I trust that wiser thought will regain control. You might as well ask me to dissolve the government. —C. K. Davis.'

Up to the time the telegram was sent the strange attitude of the authorities in most of the states affected had been that of palliating cowardice. But the Davis message rang like a clarion to call the people to their senses and arouse the dormant manhood of the country. From that moment, and all along the line, an aggressive campaign to subdue the rioters, because they were criminals, was inaugurated and maintained, until Debs and his lieutenants were landed in jail and public order had been restored. A vigorous Republican newspaper in a Central state says: "If for this one act of his useful public life, crowded full of acts of large service to the people, the Republicans of the country were to make Senator Davis president, they will not reward him beyond his deserts." He is one of the Americans, loyal, sensible, courageous and reverently patriotic, who peculiarly honor America.

FOUND IN CAITHNESS CASTLE.

A Rare Lot of Letters From English and Scotch Writers.

There has recently been brought to light in an ancient Caithness castle a most remarkable and priceless collection of old letters, which, though the holograph productions of many of the most eminent persons of the century, have, curiously enough, without exception, hitherto escaped publication. The letters, which date from the year 1800 to 1850, number several hundreds. They are all addressed to George Thomson, the distinguished musical amateur who, at the end of the last century, projected and carried to a successful issue a new classical "Miscellany of Scottish Song," to which Burns was a contributor, along with several of the writers and musicians named. The majority of the letters treat at some length, with much interest, and often with great humor, upon various phases of Scottish minstrelsy, deal in many cases with contemporary literary affairs, and in several instances throw new light upon that rich period of Scotch lyrical renascence in which Burns took so exalted and influential a part. This section of the letters does not, however, in its importance, excel those written more recently, and the confidential epistles of men like Byron, Scott, Moore and Dickens (whose wife was Thomson's granddaughter) contain matter which no sympathetic student of English literature could read without the most intense interest.

The existence of these letters—carefully preserved by the relatives and descendants of George Thomson—was only a few days ago made known to such eminent literateurs as Masson and Henley, and it is understood that some of those more closely related to Burns will find publication in a permanent form in Henley's edition of "Burns' Life and Letters," to be issued some time next year. The publication of the letters as a whole—or at all events such of them and extracts of others as are considered of the greatest public interest—by the present custodian of the collection, and the first, though by no means the most interesting, installment, will include letters from Mrs. Robert Burns (Jean Armour), Gilbert Burns, the brother of the poet, and James Glencairn Burns, the son of the poet. These letters seem to us indirectly to settle at once and for all, if that were necessary, the old Thomson controversy as to the poet's remuneration. They give—what is perhaps more important—a singularly fresh and vivid idea of the character and intellect of not only Gilbert Burns (whose acquaintance with letters was, as is well known, far ahead of that possessed by most men in his position to-day), but of Jean Armour, who was, without doubt, a much more fitting helpmate for her gifted husband than our day of the bas bleu and the new woman gives her credit for.—Glasgow News.

A ROOSTER IN EVIDENCE.

Brought Into Court and Placed on the Witness Stand.

In a stealing case which was tried in the county court at Sylvania, Ga., a very extraordinary witness was introduced—the first of his kind that has ever appeared in our court house. This was a dominick rooster. Two negro boys were prosecuted for stealing chickens from another negro. The prosecutor proved that his chickens were missing, and he claimed to have identified them in the yard of the accused. It then devolved on the latter to prove their ownership. One of our brightest young lawyers was conducting the defense, and he very ingeniously introduced in evidence the above mentioned dominick rooster, which belonged to the defendants, in order to show the similarity in appearance between his roostership and the suspected chickens. This rooster was lord of the barnyard on the place where the two boys lived, and the disputed chickens were so very much like him in color and other ways that no one doubted they were his lineal descendants. The rooster, when put on the stand, began at once to crow lustily, as if desiring to proclaim the innocence of the accused, and furnished much amusement to the court. After hearing all the evidence in the case and inspecting the rooster the judge discharged the prisoners and told the prosecutor that, while it was perhaps true he had lost his chickens, yet he was convinced they had become the prey of owls or 'possums.—Savannah News.

The Mortality of Physicians.

An interesting paper has recently appeared on the mortality and causes of death in medical men. This paper is based on the records of 450 physicians who died in New York and Brooklyn during the past eight years. The average age at death was 54.6 years, and the mortality was about 25.23 as compared with a mortality of 15.93 in clergymen and 20.23 in lawyers. There is a considerable mortality from the self-administration of drugs. That from consumption is about half the general rate, while that from typhoid fever is very high. There is a high death rate due to arterial sclerosis and other degenerative changes. The practical conclusion deduced from these statistics is that doctors should take at least three weeks' rest and change yearly, should be extremely moderate in the use of stimulants, should be regular in their meals, never worry and never hurry. This is a kind of advice that doctors give but do not take. The further suggestion, however, that they all join some medical society and life insurance society is a wise one.

HARRISON TO WED.

The Ex-president Will Marry Mrs. Dimmick.

New York, Jan. 20.—The fact that Gen. Harrison had an important statement to make drew a large crowd of politicians and others to the corridors of the Fifth Avenue hotel to-day. Many of the politicians expected that Gen. Harrison would make a declaration as to his candidacy for the presidency, and were disappointed when they heard that the general talked of matrimonial affairs instead of politics. At the appointed time Mr. Tibbitts, the general's private secretary, made the following statement in his room, where he received the members of the press:

"Gen. Harrison authorizes the announcement that he and Mrs. Dimmick are engaged to be married, and that the marriage will not take place until after Lent."

When the secretary finished reading the announcement, he refused to say anything further other than that ex-President Harrison would probably leave for Indianapolis on Monday, returning to Washington in time to argue the Stanford law suit. During the life of Mrs. Harrison, her aunt, Mrs. Dimmick, practically governed Mr. Harrison's household in Indianapolis, and directed the household affairs of the White House during the period that Mrs. Harrison was ill. At all state functions she received with Mrs. Harrison. Mrs. Dimmick is 40 years of age, tall, and a strikingly handsome brunette.

SUSPEND FRESHIES.

Wild Scene in the Medical Department of Minnesota's University.

Minneapolis, Jan. 20.—The whole entire freshman class in the medical school at the state university was suspended this morning. It was through a paper fight held in the recitation room of Dr. G. A. Hendricks. When the class arrived the doctor was not there, but in each seat was a handbill advertising some 'varsity event. One enterprising youth made a cornucopia which he shied gracefully across the room into a classmate's ear; the idea took like wildfire, and in a jiffy the handbills were flying about the room in every conceivable shape which would make them available as projectiles. The recitation room is an amphitheater, and so the missiles gradually gravitated down toward the professor's desk, and when he arrived it was fairly buried. Dr. Hendricks was so incensed that he refused to lecture, and later Dean Millard announced that the entire class was suspended indefinitely. After a class committee had had a conference with the medical school officers and President Northrop, however, it was agreed that the class might come back to work.

Club House Robbed.

New York, Jan. 20.—Five members of the Calumet club reported to-day that their rooms in the club building had been entered last night and robbed of jewelry valued at about $5,000. The jewels were found to-day in an old lavatory by a truck driver. The police have no clue to the robbers, but think that they had placed the jewels in the lavatory temporarily, and, becoming frightened, left them behind.

Grave Charges Are Made.

St. Paul, Jan. 20.—Attorney G. W. Turnbull made an application to the supreme court to-day that E. C. Brame, an attorney of Minneapolis, be disbarred for misconduct in office. It is alleged that the attorney misappropriated funds entrusted to him by two clients, Charlotte Spooner of Minneapolis and Mrs. Hyatt of St. Paul. A hearing in the case will be given on the 27th.

Church Row Settled.

Washington, Jan. 20.—The disagreement between the co-pastors of the First Presbyterian church, Dr. T. De-Witt Talmage and Rev. Adolos Allen, has been settled by the church session calling for Mr. Allen's resignation. The church will honor the recent contract for Mr. Allen's services up to Oct. 1 next, but in order to avoid future complications he has been asked to tender his resignation as early as practicable.

Campbellsport, Wis., Jan. 20.—Peter Uhlman, a farmer living near here, was accidentally shot this morning while hunting, the charge tearing his legs in a horrible manner. Amputation was necessary, and he will probably die.

Free Home Bill.

Washington, Jan. 20.—The special committee on public lands to-day decided to report to the house the free-home bill proposed by Chairman Lacey of Iowa, which is practically a revival of the old homestead laws.

GROW RICH, EVERY FARMER.

The editor thinks it to be the wish of everybody to grow rich, not for the sake of the money, but for the good that can be done with the money. Now, there are three new cereals recently created that will make money for the farmer. One is Silver King Barley, the most wonderful creation of the age, yielding 90, 100 to 116 bu. per acre in 1895, and there are thousands of farmers who believe they can grow 150 bu. per acre therefrom in 1896.

Then there is Silver Mine Oats, yielding in 1895 209 bu. per acre. Every farmer who tested it, believes 250 bu. possible.

Then there is Golden Triumph Corn, which produced over 200 bu. per acre, and 250 bu. is surely possible.

And potatoes, there is Salzer's Earliest, which was fit for table in 28 days in 1895, yielding tremendously, while the Champion of the World, tested in a thousand different places in 1895, yielded from 8 to 1,600 bu. per acre.

Now, in Salzer's new catalogue there is a wonderful arrayal of new varieties of wheat, oats, barley, rye, potatoes, grasses, clovers and forage plants, and the editor believes that it would pay every farmer a thousand-fold to get this catalogue before buying seeds.

If you will cut this out and send it with 10 cents postage to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., you will receive, free, 10 grain and grass samples, including above and their mammoth catalogue. Catalogue alone, 5 cents postage. w.n.

Sebastopol was Not Impregnable.
For it was taken by assault, but a physique built up, a constitution fortified by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, may bid defiance to the assaults of malarious disease even in localities where it is most prevalent and malignant. Emigrants to the ague-breeding sections of the West should bear this in mind, and start with a supply. The Bitters promptly subdue dyspepsia, rheumatic and kidney complaints, nervousness, constipation and biliousness.

Thrown Into the Shade.

Louise—The bishop looked awfully cross, didn't he?

High, Low, Jack.
Fine ice means very cold weather, then cycle, a high old time in skating rinks, and skating ponds, on slides and rides, and we go home tired and overheated. It's the same old story of cooling off with wraps and on with all sorts of aches and pains, rheumatic, neuralgic, sciatic, lumbagic, including frost-bites, backache, even toothache. They who dance must pay the piper. We cut up Jack and are brought low by our own folly. What if it, the dance will go on, all the same. It is generally known that St. Jacob's Oil will cure all such aches and pains separately or collectively, and the cry is, on with the dance.

His Way.

The Crookston Tribune is authority for the statement that Thief River Falls and Red Lake Rapids will soon unite under the name of Beau Falls this is of course very "Beautiful" but we would suggest that Pugnacilus Falls would under the circumstances be much more appropriate.

Yesterday E. T. Spafford the well known merchant of Thompson, petitioned Judge Templeton for an order declaring him insolvent, and the petition was granted. The schedule was filed shows that the liabilities are $59,223.15 the assets $92,000 the excess thus being $35,679.87. The creditors will at once proceed to select an assignee. The assignee was brought about by the crowding of some few of the creditors, and in his temporary embarrassment Mr. Spafford has the sympathy of many friends, who are certain that his retirement from business will be but for a short time, Considerable of the assets are in real estate that will find a ready sale.

Geo. J. McManus formerly a resident of Crookston, writes from Beaumont, Texas to a friend in this city giving a long and richly painted description of that country. Geo. is at the head of a land and immigration company and is hustling for new settlers. He would like to get some from this neighbourhood but will hardly succeed. Our people are all well content with their lot in the Red River Valley and are thorough believers in the old adage that a bird in the hand gathers no moss or words to that effect,—Crookston Times,

Most of the drills and other mining machinery in the gold belt of South Africa are made in the United States A Pennsylvania firm has a big agricultural machinery warehouse at Kimberley and Chicago machine works are well represented in that region and American mining engineers are in demand there. American locomotives are sold all over the world and American machinery of every kind is in demand because it is the best. John Hayes Hammond, under arrest at Pretoria is an accomplished American mining engineer. Within 20 years American mechanical skill will capture the worlds trade.—Minneapolis Journal,

A telegram from Washington received this afternoon says that the order has been approved by the president detaching Beltrami county north of town 145 from St. Cloud land district attaching the same to the Crookston district,

A great deal of credit for this change is due to Col. Naff. of the Interior department, located in this city who investigated the matter some time ago and sent in a report that left no mistake as to his position in the matter and plainly showed with accompanying maps and statement of settlers, the injustice of retaining the land as part of the land as part of the St. Cloud district. Congressman Eddy is entitled to much praise for bringing the matter to a speedy action:

The change will make considerable more work for Crookston,—Crookston Tribune.

The Sunday and the 11 o'clock closing movement will now become popular in Polk County, There is no question but what such a movement if vigorously enforced would soon become popular and would be accepted as the thing: but custom and habit have made it possible since this country was discovered to get any kind of liquids at all hours of the night, or even upon the Sabbath, that the people have come to look upon the priviliges as an inherited right. In some of the larger cities of England, Ireland Scotland and Wales, a man dying with thirst can procure liquid on Sundays by simply making an affidavit to an inn-keeper that he has traveled so many miles the same day. The idea of such a law is without doubt a disposal on the part of its framers to throw as many obstacles as possible in the way of the man who is continually looking for his grog on the Sabbath day,—East Grand Forks Courier.

It has been an busy one, has the current session of the grand jury, and today they topped out the stack of indictments which they have brought forth so voluminously with a bakers dozen of capias against Crookston venders of the ardent, Of the nineteen saloons in the city thirteen were adjudged guilty of selling liquor on Sunday, It is easier to mention those not under the ban than it is those who have incurred the displeasure of the powers. The lucky ones are T C Thompson, P. Stuhl F. Brosseau E. Bolsch Fred Reyer and M. Mercil The rule has been indicted earlier in the session, to plead guilty and pay a fine which has been $50 and cost with an additional sentence of ten days in jail which latter has been suspended during good behavior,

The grand jury has spent the afternoon visiting the jail and court house and will probably be discharged tonight

When court opened this morning L. K Duckstad and W. T. Peterson of Fertile, contributed their share of the saloon fund in the sum of $50 and cost

May Holmes next faced the music and plead guilty to keeping a house of ill-fame. One hundred dollars and cost Here's your stuff said May as she planked down a roll and went on her way rejoicing.

Thirteen more East Grand Forks saloon keepers put in appearance and $50 and costs each for selling liquor on Sunday.

LATER,—At a late hour this afternoon the grand jury examined the jail also books of the auditor and treasurer and reported everything in apple pie order. A resolution was also passed recommending that no more money be spent upon repairs of the court house:—Crookston Times

AFTER LIONS.

Sleeping In the Jungle Is Modified by the Surrounding Dangers.

Some of those evenings in the jungle are among my pleasantest recollections. What greater pleasure than coming in from a successful hunt to find one's companion has had his share of sport and over the postprandial coffee to mutually recite one's experiences of the day? The darkness succeeding the fall of day is just giving way to the bright light of the rising moon, whose rapidly widening silver edge we see through the tops of the mimosa jungle. The circle of fire in the zareba throws a ruddy glow on the picturesque figures of the men grouped about them at their meal or preparing for rest. In the far distance we hear the howl of the hyena or the gruff bark of the questing lion. His majesty may perhaps be inclined to visit us later in the evening. Very well, we will give him a royal reception. "Achmed, tell Aden to put the ten bore and half a dozen cartridges in my bed." Eight o'clock—time to turn in. "Where's my revolver? Ah, here it is. I will put it under my pillow, as usual, for fear of accidents." "Good night." "Night." And we are soon asleep to a brief lullaby from the sentry, who never ceases singing throughout his watch; asleep, but not a heavy slumber; any unusual noise, and we shall both be wide awake, having wakened up suddenly without a movement unless it be that of a hand to a weapon; wide awake to drop off again the moment we are satisfied that all is well.

It is a wonderful faculty of the human mind which enables it to adapt its sleep to circumstances. At home we lay our heads down and sleep till shouted at by a servant, who has banged about the room for ten minutes previously. Go to the jungle or the prairie, and our sleep is set on a hair trigger. We wake ten times in the night, and ten times we are asleep again within half a minute, having made sure all is right. As the night advances we are glad to pull the waterproof sheets over us, sometimes right over our heads, to keep off the heavy dew, which otherwise would soak us to the skin. Long before daylight Jama would be called by the sentry, whose clock was a star, and in his turn go and wake V. with the remark: "I think so, sir. It's half past 3." V., drawing his watch—our only chronometer—from under the pillow, would check the accuracy of Jama's assertion with the aid of a match, and if his statement held water would order a start. My own watch, a cheap one, broke down very soon after entering the Haud, so we had to rely entirely on V.'s timepiece—an excellent lever watch—for our observations.

On one occasion the sentry must have dropped off to sleep a moment and then wakened up again to find the stars obscured by clouds. Thinking apparently that he had had a prolonged nap, he woke Jama, who addressed to V. his usual matutinal salutation of, "I think so, sir. It's half past 3." Imagine my companion's feelings when he found on consulting his watch that it was only midnight!—Nineteenth Century.

Alleged Causes of Intemperance.

I think that temperance reformers would do well to consider more than they do the causes that lead to the drinking habit and endeavor if possible to combat these. Instead of this they trust to lectures and the closing of public houses and all such nonsense. There are in my village of about 1,000 inhabitants at least 15 inns. Now, I believe that if all were closed but one drinking would go on just the same, and that one single innkeeper would make his fortune. It is a curious thing to say perhaps, but it is true that some men are born a glass too low. Their nerves are finely strung; they are easily raised to joy and easily cast down. These men or women are very apt to become drunkards. This is the reason that so many geniuses go to the bad. Ill health is another cause of intemperance, tiredness and fatigue, dyspepsia, too jolly company, billiards and card playing. Oh, if space permitted I could name a score more, but last, though not least, come the want of sympathy at home and a scolding, sulking or nagging wife.—Edinburgh Scotchman.

How to "Salt" Almonds.

To prepare salted almonds blanch them by pouring boiling water over them and rubbing the brown skin off with a rough cloth. When they are blanched and quite dry, measure them, and over each cupful of nuts pour a tablespoonful of the best olive oil. Let them stand for an hour and then sprinkle a tablespoonful of salt over each cupful, mixing it thoroughly. Spread them out on a flat tin pan and put them in a not too hot oven until they have become a delicate brown.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The number of pensioners on the rolls at the outbreak of the civil war was 8,636, and the disbursements in their behalf were $1,072,462.

THE ROMAN COLISEUM.

And one stands there alone in the stillness and remembers how, on that night when all was over, when the corpses had all been dragged away and the arena had been freshly strewn with sand, it may have been almost as it is now. Only perhaps far off among the arches and on the tiers of seats there might be still a tiny light moving here and there. The keepers of the terrible place would go their rounds with their little earthen lamps. They would search everywhere in the spectators' places for small things that might have been lost in the press—a shoulder buckle of gold or silver or bronze, an armlet, a woman's earring, a purse, perhaps, with something in it. And the fitful night breeze would now and then make them shade their lights with their dark hands. By the "door of the dead" a torch was burning down in its socket, its glare falling upon a heap of armor, mostly somewhat battered and all of it blood stained. A score of black browed smiths were picking it over and distributing it in heaps, according to its condition. Now and then from the deep vaults below the arena came the distant sound of a clanging gate, or of some piece of huge stage machinery falling into its place, and a muffled calling of men. One of the keepers, with his light, was singing softly some ancient minor strain as he searched the tiers. That would be all, and presently even that would cease.

One thinks of such things naturally enough, and then the dream runs backward against the sun, as dreams will, and the moon rays weave a vision of dim day. Straightway, tier upon tier, 80,000 faces rise up to the last high rank beneath the awning's shade. Meanwhile, under his silken canopy, sits the emperor of the world, sodden faced, ghastly, swine eyed, robed in purple; all alone save for his dwarf, bull nosed, slit mouthed, hunchbacked, sly. Next, on the lowest bench, the vestals, old and young, the elder looking on with hard faces and dry eyes, the youngest with wide and startled looks, and parted lips, and quick drawn breath that sobs and is caught at sight of each deadly stab and gash of broadsword and trident, and hands that twitch and clutch each other as a man's foot slips in a pool of blood, and the heavy harness clashes in the red, wet sand. Then gray haired senators; then curled and perfumed knights of Rome, and then the people, countless, vast, frenzied, bloodthirsty, stretching out 100,000 hands with thumbs reversed, commanding death to the fallen—full 80,000 throats of men and women roaring, yelling, shrieking over each ended life. A theater indeed, a stage indeed, a play wherein every scene of every act ends in a sudden death.

And then the wildest, deadliest howl of all on that day; a handful of men and women in white and one girl in the midst of them; the clang of an iron gate thrown suddenly open; a rushing and leaping of great lithe bodies of beasts, yellow and black and striped, the sand flying in clouds behind them; a worrying and crushing of flesh and bone, as of huge cats worrying little white mice; three sharp cries, then blood, then silence, then a great laughter, and the sodden face of mankind's drunken master grows almost human for a moment with a very slow smile. The wild beasts are driven out with brands step by step, dragging backward nameless mangled rags of humanity in their dripping jaws, and the bull nosed dwarf offers the emperor a cup of rare red wine. It drips from his mouth while he drinks, as the blood from the tigers' fangs.

"What were they?" he asks.

"Christians," explains the dwarf.

"They were very amusing," answers the emperor. "They were like little white mice. We will have more."—Marion Crawford in January Century.

Such Is Human Consistency.

During a matinee given not long ago on behalf of the Royal Society For the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals attention was attracted by a coroneted carriage waiting outside the theater, the horses of which were conspicuously suffering under all the torture of bearing reins and gag bits. The performance being over, the noble owner drove away, apparently without a thought for the sufferings of his own horses and possibly nursing the sweet reflection that he had helped to supply the means of prosecuting some costermonger for ill treating his donkey.—London Truth.

The Greeks' Failing.

The Greeks, notwithstanding their genius in other matters, having only a glimmering of the use of the arch, could not construct bridges of any size.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

"Why do you take such pains to look like an Englishman?"

"So that I shall not have to be polite."—New York Times.

The general belief among doctors is that consumption itself is very rarely inherited. But the belief is becoming stronger that the tendency to consumption is very generally transmitted from parent to child. If there has been consumption in the family, each member should take special care to prepare the system against it. BOY PEDDLERS.

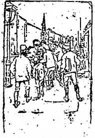
Queer Ways of Earning a Humble Living.

In all big cities there are scores of boys between the ages of eight and sixteen, who are thrown on their own resources and must find food, lodging and clothing as best they may. Various philanthropists have recognized this state of things and have established lodging houses, where a bed for the night costs 6 cents; breakfast and dinner the same. No provision is made for lunch. The manner in which many of these children earn the all-important 18 cents a day is interesting.

Three of the most enterprising boys, all under thirteen, have gone into the wood business. They have rented a cellar for $2 a month, a cellar without any floor, and unlighted save for the opening on the pavement above, where a flight of steps leads down, and here they carry all the stray bits of wood, odd boxes, frames, hoops, etc., which they can find.

These they break up into splinters, bundle up neatly and sell in the big tenements where many families live on different floors, and the little wood-peddlers carry their wares right up to the doors of the living rooms. As the wood costs them nothing, they can afford to sell it at a low rate.



Reading the Advertisements.

They give a good-sized bundle, all split up ready for the stove, for 12 cents, and sell it easily.

Picking up old iron, horse shoes, nails, bolts, etc., along the lines of the car tracks is another mode by which certain boys earn a livelihood.

The iron is sold to the junk men, and often the pickers make 15 or 20 cents a day. The boys often find odd pennies and pieces of money along the line of the surface roads.

Boys with deft fingers and a steady, domestic turn of mind make good wages washing dishes in the big restaurants; others make themselves useful about the big markets, waiting on the butchers, carrying out orders, etc. Scores of boys also find employment carrying out lunches from the box lunch companies to the varous business men, journalists, lawyers, clerks, etc., who are too much occupied to leave their desks even for half an hour.

The very first thing that these self-supporting boys do in the morning is to buy or borrow a newspaper, so that they can be on the lookout for business. Sometimes two or three club together and get a paper, or else they levy on the kindness of their newsboy acquaintances.

No broker, banker or widely-known merchant reads stile advertisements with more attention or avidity than do these little waifs assembled in the gray light of morning in front of the lodging house. No one is allowed in the lodging house during the day, so when they get breakfast they are turned out until 6 o'clock that evening.

"A canal boat is in; there'll be a chance," says one, making a bee line for the wharf.

"The Helen Mar came up to the dock last night. Some of you fellows come help unload. We might get three or four dozen oranges to sell or a bunch of bananas,' another suggests.

"Big fire on X street; that tall clothing house and men's furnishing place; good pickings there, boys," is announced from another quarter, and in pretty quick time the group is dispersed and gone to work for the day.

"I got these two dozen pairs of damaged kids," says a boy that evening. "They are some that were saved from the fire, and they were distributed among those of us who worked hardest clearing away the rubbish."

"I'll sell them at 10 cents a pair."

Another worker at the scene of the fire produces a lot of suspenders and collar buttons, and goes off into the big boys' department to offer the goods. The "big boys' department" is the dormitory of boys in permanent situations, who are able to pay 10 cents instead of 6 for a bed, but who otherwise share the accommodations of the younger inmates.

To help clean up a canal boat is alway a desirable job, paid for in what ever the canal boat has brought into port. Potatoes, it may be, or some other vegetable, maybe poultry, which the boy can sell, and in many instances he is given the residue of the coal bin, which is a perfect bonanza to him, anything in the shape of fuel always being in demand. A supply of coal so gained is often supplemented by a visit to the dumping grounds at the terminus of various railroads, where, among the disgorged ashes and rubbish, a quantity of half-burned cinders can be gathered. The boy mixes this last picking with the good coal gotten from the boat and sells it to certain customers with considerable profit.—Philadelphia Inquirer

EXPERTS IN CHEMISTRY.

Germans Lead the World in the Mysticism of the Laboratory.

"Made in Germany" is now the recognized trade mark for chemicals throughout the world. The dyes and by-products derived from coal tar have become a classical instance, or, as Bacon would have said, a glaring example. As we have stated, the fatherlanders have captured these trades from us. Go to Elberfeld, and what do we see? At the Farbenfabriken, besides first-class works, we are shown a laboratory unsurpassed, perhaps not equaled in London, and employed in research or in the business there are sixty first-class chemists. In the Badische Anilin and Sodafabrik seventy-eight chemists are engaged. An expert witness told the Gresham commission that six skilled chemists was the maximum number employed in any English color works, if, indeed, there were so many. These men are unceasingly active in research. The price to pay for progress is eternal vigilance. Every hint from England, France, America or Italy is tried; every new material tested; every hopeful process patented. The great works at Höchst made in 1890 from 1,700 to 1,800 colors, they employed 3,000 hands, 70 chemists and 12 engineers. A firm in Offenbach with 300 workers had 45 investigators.

The lesson that has been driven home in the fatherland is that industrial processes carried on upon a large scale give great chances for discovery. Just as gas making gave aniline so the soap boilers' lye yielded iodine, the waste of salt gardens bromine, the mother liquors from the springs Caesium and rubidium, the acid chambers selenium and thallium, the mines and metallurgical works gallium and germanium. Therefore the "chemiker," on the other side of the Rhine, is always looking out for something new. He found it in the benzidine and azo dyes, the former giving Congo red and chrysamin, "the most important discovery of modern times so far as cotton dyeing is concerned." In short, as Dr. Ostwald has said, it is now a firm article of belief that "the secret of German industrial chemistry is the recognition that science is the best practice." In England it is greatly to be feared there still lingers faith in "the rule of thumb."—London Telegraph.

RUSSIA'S NAVY GROWING.

Baltic and Black Sea Works Turning Out Warships.

The Russian navy continues to grow apace. A few days ago the Admiral Oushakoff, the first of a new class of vessels, designed especially for coast defense, had her steam trials in the Baltic, maintaining a speed of fifteen knots for twelve hours. Although of comparatively small displacement, she carries a powerful armament, consisting of four 10-inch breech-loading guns placed in two armored turrets, four 120-mm. caliber new pattern quick-firing guns, twenty-four small caliber Hotchkiss and four torpedo-launching tubes. A complete belt of armor and an armor deck from stem to stern protect the vitals of the ship, all machinery, boilers, etc., being placed below the protective deck.

At St. Petersburg there is constant activity in naval affairs. The cruiser Rurik, built and engined by the Baltic works, is at anchor in Cronstadt Roads, having satisfactorily completed her steam and gun trials. The battleship Navarin, built and engined in St. Petersburg, is about to make steam trials. The battleships Poltava, Sevastopol and Petropaulovsk, all built in government dock yards, have their machinery on board, and will be ready for trial next spring. The Sissol Veligy and Admiral Senyayin are both practically ready for trial at sea. The Admiral Apraxin is almost ready to be launched.

The two last named vessels are of the Admiral Oushakoff class. The triple-screw cruiser Russia is being rapidly constructed in the new building shed of the Baltic works and is expected to be launched next year. Besides these, there are several new vessels just begun or to be soon laid down.

In the Black sea the battleships Catherina, Tchesma, Sinope, Twelve Apostles and George Pobedonosetz are completed and fully equipped. The latest addition of the same class is the Three Saints, now in an advanced stage of construction and awaiting steam trials.—London Letter.

MOTHERS-IN-LAW UP NORTH.

Those of British Columbia Have No Favorite Sons-in-Law.

A committee which has just returned to England from British Columbia, where it has been engaged in making investigations among the savages for the enlightenment of the anthropological section of the British association, reports the discovery of a tribe known as the Ts'ete'a'ut. This tribe, though in most respects outrageously barbarous, has made one extraordinary stride forward toward civilization, for among them this committee "found the custom of avoidance between mother-in-law and son-in-law." This custom is entitled "matuo ha," a term which bears some resemblance to "mutual hate."

This habit was common to all the Tinneh tribes. The savage sons-in-law were not only ashamed to take to each other, but even carefully avoided seeing each other. The reason for this curious avoidance could not be discovered.—New York World.

About Shipping Poultry.

In shipping live poultry have the coops high enough that they can stand up; low coops are cruel, and there is danger of suffocation. For the same reasons do not overcrowd. A fine coop of hens will be depreciated if a number of cocks be among them; keep them separate. Contrive to have them arrive in market in the middle of the week; receipts increase toward the last of the week, and Monday there is some stock left over from Saturday, usually. Nor is Monday a good day to sell poultry.—Indiana Farmer.

The Cure for a Cold.

"No, sir," said the gentleman from Kentucky, "out our way we never tell a man what to do for a cold."

"Is that so?"

"Certainly. If a gentleman in Kentucky, sir, has a cold, and doesn't know what to do for it, sir, it shows at once that he is an alien, and not entitled to our neighborly offices, sir."—Washington Star.

Parker's Ginger Tonic.

Of the many good things to be found in American homes, we do not believe that any are held in higher esteem, or have done better service than Parker's Ginger Tonic. It has grown to be a household necessity and is serviceable in almost every case where there is weakness and infirmity. There are forms of female debility that make life a burden. The same is true of persistent coughs and colds, and distressing stomach and nervous ills. They have held high revel in many homes until banished by Parker's Ginger Tonic and we are proud of the record that has made so many hearts grateful.

Horrible Selfishness.

A.—Who was that elegant gentleman with whom you were talking yesterday?

B.—He is a wealthy young man from Boston.

"He seems to be very much of a gentleman. I wish you would give me the pleasure of an introduction to him."

"Not much. I'm going to try and borrow some money from him myself."

INDIAN WISDOM.

A noted Professor, Dr. C. von Spiegel of Saratoga, N. Y., credits them with many remedies used by him in effecting difficult cures.

Useful hints to many who suffer, where they might enjoy the Indian's proverbial good health and longevity but for the prejudice of Ignorance.

The once existing idea that no possible good or knowledge could be obtained from an Indian is fast disappearing.

When such a man as Dr. C. von Spiegel of Saratoga Springs, in an article published in the daily Saratogian of Sept. 14, states that he is indebted, not only to the North American Indians—Kickapoos, Cheyennes, Arapahoes, Pawnees, Apaches, Kiowas, Comanches, etc., but to the many so called uncivilized nations of the most remote corners of the globe,—for his enormous collection and the knowledge of their virtues, of roots, herbs, barks, gums and balsams, by whose use he has effected the most extraordinary cures in innumerable desperate cases, it would seem that the world at large should no longer hesitate to look for help from such simple but potent agencies—no matter their origin—instead of dragging out miserable lives of sickness that is aggravated by poisonous mineral drugs.

PROF. CHRISTIAN VON SPIEGEL, M. D.

With such words of praise from a man of Dr. von Spiegel's standing, a regular physician, a graduate and member of several universities, a man who has built up an enviable reputation by his many cures, some of which have been almost miraculous, we are doubly encouraged to call the attention of suffering humanity to the merits of our all-powerful specifics, The Kickapoo Indian Remedies.

The best known of these is Kickapoo Indian Sagwa, that greatest of blood purifiers and corrector of all derangements of the stomach, kidneys and liver. It is purely vegetable and contains no poisonous ingredients whatever. Thousands are enjoying healthy, happy, active lives today, who but for its timely use would now be leading the miserable life of a dependent cripple, or filling a premature grave, the victims of bad blood, nervousness, consumption, dyspepsia, rheumatism, dropsy, kidney and liver complaints.

Each year it becomes better known and more highly appreciated. Each day hundreds join the happy ones who have been cured by its use and sing its praise.

We want sufferers everywhere to give it a single trial. You will be convinced of its merits and bless the day you first heard of Sagwa. All druggists sell it.

If you wish medical advice free, write us; one of our staff of physicians will gladly give you such information as you may desire. The Kickapoo Indian Medicine Co., New Haven, Conn.

LINCOLN AS A GROCER'S CLERK.

His Sense of Chivalry and Love of Fair Dealing.

The precise date of the opening of Denton Offut's store is not known. We only know that on July 8, 1831, the county commissioners' court of Sangamon county granted Offut a license to retail merchandise at New Salem; for which he paid $5, a fee which supposed him to have $1,000 worth of goods in stock. When the oxen and their drivers returned with the goods, the store was opened in a little log house on the brink of the hill, almost over the river.

The frontier store filled a unique place. Usually it was a general store, and on its shelves were found most of the articles needed in a community of pioneers. But to be a place for the sale of dry goods and groceries was not its only function, it was a kind of intellectual and social center. It was the common meeting place of the farmers, the happy refuge of the village loungers. No subject was unknown there. The habitues of the place were equally at home in talking politics, religion or sport. Stories were told, jokes were cracked and laughed at, and the news contained in the latest newspaper finding its way into the wilderness was discussed. Such a store was that of Denton Offutt. Lincoln could hardly have chosen surroundings more favorable to the highest development of the art of story-telling, and he had not been there long before his reputation for drollery was established.

A man came into the store one day, who used profane language in the presence of ladies. Lincoln asked him to stop; but the man persisted, swearing that nobody should prevent his saying what he wanted to. The women gone, the man began to abuse Lincoln so hotly that the latter finally said, coolly: "Well, if you must be whipped. I suppose I might as well whip you as any other man," and, going out doors with the fellow, he threw him on the ground and rubbed smartweed in his eyes until he bellowed for mercy. New Salem's sense of chivalry was touched, and enthusiasm over Lincoln increased.

His honesty excited no less admiration. Two incidents seem to have particularly impressed the community. Having discovered, on one occasion, that he had taken 6 1-4 cents too much from a customer, he walked three miles that evening after his store was closed, to return the money. Again, he weighed out half a pound of tea, as he supposed. It was night, and this was the last thing he did before closing up. On entering in the morning, he discovered a four-ounce weight on the scales. He saw his mistake; and, closing up shop, hurried off to deliver the remainder of the tea.—McClure's Magazine.

NOISELESS MACHINES.

Gearings of Rawhide Supplanting Metal Shafting.

Every day sees an increase in the use of modern raw hide gearings because of their many excellent advantages. A striking illustration of their operation is afforded at the plant of the American Book company in New York. In their new building on Washington Square, all the presses, folding machines, cutters, etc., are operated each by a separate electric motor. The speed of the presses is adapted to different kinds of work by changing the pinions in the motor shafts, which engage with the operating gear of the press, the motor being adjustable in position to an extent sufficient to compensate for the difference in diameter.

On machines where no other gearing is employed there is no noise beyond a soft purr, while on the presses and other machines where metal gears are used in contact the contrast between the noise of the ordinary and the smooth, quiet running of the rawhide gear is so decided as to impress one very forcibly with the advantage which a press fitted with raw-hide pinions throughout would possess.

Rawhide as a material for gears has been through the experimental stage and its practicability and durability is an established fact. By compression and elimination, in the process by which the pinions referred to are manufactured, the discs of which the gear blank is made up are rendered more like horn than leather in their composition, retaining, however, a toughness which allows them to bend double without cracking. They run without lubrication, and in the plant referred to above show no deterioration after several months of use. Their extensive use in street railway work is a sufficient demonstration of their durability. There are many directions in which their use can be extended to advantage.—Power.

To Utilize the Solar Heat.

If the sun's heat that falls upon a square yard of ground could all be saved and utilized in steam engines the power generated, according to Prof. Langley, would be as much as a full horse-power. At the Paris exposition of 1878 a solar engine produced power enough to run a printing press. Ericsson invented a solar engine that might have a practical value in the Sahara, where a large proportion of the solar energy that strikes the outer part of the atmosphere penetrates to the bottom of the aerial sea. We hear a great deal of the vast power to be obtained by utilizing the Falls of Niagara, but the sun power wasted on the District of Columbia, says the professor, is a hundred times as great. Unfortunately there have been no thoroughly practical inventions to harness the sun's wasted energy. The day will come, doubtless, when it will be utilized. In that day the deserts, with their dry atmosphere, will become the centers of large industries, and will, to a certain extent, be reclaimed.

The intensity of the sun's heat and the amount of energy dispersed through the universe in his rays are beyond conception. Every minute enough heat comes to the earth from the sun to bring 37,000,000,000 tons of water to the boiling point. And the sun gives out heat enough to supply 2,000,000,000 of such worlds as ours. The coal beds of Pennsylvania will suffice for this country's use for centuries, yet if the whole coal stock of the state were consumed in one puff the heat generated would not be equal to the sun's product in the one-thousandth part of a second. Recent experiments show that it is difficult to conceive what the properties of matter would be at extremely low temperatures. It is even more difficult to conceive what they are at the temperatures prevailing in the sun.—Baltimore Sun.

SALZER'S SEEDS

HURRAH, FARMERS! SHOUT FOR JOY!

Fine, luxuriant pastures and rich meadows, producing tremendous hay yields (4 to 6 tons per acre), are now made possible on every soil, in every clime, by sowing our Extra Grass and Clover Mixtures. You won't need to wait a lifetime for a good start of grass, for we have grasses which, if sown in April, will produce a rousing crop in July. Pamphlet on Grass Culture, etc.; 2 cents postage.

WE PAY $400 IN GOLD PRIZES

On Oats, Barley and Corn! The biggest yield on Silver Mine (Nameless Beauty) Oats in 1895 was 207 bushels; the next [illegible] per acre. You can beat that in 1896 and win [illegible]! Our new tested Barley, Oats, Corn and Potatoes will revolutionize farming! We are the largest growers of farm seeds in the world! Our seeds produce—as the editor of the Rural New Yorker says—Salzer's Early Wisconsin Potato yielded for me 736 bushels per acre. If an early sort yields 736 bushels, what will a late do! Potatoes only $1.50 per barrel.

EARLIEST VEGETABLES IN THE WORLD.

Splendid sorts, fine yields. Onion Seed only 90c. per lb. 35 pkgs. Earliest Vegetables, $1.00, postpaid. 10 pkgs. Flower Seeds, 25c. Everything at hard times prices. Wholesale Market Gardener's List, 4c. postage.

PITH OF THE NEWS.

EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

A General Resume of the Most Important News of the Week, From all Parts of the Globe, Boiled Down and Arranged in Convenient Form for Rapid Perusal by Busy People.

The Nation's Capital.

Congressman Kiefer has been placed in charge of bills affecting Minnesota, Wisconsin and Missouri public buildings.

The house committee on public lands has received from Secretary Smith a strong adverse report against the "free home" bill.

The comptroller of the currency has declared dividends in favor of the creditors of insolvent national banks as follows: Thirty per cent., the First National bank of Ravenna, Neb.; 30 per cent. the First National bank of Texarkana, Tex.; 15 per cent. the State National bank of Knoxville, Tenn.; 2 per cent. the Maverick National bank of Boston, Mass.

The secretary of war, the commanding general of the army, the President, and the Sherman statue committee of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee, met as as a committee of the war department for the consideration of competitive designs submitted for the equestrian statue of the late Gen. Sherman. They thought that none of the statues designated the character of Gen. Sherman, but selected four models with a view of further elaboration.

People in Print.

Jacob Doelger, the well known New York brewer, died of heart and kidney disease.

Oscar R. Burchard, a real estate dealer in Denver, is dead. He was a well known magazine writer and was fifty-two years old.

W. G. Sweeney, surveyor of customs at Dubuque, is dead, aged sixty-three. He was a Kentuckian and a relative of Secretary Carlisle.

The figure of Hon. Edward J. Phelps, ex-minister to England, is once more a familiar one in New Haven. Prof. Phelps has returned to resume his duties as lecturer in the law and academic departments of Yale.

In a recent letter to a friend, William E. Gladstone said "We are due at Biarritz on my birthday, a day on which, if I live to see it, I shall complete my eighty-sixth year. A long count—a great reckoning."

John B. Alley of Lynn, Mass., died at Boston, from paralysis. He was seventy-eight years old. He was an ex-representative in congress, a director of the Union Pacific railroad and a pioneer of the old Free Soil party. He was worth several million dollars.

Lord Brassey has scandilized Melbourne society. The first time he occupied the vice-regal box at the theater he noticed, sitting in the gallery, several sailors from his yacht, and, terrible to relate, "nodded familiarly" to them.

Durham White Stevens, the counselor of the Japanese legation in Washington, is an American who resided many years in Japan and became thoroughly acquainted with its languages, history and customs. Mr. Stevens is thoroughly American, but in diplomacy is Japan's right-hand man.

Mr. Andree of Stockholm, who will attempt to reach the north pole by balloon, is having his balloon made in Paris. It is to be finished on May 11, when it will be transported to Gothenburg, and then to a small island in the Spitzbergen group, whence the expedition will start.

Ex-President Harrison's mail delivered at his residence in Indianapolis, the last few days, was the heaviest that has been carried to the house since he was nominated, in 1888, for the presidency. The presumption is that the letters are from distant friends, offering their congratulations on his coming nuptials.

Robert G. Remsen, son of Henry Remsen, private secretary to Thomas Jefferson, died at New York. Mr. Remsen was president of the Patriarchs, and the originator of their ball. He was director in a dozen leading financial companies, among them the Manhattan Savings institution and the Knickerbocker Trust company.

Clara A. McAdow, who represented Montana on the woman's board of managers at the world's fair, died at Detroit from a complication of diseases, after a six-months' illness. She was a large owner of the Spotted Horse gold mines. Her wealth was estimated at $2,000,000. The gold pedestal of the Montana statue, the face of which resembles Ada Rehan, was supplied from her mines.

Casualties.

A fire in the Hotchkiss Rapid Fire Gun manufactory at St. Denis, France, caused damage to the extent of 1,000,000 francs.

By the falling of an elevator at the Ohio Steel company's plant at Youngstown, Ohio, three men were injured, probably fatally.

The clothing of Celia Harrison, living in Lyon, Iowa, took fire while she slept and she was burned to death. She was reputed to be a miser, but living in poverty.

San Francisco shipping and insurance men fear that some mishap has befallen the British ship Cadzow Forest. She arrived off the Columbia river January 4 and took Pilot Grassman aboard, but before she could get in was driven to sea.

While playing with several companions in an abandoned starch factory at Madison, Ind., Charles Lichlyter, aged 17, attempted to cross an old well. The rotten board covering gave way and he fell a distance of fifty feet, killing him instantly.

The British bark Pass of Killiecrankie has arrived at San Diego, Cal., with news of the loss of an unknown vessel, probably the same ship seen by the Casabora off Cape Horn. The Pass of Killierankie also reports the arrival at Callao of the British bark Empire a total wreck.

The Lehigh Valley passenger train from Wilkesbarre, in charge of Engineer Michael Lonzler and conductor George Reese, was precipitated into the depths of a coal mine near Hazelton, Pa. Lonzler was crushed to death. The fireman, Frederick Meyers, will probably die. There was a cavein and this let the engine down into the mine.

Crimes and Criminals.

Miss Mary E. Hills, supposed to have been murdered at Mamaroneck N. J., died of starvation.

A sensation was caused in political circles at Columbus, Ohio, by the indictment of three ex-members of the legislature on charges of bribery.

John Gibson, a Missouri farmer living across the river from Quincy, Ill., quarreled with his wife and killed himself. He was 70 years old and a veteran of two wars.

John and Thomas Mossengale, wanted for murder and horse stealing, were shot and killed by a posse in the Raccoon mountains, Tennessee, while resisting arrest.

City Treasurer George Johnson Robb of Moneton, Neb., is said to be a defaulter to the extent of $9,000, said to be due to speculations in the New York stock market. He is ill and probably will die.

Ed. Stanford, being refused accommodation at the Custer house, at Mattoon, Ill., went out on the sidewalk and fired five shots at the house. One of the shots took effect in Mrs. Custer's leg, inflicting a very painful wound. Stanford took to his heels and has not been arrested.

At Pierron, Ind., a station on the Vandalia road, a lot of woodchoppers camping in the woods got on a spree, and, because one of their number would not drink as often as the others thought necessary, they stripped him of his clothing, and, placing him on a stove, held him there till his flesh was burned to a crisp.

From Foreign Shores.

Relations between Italy and Brazil are strained.

Herr Baumbach, burgomaster of Dantzic and member of the diet, is dead.

It seems that Gen. Valeriano Weyler, instead of Gen. Polavieja, is to be governor general and captain general of Cuba.

It is officially announced that Hon. A. V. Boville, attorney general of the Island of Barbadoes, has been appointed attorney general of British Guiana.

Cardinal Guillaume Rene Meignan, archbishop of Tours, France, was discovered dead in bed. He was born in 1817 and was created a cardinal in 1893.

The queen of Corea is certainly dead. There is no truth in the story that she escaped from her murderers at Seoul. Two Corean dummies have just been executed for participation in the murder.

The Berlin correspondent of the Times believes that the government has already abandoned the idea of introducing a special measure to increase the navy, finding that there is no likelihood of support for it.

The London Daily News, describing the massacre at Marash in November, says the two head teachers in the American academy were killed, one being flayed alive and then cut to pieces.

A cablegram from Rome to Archbishop Kain announces that the pallium, the insignia of his archbishopal rank, is now on its way to St. Louis.

President Kruger of the Transvaal republic has granted citizenship to the Uitlanders who supported him in the recent crisis. There are veny few Englishmen among them.

Lady Henry Somerset has been entertaining the duke of St. Albans and other members of the family of her son's fiancee. Lady Henry Somerset has long been prominent in temperance work and is president of the British Woman's Temperance association and, in connection with its account of the entertainments, the London Sun says "Good brands were on the table, though the hostess did not touch them."

Otherwise.

The convention of the textile manufacturers' association of the West and South met in Chicago.

Miss Helen Gould has sent a check for $8,000 to Vassar college to found a scholarship in memory of her mother.

E. E. Harter of Milan, Mo., is dying from the effects of smoking cigars and cigarettes. It was very common for him to smoke thirty cigars and five boxes of cigarettes daily.

The Louisville Paper company filed a deed of assignment in the county court at Louisville, Ky. B. H. Fansley was made assignee. The liabilities of the company are placed at $25,000. The assets, the attorneys say, should reach about $20,000. The cause of the assignment as given out was "hard times."

Stephen Andrews, the biggest man in Rhode Island, tipping the scales at 575 pounds, dropped dead at Providence. He was 80 years of age. When he was 60 years old he weighed only about 200 pounds, but since then he had gained rapidly, though apparently in perfect health. In one month recently he gained thirty pounds.

The members of the executive committee of the Populist national convention and the Business Men's league of St. Louis have completed details for the July convention and executed a contract whereby the Populists will be given the use of a hall in the Exposition building now being prepared for the Republican national convention.

Prof. Theophilus Robarts of Perry county, Ind., claims to have discovered the long-sought rule of trisecting any rectilineal angle by elementary geometry—that is, by means of a straight line and a circle. He declares that this great problem has at last been unraveled by a very simple method, which he expects soon to give to the world.

Judge Baker, of the United States district court at Indianapolis handed down a decision in the National Linseed Oil trust case, in which the deed of the trust to the National Linseed Oil company is upheld, but the trust is held to be illegal, the company an illegal organization and a monopoly and only capable of holding property until suit is filed by the proper persons.

ASYLUM LOCATION.

HOT CONTROVERSY BETWEEN HASTINGS AND ANOKA.

The State Commission Has Filed Its Answer in the Injunction Proceedings—Anoka Also Makes Answer in Which Sensational Charges are Made.

The state commission appointed last spring by Gov. Clough to locate the fourth hospital for the insane are having no end of trouble. They first located the hospital at Hastings, but the Anoka people pushed their claims so strongly that the action was reconsidered, and Anoka was selected. Then the Hastings people rose in their wrath and vowed by all the gods that the commission had no right or precedent in taking it away from that city and giving it to Anoka, and forthwith secured a temporary injunction from Judge Brill, of the Ramsey county court, restraining the commission from taking any action to locate the hospital in a place other than on the site offered by Hastings. The injunction also restrained the city of Anoka from confederating to secure a change in the location of the hospital.

The complaint covers the acts of the commission in detail up to the close of its second meeting last week in Fergus Falls, when it reconsidered its former action voting to locate the hospital at Hastings, which, the complaint alleges, the commission had no right to do.

The complaint alleges that the commission accepted the Hastings site. Also asserts that the city of Hastings, by purchasing a portion of the land, giving a bond to the commission in the sum of $25,000 to assure that body that it would carry out its contract, which said bond was accepted, had acted upon the acceptance. Further, that Commissioner Hoper, in changing his vote to Anoka, did not do so because the site at Hastings was not in every way fit and according to the specifications in the advertisement calling for proposals for sites, but because he was influenced by a political reason, quoting him as saying:

"I voted for Hastings, believing the site offered by Hastings to be the best and the most advantageous to the state. I believe so still. But I represent the Seventh district, and my constituents want me to vote for Anoka. I, therefore, changed to Anoka."

The commission filed its answer, and also served a notice of motion to dissolve the injunction. The motion is based upon the answer and upon four affidavits made by Messrs. Merriam, Eastman, Hoper and Block, and petitions signed by a large number of the residents of the Seventh district, which, it is claimed by the plaintiff, induced Mr. Hoper to change his vote.

The grounds for the motion are that the court has no jurisdiction over the commission, because they were entitled to use their best judgment in the matter, and because they are a state board; and no facts are set up in the complaint that would warrant an injunction, because the plaintiff does not show any injury. Further, that the material allegations of the complaint are denied by the answer, which claims that the commission had a right to reconsider the action taken on Dec. 18, when it was attempted to locate the hospital in the vicinity of Hastings, and that the action of the commission in afterward locating the hospital at Anoka and selecting and purchasing a definite site there was proper. It is claimed, although the commission voted for Hastings in the first place, that they did this only to determine the general location of a hospital, and that they never selected a definite site near Hastings, and when the commission reconsidered the matter it simply changed the general location from Hastings to Anoka, and afterwards voted to purchase for the state a definite and specific site near Anoka.

Commissioner Hoper, who was the member who changed his vote, states in his affidavit that after the resolution was carried, Smith stated that he could not understand how a commissioner could change his vote, and that he thought it was illegal. Hr. Hoper states that he replied as follows, instead of as stated in the complaint:

"At the meeting in St. Paul I voted for Hastings. I am now convinced that the best interests of the state will be served by locating the fourth hospital north of the Twin Cities, and in so voting I am representing the sentiment of my district." He also adds in his affidavit that he produced for the commission the petitions which he received. They are attached to the affidavit, are very voluminous, and contain the names of the most prominent citizens of the Seventh district.

The commission, in its answer, sets forth the different propositions by which sites were offered. It appears that four were offered near Anoka, two near Hastings, one near Jordan, one near Delano and several others.

Anoka's Answer.

The answer of the city of Anoka was served upon the various parties to the action and filed in the clerk of the court's office, at St. Paul, by G. H. Wyman, city attorney of Anoka.

After recounting the law under which the commission was organized, the bids are narrated, and then the answer charges Dr. Smith with trying to make a deal with Chaska, agreeing to vote for the site near Chaska, provided the citizens would agree to donate the sum of $15,000, which they would receive from the state, toward a hospital for the acute insane, to be located in the midway district, between St. Paul and Minneapolis. Which the citizens of Chaska declined to do.

They also charge that Hastings included 160 acres in the plat submitted to the commission which were not included in the written offer, and that the members of the commission were misled and deceived by the plat and did not discover the discrepancy between the plat and written offer until after the 20th of December.

Dr. Smith's Reply.

Dr. Smith made the following statement in respect to the visit to Chaska:

"I have not seen the statement which has been made by Anoka in regard to my visit to Chaska. I made no proposition to Chaska in regard to my vote, but did make a tentative proposition looking to a selection of Chaska by the commission, in case a division of the hospital into two parts could be made and the acute ward be located between the two cities contiguous to the state university. Of course, there were legal questions involved which must first have been settled—and then Chaska could not have given the commission authority to use the $15,000 in that way. The $15,000 was already at the disposal of the commission. The point was made that Chaska must agree not to fight such an arrangement as the division of the hospital, if the commission should agree to it.

"I had already laid a basis for such a division in a resolution embodied in the advertisement, saying that the 640 acres required should be either in one body of land or in tracts conveniently located, or words to that effect. I do not know just what use is made of this incident in the answer of Anoka. At all events, transactions of doubtful nature are not usually carried on at a town meeting. This was practically at a town meeting. I have had no transactions with Chaska or any other parties that might not have been carried on at a town meeting.

"There was neither disposition nor effort to conceal this matter from the commission, as it was done before the commission went there and as a basis to its possible action. At that time I supposed the members of the commission were all anxious, or at least, willing to locate the hospital, or any part of it, between the cities.

MUST NOT DEAL IN SKUNKS.

His Wife Threatens to Desert Him if He Does.

"Whew! say, take 'em around to the back door, you'll spoil all the goods in the store," said Andrew C. Jones, proprietor of the supply store, to a freckle-faced youngster who appeared in the doorway with a paper flour sack from which came an overpowering odor. "When I complete this consignment of furs," resumed Mr. Jones, on returning from the back room, "my wife says she won't live with me if I don't let 'em alone."

"What are skunk skins bringing?" queried the Press correspondent.

"Thirty-five cents to $1, some extra-fine ones bringing as high as $1.10. The quality of the fur is uniform—that is to say, the difference in price is due to color and marking.

"There's a big demand for skunk skins now, and, as they are the stupidest little animals in the world, they are captured in great numbers. They never exert themselves to go around a trap. They are gregarious, six, eight, or maybe a dozen of them living in good fellowship in the same burrow. They are too lazy to burrow deep, but they occasionally take up their abode in some woodchuck's hole.

"To reach down into the burrow, grasp a skunk by the tail and jerk him up so suddenly that he can't shower you with his highly-concentrated attar of roses is a trick that is done hundreds of times every warm day through the winter; but I wouldn't attempt to accomplish it for a hatful of $5 Williams.

"Old hunters say that a skunk can't scent unless he can get his feet on the ground; so they jerk 'em up by the tail and then crack 'em on the head with a club. The boy you smelt just now had a dozen nice pelts, but he don't understand the business, or he wouldn't have got scented up so."

"After it gets into the hands of the furrier, what becomes of skunk fur?"

"Sable," was the laconic reply. "The skunk and the sable are first cousins, anyway, and the dealer dosn't worry over trivial distinctions like that."—Rolfe (Pa.) Letter to New York Press.

Unscientific Banking.

There are few fields of work to which invention cannot be applied, and a recent incident in banking has suggested a new problem to those who are seeking for novel opportunities. It appears that a merchant of Ionia, Mich., paid a debt due a Detroit merchant with a check on the First National Bank of Ionia. The Detroit merchant deposited the check in the Detroit bank, which happened to have no Ionia correspondent. The Detroit bank sent it to its Ionia correspondent. The Chicago bank sent it to a Muskegon bank, its nearest correspondent to Ionia. The Muskegon bank sent it to its Grand Rapids correspondent. The Grand Rapids bank had no Ionia correspondent, but saw that its Detroit correspondent was the correspondent of the First National Bank of Ionia, on which the check was drawn; so they sent it again to Detroit.

The Detroit bank then forwarded it to Ionia, its destination, for payment. The check passed through six banks, being in transit eleven days, and traveled 836 miles. Taking into consideration the postage paid twelve times by the different banks, the stationery used and the time occupied by clerks in doing the business, it was urged that if a short cut for the collection of checks can be devised it would pay to adopt it. The resort to negotiable paper and checks was itself a distinct invention, but the system is still imperfect and barbarous that permits so much expense and friction in these days of railroads and telephones.

Electric Power in New York.

The rapid increase in the use of electric power in New York city is believed to be without parallel, and is illustrative of the manner in which central stations are ceasing to be merely purveyors of light, and are becoming more and more reservoirs of current for all kinds of uses, including the operation of machinery and the supplying of heat and ventilation. The Edison stations in New York to-day find a large proportion of their business to relate to the supply of current for motors. In January, 1895, the company had connected to its mains 7,615 horse-power of electric motors, but at the end of October the figures had risen to 11,236 horse-power, showing an increase of 3,618 horse-power in the short period of ten months. It would appear that, as much as one-third of the capacity for consumption of current now connected to the company's mains lies in electric motors, some of which run as high as forty horse-power.—New York Post

ST. PAUL STRANDED

THE BIG OCEAN LINER STRIKES A SANDBAR.

She Goes Ashore During a Dense Fog, but the Passengers Are All Safely Removed — The Vessel Is Moved From Her Dangerous Position and It Is Thought She Will Soon Be Floated.

Long Branch, N. J., Jan. 28.—In a heavy fog, with the wind in the northeast and the surf running far up the beach, the new American line steamship St. Paul, bound in, went ashore in front of the Grand View house at 1 a. m. All of the 700 passengers were transferred to land. At no time were the passengers in danger. She was in 20 feet of water, just in the outside edge of the breakers, about 300 feet from the shore, with her head pointing at an acute angle west and towards the shore.

The lifeboats, after a few trial trips from the shore to the St. Paul, made arrangements to transfer the mails and passengers to some of the steam tugs which lay around, and the mails were the first to be tackled. After Uncle Sam's correspondence had been safely stowed away and headed for New York, the crews in command of Captains Mulligan, West and Wardwell turned their attention to the first and second cabin passengers. Capt. Jamieson had the big gangway lowered and stationed the purser of the landing at the bottom. Then the first cabin passengers began their exodus from cramped quarters. It took just twelve boat loads to exhaust the supply of first and seconds. In the fourth boat load one lady fainted after she had made the jump from the little platform to the boat. They were all transferred to the sidewheeler George Starr, which left at 3:45 o'clock for New York.

The cabin passengers were landed in New York city from the tug George Starr at the American line pier at the foot of Fulton street. They looked a cheerful lot, notwithstanding their experiences. Those who were interviewed by the newspaper reporters were divided in their opinions as to whether the Campania and the St. Paul had been racing, as at first reported.

The Vessel Moved.

The life-saving people report that at high water this morning the St. Paul was moved about 150 feet northeast and off shore. At 5 p. m. there appeared to be no further change in the position of the vessel. No further attempt to float her will be made until high water to-morrow morning.

President C. A. Griscom and all the other representatives of the International Navigation company, popularly known as the American line, have taken a decidedly more hopeful view of the situation of the stranded steamer. They place great reliance on the Merritt and Chapman wrecking companies who have charge of the pulling off of the big steamer, and they hope to have the St. Paul at her berth at the foot of Vezey street, New York, before the end of this week.

The vessel is now about 150 feet further toward the northeast than where she lay last night, owing to the efforts of the wrecking tugs, which were hard at work to relieve her about 4 o'clock this morning, and it is hoped she will be further eased before daylight to-morrow.

The crowds of sightseers which were in evidence yesterday were more than doubled to-day. Ocean avenue was simply jammed with a surging mass of humanity. Vehicles of all descriptions were pressed into service, and when they were all jumbled together near the end of Ocean avenue, East Long Branch, they presented a very amusing spectacle. It is safe to say that there is scarcely a person who resides within twenty miles of this place who has not come to see the big ocean-racer lying helpless within a stone's throw of the Grand View hotel veranda. When the trains arrived from New York to-day they brought a host of Gothamites who were anxious to see how the big liner looked, and the majority of them wondered how on earth she could possibly have reached the spot in which she is stuck hard and fast.

Several Roads After It.

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Jan. 28.—The branch hitherto used by the Wabash, better known as the Omaha & St. Louis railroad, extending to Glenwood Junction, Iowa, from Council Bluffs, will be sold at noon here to-morrow to the highest bidder by order of the federal court. A number of representatives of prominent lines are here, and the indications are that the bidding will be lively. The Wabash company desires the piece of road, as it otherwise will be cut off from a western connection for Omaha. The Burlington would like it as a cut off for its fast main line trains. The Illinois Central is after it for an Omaha connection, and the Baltimore & Ohio will take it if it can fix the deal, as it is anxious to get into Omaha.

Arbitration Unavoidable.

London, Jan. 28.—The Chronicle this morning, in an editorial on Colonial Secretary Chamberlain's statement of the Venezuelan question, made in a speech at Birmingham, says: "We must regard this statement as expressing the deliberate conclusions of the government, and it seems to render arbitration in some form or other absolutely unavoidable."

Rubber Mill in Ruins.

Lambertville, N. J., Jan. 28.—Fire entirely destroyed the Rubber company's mill here to-day, with the valuable machinery in the building. Loss, $50,000, covered by insurance. Fifty men are thrown out of employment.

Ice Gorge Broken.

Toledo, Ohio, Jan. 28.—The ice gorge in the Maumee river, about eight miles above the city, broke to-day, and in running out carried away two spans of the new bridge in course of construction. The bridge was supported by a trestel work on the ice, and the loss is estimated at $50,000. The ice in the tributary river is running to the lake, but no serious damage is anticipated.

A delegation of Chippewa Indians are on their way to Washington.

BRIDE'S SAD FATE.

Loses Her Husband and With Him Her Fortune.

St. Paul, Jan. 28.—A telegram received last night from St. Louis says: "Mrs. Joseph de Trouilly, until last Wednesday Miss Anna B. Kennedy, a seamstress living with her married sister, Mrs. Emmett A. Morrissey, at 294 Aurora avenue, St. Paul, is stranded here, minus money and husband. Joseph de Trouilly, who claimed to be the credit agent for a large wholesale tobacco firm in Kansas City, and to whom Miss Kennedy trusted her future happiness and savings on last Wednesday, is the missing man. According to the story of the deserted woman, she and De Trouilly, whom she met first at a Chicago suburb, came here directly after their marriage at St. Paul. On Thursday the husband took $1,500 belonging to Mrs. de Trouilly to change into larger bills, and since then has not been seen by the latter. The deserted woman to-day requested the police to look for the missing man."

When seen last night a relative of Mrs. de Trouilly did not seem disposed to give any additional information regarding the affair. He preferred that little be said. Miss Kennedy had made her home with him for some years, and was of an industrious, frugal nature, and had saved something over $1,500, which was deposited in a St. Paul bank. Some months ago, while visiting in Chicago, Miss Kennedy met the man who called himself De Trouilly. He had the appearance and bearing of a gentleman, and the woman trusted him. He represented himself as a man of easy circumstances and was possessed of some ready money.

SOCIAL EVENT.

Sioux Give a Reception to Visiting Chippewas.

St. Paul, Jan. 28.—The Indians enjoyed themselves yesterday at Fort Karnival. They deserted their tepees and gathered in the little room in the corner of the block house and huddled around the stove, which was kept almost red-hot. There was only one break in the day's silence. It was an impromptu reception for the benefit of the Chippewa chiefs who came to the city on their way to see the Great White Father at Washington, and who called at the grounds in the afternoon for the purpose of paying their respects to their old enemies, the Sioux. The reception was a very solemn affair. The Sioux arranged themselves in a circle in the block house, and the two Chippewas, Little Red Hair and We-Son-Dow-Way, passed from one to another and sedately shook hands with each. The ceremonies continued for fifteen or twenty minutes, and not a word was spoken on either side. The two great chiefs, who, from their stately appearance must have been "big Injuns," followed each other around the circle and grasped each Sioux by the hand for a moment. After the handshaking was over every one sat on the ground and the peace pipe was passed around. It was smoked in silence by all present. The head chief of the Sioux then rose to his feet and delivered an address of welcome. He spoke in the language of the Dakotas. What he said seemed to meet with general approval, if nods and grunts can be taken for marks of approbation.

VERDICT FOR MINNESOTA.

Peculiar Pine Land Deal Finally Disposed Of.

Minneapolis, Jan. 28.—The State of Minnesota won a great victory in the pine land investigation in the district court of Hennepin county, where the case of the state against the Shevelin-Carpenter company was tried before Judge Seagrave Smith and jury. The jury returned a verdict in favor of the state of $9,211.87, which is $4.05 per thousand feet for the lumber which it was claimed had been taken, together with interest. The case has been in the courts some time, and is the only pine land case tried at Minneapolis. The action was brought to recover in replevin 2,134,000 feet of pine logs which it was claimed were taken by the defendants from section 36, town 44, range 19, Pine county. It was set up in the complaint of the state that the defendants cut these logs in the winter of 1893 and 1894 and shipped them by rail to Minneapolis to their mill. The pine land investigating committee found that the pine on the section mentioned had been sold by the state auditor to Samuel Matthews of Stillwater for $4.05 per thousand feet, the sale being made at public auction in September, 1890.

His Clothing Ignited.

Minneapolis, Jan. 28.—Yesterday little Rolfe Daniel, aged 3 years, son of W. H. Daniel, formerly a well known senator of North Dakota, was burned to death in his mother's room at the Orleans, 700 Hennepin avenue. The little fellow, in the temporary absence of his mother, secured some matches from the tabel, and in some way ignited his clothing.

Fought Over a Girl.

St. Paul, Jan. 28.—Jack, or as he is commonly known, "Red" Flinn, had his throat badly gashed in Vahsen's saloon at Seventh and Washington streets this morning. He was assaulted by Anton Franke. Flinn owes his life to the fact that his coat collars were turned up. The force of the blow was spent on them. Both were cut through. The trouble was over a girl.

Too Much Hanging.

Hastings, Minn., Jan. 28.—Mrs. Mathias Freilinger of Randolph, this county, discovered her son Jacob, aged 15 years, hanging from a tree and cut him down. He lingered four days, unable to speak, when death ensued. It is supposed that he had been reading about hanging, which affected his mind.

Some Balm for Edith.

Winona, Minn., Jan. 28.—The breach of promise case of Edith E. Johnson against Charles D. Beebe for $15,000 damages ended this forenoon. After being out a few hours the jury returned a verdict of $250 for the lady.

With Honors of War.

Rome, Jan. 28.—News was received here to-day that the Italian forces which have been besieged at Makalle, Abyssinia, have evacuated that place, and will go out with the honors of war.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Interesting Happenings in the North Star State.

Overcoat thieves have been working the public building at St. Paul.

The residence of Michael Mackey at Afton was totally destroyed by fire. Loss about $1,00. Insurance, $700.

The trial of Edward Tierney of Castle Rock, for cruelly whipping a pupil in school, resulted in an acquittal.

Joseph Krall was arrested at North Redwood for running a blind pig in connection with a restaurant. His bail was fixed at $250.

Oscar Davenport and R. Davenport were sent to jail at Faribault for fifty and forty days, respectively, for drunkenness.

E. Page Davis, who from 1856 to 1862 was prominent in the councils of the Republican party in Minnesota, died at his home in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mrs. Hannah Becker of Winona celebrated her ninety-eighth birthday by a gathering of her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

The Carbury murder trial came to an end at Albert Lea. The jury was out two hours and returned a verdict of manslaughter in the second degree.

Supt. O. C. Gregg and a corps of helpers conducted a farmers' institute at Princeton. There were about 300 farmers in attendance.

Charles Goodrich's residence at Staples was destroyed by fire. An eight-year-old girl had a narrow escape from being burned to death.

Mrs. B. Askevold, wife of Rev. Askevold, pastor of the Norwegian Lutheran church of Tracy, died after a lingering illness with consumption.

Shaw & Shaw of Hecla, S. D., who have run an extensive dry goods business at Tracy for the past two years, have disposed of their store to Martin Thuin.

United States Marshal Tollman of St. Paul is after whisky law breakers at the head of Vermillion. Blind pig dens are reported numerous in St. Louis county.

The dead body of Ben Johnson, a woodman, was found hanging in the hall of a cheap lodging house at Duluth, suspended by a clothes line. Johnson came to the lodging house apparently intoxicated.

Leo Miller, a seventeen-year-old boy, arrested at Duluth for breaking into a freight car, broke out of the city jail by unfastening the window, and lowered himself to the ground by a rope made by tearing up his shirt.

M. Malloy, a farmer, while driving across the Milwaukee track at Winona, was struck by a switch engine. His wood rack was demolished, and harness broken, but Malloy escaped being killed, receiving only a few bruises.

Julius Hopp and Mike Gilrich, of the firm of Julius Hopp & Co. of Morgan, were arrested and taken to Redwood Falls on a charge of embezzlement of $450 from the McCormick Machine company. Each gave bail for $300.

Robt. M. Allen, United States Indian agent, and his Indian junket have left Dakota for Washington. The Indians seemed happy and in good spirits in anticipation of visiting the big wigwam and shaking hands and exchanging "ugs" with the great father.

Judges Williston and Crosby, of the district court at Stillwater, have filed an order fixing J. C. O'Connor's salary as receiver of the Seymour, Sabin & Co. at $1,500, but find that after deducting this amount the receiver is still indebted to the concern in the sum of $16,703.33.

Fifteen creameries in Freeborn county have organized an association with L. P. Lawson of Geneva president and M. Halverson of Albert Lea secretary. The object is to buy supplies and sell goods at the best advantage of the patrons of the various creameries.

In an altercation at Sauk Center between H. W. Rand, a machine dealer, and Flue Smith, over some grain, Rand used an iron rod with which he struck Smith a blow on the head which caused a serious injury. Smith has since lain in a semi-conscious state.

A remarkably successful series of revival meetings have been held at Crookston during the past three weeks and were brought to a close last night. They have been conducted by Evangelist C. N. Hunt, of Minneapolis. The number of converts is upward of 200.

While Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Claggert of Montevideo were absent from home their house caught fire and their two little boys, Floyd and Verdie, about seven and nine years of age, were burned to death before assistance could be given. It is supposed that the fire originated from their overturning a lamp while the children were going to bed.

Flossie Robinson, the half-breed woman sent to the St. Cloud reformatory by Judge Ives, occupies a cell in the woman's ward at the county jail. She will be left there awaiting other disposition by the reformatory board.

The portable elevator invented by Frank W. Rice will prove valuable to farmers who are doing their own shipping, as a load of wheat can be lifted bodily and the sacks dumped into a car in the same manner as into a hopper.

Albert Bongie, who claims to reside in St. Paul, was arrested at Caledonia, having in his possession what purported to be orders for the mail, household effects, money and valuable papers of Mrs. Mary E. Hughes who, with her six-year-old son, very mysteriously disappeared January 8th. Fears are entertained of her safety, as she was the possessor of $8,000 in cash and bonds. The signature held by the man arrested is believed to be forged.

Flow mills are going to be numerous this year, and some of the large farmers will put in plants. Sam Dainard has one hundred acres of flax straw on his farm at St; Hilaire, and it is said that he is thinking of putting in a plant for his own use.—Crookston Tribune.

The fines which have been paid in to the office of Clerk of Court Vig up to date, as a result of the indictments returned by the grand jury aggregate $4265.57. This is largely from saloon keepers who have been guilty of selling on Sunday. A portion, however is from blind piggers and keepers of disreputable houses.—Crookston Times.

M. Z. Epperson has a crew of men at work this week clearing the ground and setting up his mill. He expects to start in a few days cutting native timber for his mill which he will have read, by spring. Negotiations are now on for about ten million feet of pine to be delivered and and cut here the coming summer.

The Tribune acknowledges the receipt of an invitation to attend a dancing party to be given by the old bachelors of St. Hilaire on Friday evening of this week. The old bachelors club is very large for a town of the size of St. Hilaire, and includes some of the best citizens. The ladies up there should make it a point to break up that club before spring. Crookston Tribune.

Christian A. Skeie, of St. Hilaire, has received a patent for a leather riveting machine which he has invented. The Scientific American, in its current number, prints a cut of the machine and accompanies it with a write-up of a column. The new machine punctures the material, inserts the rivet and washer, and heads the end of the rivet shank. Crookston Tribune.

Business seems stagnated every where this month but what more can one expect? 'Twas ever thus, and probably ever will be. January and February are the cleaning up months and again people cannot be expected to be purchasing all the times Give the people a breathing spell in which to pay their newspaper subscriptions.

The committee Indian affairs today reported unanimously in favor of the passage of the Towne bill for the sale of the pine on the Red Lake reservation, which the Indians are now on the way east to oppose. The Towne bill modifies the terms of the Nelson bill in such a manner as to make it practical. The Nelson bill prevented the sale of the pine before the whole amount was surveyed and estimated, while Congress Towne's bill will result in the immediate sale of the pine, as it has nearly all been estimated, and the terms allow the sales to begin without further delay Major Baldwin the commissioner has been called by the interior department to confer in regard to Red Lake matters while the Indians are here,

A week ago The Times gave the people a record of the grand jury work which had been done up to the time that body was discharged The close of the term of court adds but little to the record, although the books are now complete. The total number of indictments returned by the grand jury was 105, naming 134 people as principals. Eleven of these were in on more than one bill leaving 123 different people who fell under the ban of law.

Of this number 114 have been convicted, or have plead guilty. Four of of these who escaped were members of the "brewery gang" of which one broke Jail and three were acquitted Frank Murray was acquited by the and he was really the only individual who was indicted for an offense for which some body not found guilty. One other case, that of Knute Torgerson of Sletten was dismissed by the court before it reached the jury on the ground of insufficiency of the evidence, The revenue to the county from fines due and collected under the indictment will amount to nearly or quite $6000. The results are highly satisfactory to the law abiding people of Polk county, and are approved of by the taxpayers. The majesty of the law will be more highly regarded in the future and violations of state laws city and village ordinances will be less frequent. Crookston Times,

RECOGNIZE CUBA

Said President Cleveland Will Issue a Proclamation Very Soon.

Reported Also That the Rumored Sale of the Island Has Hurried It.

Olney Would Have Acted Sooner, But the President Is More Cautious.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 21.—The Republic, in summarizing dispatches from Florida, New York and Washington says: A crisis has been reached in the Cuban war. Recognition of belligerency of the patriot army by the United States is imminent. President Cleveland is said to have prepared a proclamation which may be issued any time in the immediate future. The president, it is declared, intended to recognize the insurgents last week when he learned of the recall of Marshal Campos, but under the circumstances the executive thought that such recognition would be regarded as inopportune and unfriendly to Spain, and he, therefore, withheld the important document pending the appointment of a successor to Campos.

Within the past 48 hours, however, President Cleveland is said to have learned that Spain, despairing of a successful termination of the war, had Offered to Sell Cuba to Great Britain.

Rumors to this effect were circulated in the East and spread like wildfire over the country. The rumors seem to have been confirmed by dispatches from Florida. The governors of the Southern states, according to these advices, have been requested by the war department to prepare the state militiamen for immediate service. Troops are already beginning to move in Florida. The belief in some quarters is that the flying squadron of Great Britain is destined for service in American waters. If this is so war will result. The cession of Cuba to Great Britain would be resisted by the United States to the last ditch. Official information from the White House is lacking, but it is evident that serious complications are at hand.

The Cuban Case Is Complete.

Senor Palma, head of the Cuban party in the United States, wires from Washington:

"Our case is complete. The president and congress will recognize the insurgent cause."

Senor Palma adds that it is not necessary that the insurgents should hold a port, but that, as a matter of fact, General Gomez has taken half a dozen ports in the past week, leaving the Spanish army penned up at Havana. The president, it is said, will issue a proclamation immediately. Authorities agree that the executive, and not congress, should take the initiative. Congress will support the president heartily.

Olney Would Have Acted Sooner.

President Cleveland has hesitated to take so important steps while the official head of the revolution in this country is enjoying the protection of American citizenship. Secretary Olney has not felt so much embarrassment from this cause. He has been for some time in favor of immediate recognition and has been urging the president on, but Mr. Cleveland, being naturally cautious, has moved with great deliberation. The report that Spain had lost all hope of subduing the insurgents and that she was negotiating the sale of the island to Great Britain has caused the president to take action.

Might Recognize Cuban Independence.

A report has it that the president may go beyond the original proposition, and recognize the independence of Cuba. This, however, may be taken with a large grain of salt. There is a distinction between independence and belligerency. Belligerency can be recognized when insurgents have established a form of government. Independence, on the other hand, according to the principle and invariable practice of the United States, is recognized "only when the legal government of another nation, by its establishment or the exercise of power, is supposed to have received the express or implied assent of the people."

Decided to Nip the Scheme.

The president, according to this version of the story, learned of the proposed deal and, after a conference with Senor Palma, determined to nip it in the bud by recognizing a state war in Cuba and enforcing belligerent rights as laid down in the international law. The hasty orders for troops, if they really have been given, can mean but one thing, to-wit: That the United States will resist any attempt on the part of Spain to emerge from the war by ceding Cuba to Great Britain or any other European county.

If the crisis is as acute as it would appear to be from the reports circulated, Admiral Bunce will doubtless be instructed to leave Hampton Roads on short notice with an expedition to Cuba. American interests on the island would afford ground for the landing of troops in event of an emergency.

RAIDED GUN STORES.

Military Equipment Carried Off By Cubans at Tampa, Fla.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Jan. 21.—Col. F. C. Naderwell, a prominent Chicago lawyer who has just arrived from Tampa, Fla., says gun stores and military armories at that place were raided Friday night and several hundred stands of arms and much ammunition secured and taken on a strange steamer to Cuba. He says another similar expedition is being arranged.

RUSH TO YUKON GOLD FIELDS

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 21.—The spring rush to the Yukon river gold fields has commenced, 75 prospectors starting north on the steamship Wopeka. Nearly all of them took cabin passage, the first class rate to Juneau having been reduced to $12. It is expected that hundreds of prospectors will go to Juneau between now and April 1.

E. A. Gardner of Cook's Inlet Trading and Transportation company, who has just returned from Alaska, says:

"It is a fact little known that the Alaska Commercial company has been for a long time operating a mine on Ungla island. The output is shipped monthly to San Francisco. The whole island has been prospected, and, it is claimed by the company, is rich in free-milling ores. The same condition exists on the other islands in the vicinity. They abound in rich, free-milling ore. My information is gathered from personal observations. These islands are about 200 miles west of Cook's Inlet.

IN UNITED STATES TERRITORY.

Only a Few Miles of Forty Mile Creek Flows Through British Territory.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The rich gold discoveries of Forty Mile creek, in Alaska, belong to the United States and not to Great Britain. The 141st meridian of longitude has been accurately determined by an employe of the British government, and properly marked at certain places. General Duffield, the chief of the coast survey, says that but ten miles as the bird flies and of the creek, but twelve miles as the water flows is in British territory, and that no gold has been discovered in this portion. Of the remaining portion of the creek, and that in which gold has been discovered, is in Alaska and belongs therefore to the United States. A bill has been introduced in congress providing for the appointment of commissioners to fix the boundary, but it has not yet been acted upon.

QUEER IOWA CASE SETTLED.

Liquor Company Unable to Collect an Alleged Deficit.

SIOUX CITY, Ia, Jan. 21.—A peculiar point concerning the application of the old Clark liquor law in this state, has just been settled here in connection with a suit brought by the Fred. Miller Brewing company against the bondsmen of C. E. Dennis, formerly the company's agent at this point. Dennis was employed in 1892, when, although the sale of liquor in the city was winked at by the authorities, the prohibition law was still in effect. When he resigned his position he was alleged by the company to be behind in his accounts, and suit was brought against his bondsmen to recover. The latter maintained that the entire transaction was in violation of the state law and denied their liability. The court sustained this position and dismissed the company's petition.

Accused of Holding Himself Up.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Jan. 21.—A. S. Shipley, the Illinois Central agent at Rowena, who, it is charged, recently held himself up in an effort to cover a defalcation, was arraigned and bound over under $1,000 bail to the next term of court, which meets in May. He is accused of embezzling $176 from the railway company and $236 from the American Express company.

They Would Recognize Cuba.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The New York Journal will print interviews with every member of congress now in Washington on the Cuban question. All the Minnesota members, with the exception of Heatwole, are decidedly in favor of recognizing the belligerency of the insurgents.

Northwestern Lumbermen's Association.

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 21.—The sixth annual meeting of the Northwestern Lumbermen's association will be held at the Red Men's Wigwam, 251 Nicollet avenue, Wednesday, Jan. 22, immediately following the meeting of the Retail Lumbermen's Insurance association on the same day.

Arbitration Very Probable.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The Chronicle believes that both England and Venezuela will institute inquiries into the settlements and cessions of land in the disputed territory. "This will present a basis," the Chronicle thinks, "for the renewal of negotiations. It is now most probable that arbitration will be resorted to."

Crisis at Hand in Bulgaria.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—A dispatch to The Herald from St. Petersburg says: Reports received here show that another crisis is hand in Bulgaria. Prince Ferdinand is being openly opposed by Dr. Stoiloff and wants to replace him by Grekoff in the office of prime minister.

Greenway Expresses Satisfaction.

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 21.—Premier Greenway, who has returned to the city from his farm, said that the new legislature of Manitoba would probably be called for dispatch of business Thursday, Feb. 6. The premier expressed great satisfaction at the result of the elections.

Governor of the Creek Nation Drowned.

MUSCOGEE, I. T., Jan. 21.—Governor Esparthecher, of the Creek Nation, was drowned while trying to cross the deep fork near here. The boat was swept down the stream by the current, and striking a log, was overturned.

Surveyors Hold a Meeting.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 21.—The Surveyors' and Engineering society, which was formed a year ago, will hold its first annual meeting Tuesday in the office of Charles A. Forbes, 315 and 316 Lumbermen's Exchange, on Seventh street.

Bishop Haygood Dead.

COVINGTON, Ga., Jan. 21.—Bishop Haygood of the Methodist Episcopal Church South died at his home in Oxford Sunday.

DAVIS' DOCTRINE

Text of the Resolution Prepared by the Senator From Minnesota.

It Reiterates the Sentiments of President Monroe and Adds a Few.

No Conquest or Trade for Territory and No Control of Isthmian Canals.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Senator Davis of the senate committee on foreign relations reported favorably the resolution enunciating the Monroe doctrine. It is the result of lengthy consideration of the committee on the advisability of incorporating the Monroe doctrine in the federal statues, and is as follows:

Resolved by the senate, the house of representatives concurring, that,

Whereas, President Monroe, in his message to congress Dec. 2, A. D., 1823, deemed it proper to assert as a principle in which the rights and interests of the United States are involved, that the American continents by the free and independent positions which they have assumed and maintained were thenceforth not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European power; and

Whereas, President Monroe further declared in that message that the United States would consider any attempt by the allied powers of Europe to extend their system to any portion of this Hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety; that with the existing colonies and dependencies of any European power we have not interfered and should not interfere; but that with the governments who have declared their independence and maintained it, whose independence we have on great consideration and upon just principles acknowledged, we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them, or their destiny by any European power in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States, and further reiterated in that message that it is impossible that the allied powers should extend their political system to any portion of either continent without endangering our peace and happiness; and

Whereas, The doctrine and policy so proclaimed by President Monroe have since been repeatedly asserted by the United States by executive declaration and action, upon occasions and exigencies similar to the particular occasion and exigency which caused those to first be announced, and have been ever since their promulgation, and now are, the rightful policy of the United States.

Reaffirms and Confirms Them.

Therefore, be it resolved, That the United States reaffirms and confirms the doctrines and principles promulgated by President Monroe in this message of Dec. 2, 1823, and declares that it will assert and maintain that doctrine and those principles, and will regard any infringement thereof, and particularly any attempt by any European power to take or acquire any new territory on the American continent, or any islands adjacent thereto, or any right of sovereignty or dominion in the same, in any case or instance, as to which the United States shall deem such an attempt to be dangerous to its peace or safety, by or through force, purchase, cession, occupation, pledge, colonization, protectorate or by control of the easement in canal or any other means of transit across the American isthmus whether on unfounded pretension of right in cases of alleged boundary disputes, or under other unfounded pretentions, as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States, and as an interposition which it would be impossible in any form for the United States to regard with indifference."

WILL NOT STAND MUCH MORE.

The London Globe Gives Warning to American Senators.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The Globe, in an article condemning the attitude of the United States senate committee on foreign affairs, says: "The English people will not stand much more flouting from anybody, and these gentlemen, whom we credit with no more exalted sentiment than the wish to stand well with their constituents, may very easily find themselves face to face with a situation that could only be called appalling.

A Comment by The Eclair.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—The Eclair, commenting on the suggested additions to the Monroe doctrine, says:

"Does the American government think it is strong enough to appropriate in its own interest one of the two hemispheres and forbid Europe to have access to it? If it pushes its extravagant pretensions to this point the only thing that can happen will be that all Europe will arrive at an understanding by which they will close their ports to American ships—a measure which will make America ask for mercy within a week. Why does America assume an attitude she cannot maintain?"

Reiterates the Denial.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—In spite of the assertions of a sensational news agency to the contrary, the Associated Press is in a position to repeat its assertion of Saturday last that it has been informed by the British admiralty that the destination of the flying squadron, now at Spithead, is not yet determined upon even by the admiralty, and that certainly it will not go to Bermuda or anywhere in American waters for the present.

RUSSIA WILL REMAIN NEUTRAL.

Will Not Be Drawn Into Any Sort of a Combination.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—A dispatch to The Herald from St. Petersburg says: Russia's policy at the present moment is steadfastly to avoid being drawn into any combination or complication with Armenia, Germany, England or Abyssinia, but to keep the Oriental question ever foremost.

The Novosti, commenting on the friendliness of the English press, says: We esteem her high civilization, but we see the defects in her policy, which is purely egotistical. An alliance could be useful only to her, not to us. France and Russia must remain neutral.

Horsewhipped the Tramps.

CENTRALIA, Mo., Jan. 21.—Three tramps visited this city Saturday evening, and, after becoming intoxicated, began to disturb the peace by entering stores, restaurants and other places of business and threatening the lives of several citizens. They were locked up by the city marshal. Less than an hour later they were taken from the officers by six masked men and escorted to a point one mile east of the city, where each tramp was given a severe horsewhipping and then released.

Debs Has Plans For the Future.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 21.—Eugene V. Debs says that he expects to sever his official connection with the American Railway union within the coming year. His purpose is, he said, to devote his time to the labor movement in general and not to any particular organization. He will, however, retain his membership in the A. R. U.

Reinforcements for Cuba.

MADRID, Jan. 21.—The conservative organs at Havana protest against the assertion of Marshal Campos that he is the victim of political intrigue. They insist that his recall is due to his failure as a general and not to political pressure. Reinforcements of 16 battalions of troops under Generals Barges and Ahumada will be sent to Cuba shortly.

Menelek Suing For Peace.

MASSOWAH, Jan. 21.—Owing to dissensions in the Shoan camp Emperor Menelek is suing to the Italians for peace. He has asked General Barateiri, in command of the Italian forces in Abyssinia, to appoint a plenipotentiary for the purpose of arranging the terms of peace.

Didn't Care to Debate It.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The anti-silver men gave the debate on the free silver substitute for the bond bill a new turn by urging an immediate vote, and saying they cared not to debate it. The silver men said they would prefer debate for the present.

BRIEF BITS OF NEWS.

Bernard Gillam, the noted cartoonist, is dead.

The Japanese insist that the queen of Corea is dead.

St. Paul Odd Fellows will establish a home for indigent members.

Bank note circulation will be increased $20,000,000, it is said, by the bond issue.

ANTI-LYNCH BILL

South Carolina House Passes a Very Appropriate Measure.

Counties in Which Lynching Occur Will Be Made Responsible

To the Amount of at Least $2,000, to Be Paid to Legal Representatives.

COLUMBIA, S. C. Jan. 21.—The anti-lynching bill was passed in the house of representatives. It provides that in all cases of lynching where death ensues the county where the lynching takes place shall be liable in exemplary damages in a sum of not less than $2,000, to be recovered in a competent court by the legal representatives of the person lynched.

TWO INDICTMENTS HOLD GOOD.

Decision of Judge Grosscup on An Interstate Commerce Case.

CHICAGO, Jan. 21.—In the United States district court Judge Grosscup handed down an opinion on the motion to quash the indictments in the Santa Fe alleged violation of the interstate commerce act. The indictments were upheld in part and quashed in part. John A. Hanley, general traffic manager of the Santa Fe, and Ex-President Rinehart of the road were adjudged to have been properly indicted on two counts. These counts set forth that from April to November, 1892, the two officials violated the act by giving rebates and drawbacks, and that on Oct. 15 of that year, they made they made, the payment. The rebate was paid to Nelson Morris, but the indictment as to Morris was quashed on the ground that the rate was a discrimination against shippers by the railroad, and Morris' acceptance of the rate in no wise made him guilty of discrimination.

The Effect of the Decisions.

These decisions are in effect that a shipper could not be held for violation in accepting a rebate and is the first legal interpretation of that part of the interstate commerce law making shippers equally liable with carriers to a violation of law in discrimination.

Hanley and Rinehart will not submit without a stubborn fight, and probably an appeal to a higher court. The railroad interests of the country will take the general issue of the law to the courts of last resort.

IS JINGOISM GONE DAFT.

New York World's Opinion of the Davis Resolution.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The World describes the new movement in the senate as jingoism gone daft, and denounces the resolution of the foreign relations committee as uncalled for, as borrowing and inviting trouble, a based upon false pretenses, as dangerous, and calls upon the common sense and real patriotism of the people to make themselves felt at Washington. But Washington, at the present moment, seems to be living a life of its own.

Reply to the Bayard Resolution.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The president has sent to the house his reply to the resolution calling on him for information as to what he had done about the matter of the speeches delivered by Ambassador Bayard. He transmitted copies of the two speeches in full, and also copies of letters from Mr. Bayard explanatory of them. No action was taken by the president on the speeches except to notify Mr. Bayard of the action of the house.

Place of the Sherman Statue.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The Sherman statue commission has decided to place the equestrian statue of General Sherman to be erected in Washington under the auspices of the Army of the Tennessee, on the reservation just south of the United States treasury building, where it can be seen the length of Pennsylvania avenue from the capital westward.

Congratulations for Bismarck.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The Standard's Berlin special says: Prince Bismarck received over 600 congratulatory telegrams, including one from Emperor Francis Joseph and one from King Humbert, and nearly all the German sovereigns. The fact that Dr. von Boetticher has not received a new decoration has revived the rumors of his resignation.

Daniel H. Pulcifer Dead.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 21.—A special to The Evening Wisconsin from Showano, Wis., says Daniel H. Pulcifer, late United States postoffice inspector, died suddenly of heart disease. A FASHIONABLE RUSE.

That Things Are Not Always What They Seem Evidenced In This Case.

The season of weddings taxes the ingenuity no less than the purses of fashionable devotees. The deceptions to which many of the so called upper crust resort to discharge social obligations are almost incredible to old fogies not in the swim. It has long been the accepted custom of brides who receive many duplicate presents to exchange the same at the stores where they were purchased. When the articles have not been marked or defaced in any manner merchants, as a rule, are very willing to make satisfactory exchanges.

A volume might be written on the revelations that this custom has often brought about. It has been the unguessed cause of more than one social sensation. Less than a year ago a fashionable bride of Gotham received a gorgeously showy gift in repousse silver from an old schoolgirl friend, daughter of a multimillionaire. The present was displayed in a beautiful box bearing the stamp of a famous house, and attracted unusual attention from the guests. Several months after the wedding the bride, in an unlucky moment, took this apparently gorgeous gift, together with others, to exchange for articles for which she had more immediate need.

When the selections she made were delivered at her residence she was surprised to find the repousse silver. A note from the firm stated that the silver had not been purchased at their store. It was plated goods. They added, however, that they had detected the trade mark of a firm in the Bowery. If madam desired, they would furnish the address. A visit to the Bowery jeweler confirmed this assertion, and the indignant bride bided her time. In a short time the giver of the spurious silver was wedded. The most striking gift she received was a familiar box, in which reposed the unlucky piece of repousse silver. It bore no name; it was not exhibited. No comment was ever made by either party. To all outward appearance the social intimacy is unruffled.—New York Herald.

LESS TRUTHFUL.

This Is a Man's Assertion In Regard to Women Compared With Men.

A man who has made a study of women and their ways remarked the other day that women are, as a set, less frank and truthful than men. Whatever truth there is in this assertion we may be sure it is at least not innate, but due to the difference in the requirements of the two sexes and the consequent difference in their education. Men are taught to reveal true natures from the cradle to the grave. Men are taught that, being human, they are subject to various passions and liable to fall into error which it is not necessary for them to conceal, for if they deviate from the straight and narrow path the world will quickly forget and forgive. Women, on the contrary, are taught that if they are not inwardly statues of decorum, they must make it appear that they are, for the world is merciless to one of their sex who by word or deed hints that the smallest tottering on her pedestal, not to mention even a momentary descent from it, is possible.

In short, women are required to conceal their real human selves from all beholders as absolutely as they conceal their lower limbs in the conventional draperies of femininity, while men are as free to reveal their real selves to the world as to clothe themselves in the nether garments of their sex. But concealment or lack of frankness is by no means untruthfulness.—Philadelphia Press.

The Frog—A Natural History.

Born of a stone, he lives under a stone and will dig in it his grave.

I visit him frequently, and, whenever I lift the stone, I fear to find him and fear that he may not be there. He is there. Hidden in that dry refuge, clean, narrow, quite his own, he fills it, swollen like a miser's purse.

If the rain makes him come out, he comes toward me. A few heavy jumps, and he stops on his thighs and looks at me with his reddened eyes. Though the unjust world treats him as a leper, I do not fear to sit by him and to place near his face my human face.

Then I will overcome a remnant of disgust and caress you with my hand, frog!

One of Her Majesty's Collies.

Among the colored collies the queen's favorite is Darnley II. In color he is black and sable, relieved by the snowiest of collars and ruffs, white legs and white tip to brush. He was presented to her majesty by the Rev. Hans Hamilton. Darnley II is quite of the latter day stamp and type of collie—a nice long head with semierect ears—and one of the smartest of his breed at Windsor. Whenever the queen comes to the kennels, Darnley is asked for and brought out to show himself, and, good dog, he at once "grins" with delight and welcome.—Westminster Gazette.

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS

Of the Board of County Commissioners Held at a Regular Meeting January 7th, 1896.

Conformable to legal requirements the board of commissioners of Polk County met in regular session, Jan. 7th, 1896, with all members present.

The meeting was called to order by the clerk and a reorganization of the board was effected for 1896 by the unanimous election of Anthon Lindem as chairman, who accepted the honor with appropriate thanks.

The record of the proceeding meeting was red and approved.

Chairman Lindem announced the following as standing committees for the present year:

On finance—Rinehart, Kirsch and Norland.

On bonds—Kirsch, Oppegaard and Rinehart.

On roads and bridges—Norland, Oppegaard and Rinehart.

On taxes—Kirsch, Rinehart and Norland.

On county hospital—Kirsch, Oppegaard and Norland.

On purchasing supplies—Oppegaard, Norland and Kirsch.

It was moved by Com. Rinehart that the proposal of Bodine for county printing be omitted from consideration in connection with the other bids on the grounds that said proposal was not accompanied by the necessary bond. Motion adopted.

Following bids for the county printing were presented and considered:

Crookston Minn. Jan. 7th, 1896.

To the board of County Commissioners of Polk County Minn.,

Gentlemen:—

I herewith submit the following proposition for doing the printing and publishing required by Polk County and its officers during the ensuing year.

In consideration of having the Crookston Tribune, a weekly and legal newspaper, designated as the official paper of Polk County for the ensuing year, I will publish the delinquent tax list for four cents per description; the financial statement for thirty five cents per folio for the first insertion; and twenty-five cents per folio for each subsequent insertion; the official proceedings of the county board for forty cents per folio. All other notices required to be published, thirty-five cents per folio for the first insertion, and tweny-five cents per folio for each subsequent insertion.

I agree further to publish the afore said delinquent tax list, financial statement and commissioners proceedings in the Crookston Tribune, Fertile Journal, Red River Tidende, and Thief River Falls Press.

I will do the job printing required by said county or its officers at the following rates.

The following resolution was offered by Com. Oppegaard:

Whereas this board has received the joint bid of C. C. Knappen, publisher of the FISHER BULLETIN, H. E. Ives, publisher of the St. Hilaire Spectator, C. T. Lanman, publisher of the McIntosh Times, and W. E. McKenzie, Publisher of the Crookston Times, wherein they agree to do the county printing for the year of 1896 and publish the delinquent tax list. The financial statement and commissioners proceedings in the above-named papers, also to do the job work at prices stated in bid and:

Resolved that the bid of C. C. Knappen, H. E. Ives, C. T. Lanman, W. E. McKenzie be accepted and the FISHER BULLETIN a weekly newspaper printed and published at the village of Fisher be designated the official paper of the county wherein shall be published according to the law, the deliquent tax list, the financial statement and commissioners proceedings. As after considering the bids before us as to prices and a medium of getting said publication before the largest number of tax payers, we consider this the lowest bid before us

1st District	Com.	Oppegaard	yes
2	do	do Lindum	yes
3	do	do Kirsch	yes
4	do	do Norland	yes
5	do	do Rinehart	no

The resolution was declared adopted, Com. Rhinehart directed that his vote be recorded in the negative on the ground that the combination named in the resolution consisted wholly of Democratic and Peoples Party papers

Moved by Com. Kirsch that the board proceed to the election of court house janitor for the present year and that the vote be taken by ballot, motion adopted

On the 7th ballot G. Shefstad received 3 votes A. Halvorson 1 vote and N. G. Engstrom 1 vote

It was moved by Com. Kirsch that the ballot be made formal and that G. Shefstad be declared elected janitor for the present year. The motion was adopted

Moved by Com. Norland that the motion declaring G. Shefstad elected janitor be reconsidered. The motion was adopted, Com's Norland, Oppegaard and Lindem voting in the affirmative and Com's Kirsch and Rhinehart in the negative.

Moved by Com. Norland that the board proceed to the election of janitor for the present year by viva voca vote. Motion carried.

Moved by Com. Kirsch that G. Schefstad be chosen as janitor for year 1896. The motion was lost, Com. Oppegaard Norland and Lindem voting no and Kirsch and Rinehart "yes"

Moved by Com. Norland that N. G. Engstrom be chosen as janitor of the court house for the year 1896. Motion carried. Com. Norland, Oppegaard and Lindem voting in the affirmative and Kirsch and Rinehart in the negative. The chair declared N. G. Engstrom elected janitor.

Peanuts For Consumptives.

He gives his patients as many peanuts as they can eat without injuring their digestive organs. Two young ladies, who had been the rounds of the doctors and taken cod liver oil and tonics till they were nearly dead, were put on this treatment and recovered. Concerning these cases Dr. Brewer says: "I now commenced feeding (do not laugh) peanuts. One would think this a very indigestible diet, but they craved them, and it has always been my policy to find out what my patients desire to eat, and unless it is too unreasonable I humor them. Both young ladies have become quite plump, and after a year's inhalation (of vinegar fumes) have ceased coughing, and I pronounced them well. The peanut was long known as an excellent fat producer, and much more agreeable than rancid shark oil that oftentimes is sold for cod liver oil. While not all can digest peanuts, a great many, even with feeble digestion, eat them without discomfort. It beats the Koch lymph and is the most satisfactory treatment I have ever tried for these diseases."—Journal of Hygiene.

Lucky Joe Jefferson.

Joseph Jefferson has amassed a fortune as an actor, but he is about to make probably a very much larger fortune in quite another direction. Jefferson owns a plantation in Louisiana. A friend of his said to him a few months ago, "I believe there is oil on your plantation, and I will pay to have the matter investigated by an expert." Jefferson gave an absentminded consent. The expert made the examination and discovered a big oil well. A company has been formed to work it, and Jefferson is to have a half interest in it. It is said he will become a millionaire because of the find.

AUTUMN SONG.

A song of the reaping time,
Of the feast days of the year;
A song of the grain and the well filled wain,
And the husking time that's near.
Here's hey, for a merry romp
In the brown old fields and vales!
And ho, for the mead where the cattle feed!
And ho, for the autumn gales!
A hunt through the tall, dim woods
For the fruit of the oak and pine,
A peep at the nest of the last redbreast
And a call where the chipmunks dine.
A smile in the morning skies,
And a laugh in the streams that flow
As they share their joy with the girl and boy
That today may a-rambling go.
—Frank Walcott Hutt in St. Nicholas.

WHAT THE GRAND DUKE HEARD.

European Officers Discussed the Capture of American Cities.

The Grand Duke Alexis was at Kiel. He is a full Russian admiral now, and the head of the Russian navy. He was a frequent visitor to the Americans, and, like all the other notables, talked with the utmost frankness to our officers.

One day, watching the Columbia as she rode the waves as lightly and with the easy grace of a blue wing teal, the grand duke said to a captain: "I'm glad you Americans are rebuilding your fleet. Do you know what most impressed me when I visited your country? Let me tell you. The first thing was your wonderful national wealth; the second, the absolutely inadequate means at your disposal for national defense. You were like a drunken man with pockets full of money and two or three hungry ruffians on the dark side of the street waiting a chance to attack him."

"Why, do you mean to say"— began the somewhat startled captain, when the Russian put his hand on the other's arm and said: "Twice in my career I have heard the project of capturing one or two of your great cities and holding them for ransom deliberately discussed by officers of European fleets whose countries had hard work to make ends meet. And they meant it too. I once made a sensation when, after listening to a conversation of this kind, in which the officers of four different fleets took part, I said: 'Gentlemen, the United States and Russia are friends. Should she be unjustly attacked, Russia would help to see that the wrong was righted.' Ah, I can't tell you where or who it was. Come over to the Kurik [the Russian flagship] and have a glass of wine."—Washington Post.

The Faust Legend.

Almost every renowned man of antiquity in the middle ages was believed to be attended by a spiritus familiaris, and not a few were suspected of being in direct league with the devil. Probably the oldest legend of which the Faust legend is a continuous thread is that of Simon Magus, mentioned in the history of the apostles.

According to Justin, he was a native of Gitton, a village in Samaria. He was, no doubt, a man of great intellectual powers. He was the father of the school of the Gnostics. It is also reported of him that he could make himself invisible, that he could pass through flames unharmed, could transpose matter, make gold and exorcise demons—in fact, he laid claim to all these powers and his name lived in the mouths of the people as a sort of Demiurg through many centuries until some other miracle working personality took his place at the popular fireside. Unusual accomplishments, great erudition, were attributed to the supernatural influence, and the general disposition to superstitious assumption was strengthened on the one hand by dogmatic affirmation on the part of the church of the existence of a personal satan, with his numerous household, and, on the other hand, by incorporating the magic arts among the practical sciences, of which astrology and alchemy occupied no mean part.—Menorah.

Man Overboard.

The presence of mind of a certain well known actor was always very remarkable, but was never put to so severe a test as on the following occasion. While acting the part of a pirate chief he was being conveyed in a vessel across the stage with his band of brigands on deck beside him.

One of the supers, whose duty it was to work the waves under large sheets of gauze, was so unfortunate as to put his head through the gauze and to appear standing in the middle of the mimic sea before the full view of the audience.

The actor on the vessel, without losing his presence of mind, called out, "A man overboard!" and the astonished super was hauled upon deck by the pirates amid the applause of the spectators, who imagined it was a part of the play.—London Spectator.

Inoculation For Yellow Fever.

At the meeting of the American Public Health association at Denver, Dr. Manuel Garmona y Valle of Mexico read a description of his discovery of a certain cure for yellow fever, which he has used successfully in hundreds of cases. His method is to make a subcutaneous injection in the cellular tissue of the arm of a secretion taken from a yellow fever patient between the fourth and fourteenth days of the fever. This effects a cure, but the disease can be guarded against in this way, just as smallpox is guarded against by vaccination.—Baltimore Sun.

How to Use Cranberries.

Cranberries should take the place given over to apples. All fruits have a medicinal value, and the cranberry ranks as an antiscorbutic. It is a blood cleaner; bruised and heated, not cooked, it has a healing effect on humors. One cut in half and bound on a corn will cure it in one or more applications. It will be equally efficacious in the case of pimples on the face. A cooling, refreshing drink may be made by boiling the berries in water double the measure of berries. Boil until the juice has been thoroughly extracted, sweeten with one-half pound of sugar to the pint of juice and bottle hot. This should be served in the same manner as raspberry and currant shrub.

SAILORS' PETS.

Animals Which Vary the Monotony of Existence For Jack Tar.

Three things, writes a naval contributor, there are which do more than anything else to lighten the burden of existence such as it is borne by Jack Tar, says the Westminster Gazette. These three are grog, the hornpipe and a pet animal, and the pet animal is the greatest solace of the three. There is scarcely a vessel afloat, from one of our line of battleships down to a canalboat, that has not a two or four footed pet on board. Sailors proverbially make pets of almost any animal they are shipmates with—elephants, bears, sheep, goats, monkeys, gazelles and raccoons among the mammalia, bantam cocks, parrots, cockatoos, magpies and sea gulls among bipeds, and even inhabitants of the ocean, such as seals and turtle, have been laid under contribution to provide amusement for our bluejackets!

An elephant seems "a large order" as a sailor's pet aboard ship, but who of the senior naval officers does not remember the vessel called by the nickname of H. M. S. Menagerie, and the elephant on board of that paddle wheel frigate when they were on the Indian station. The elephant was regularly stationed and harnessed to the jib halyards, and when the order was given to "Make all plain sail," he made a triumphant bellow and ran along the waist until the pipe was sounded to "Belay!" to the delenda est Carthago of any toes that got into his way.

Admiral Sir G. W—— told me that when he commanded an Indian troopship a fullgrown tiger was embarked for passage to England as a present from some Indian prince to the queen. It was a magnificent animal, and for many years afterward was exhibited at the zoological gardens. One morning, about 5:30, the captain was awakened by a messenger, who said, "Please sir, the tiger has broken loose!" His reply was, "Lock my cabin door, and call me when he's in his cage again." It appears that in cleaning the cage, the men being then washing decks, the door of the cage had been unfastened and the beast had escaped, causing a regular stampede, the bluejackets forward running up the rigging and the soldiers taking to the hammock nettings and the hurricane deck. The tiger ran aft; the men had not heard of its escape and were throwing buckets of water about. The scene appeared to puzzle the tiger. At any rate, an old quartermaster realized the situation, and taking his lantern flashed it full in the face of the tiger. He then took the animal by the scruff of the neck, ran it forward to its cage and slammed and fastened the door in a jiffy.

Here is another anecdote of a real pet, this time in the same ship. There are several officers now alive who can vouch for the truth of this story. The first lieutenant had a very jolly little monkey, quite a general favorite. One evening, just before dinner, on a guest night, the ship being in harbor, the first lieutenant went into his cabin with the monkey, and, opening a box of very choice Havana cigars rather hastily, by accident smashed two of them—the parts of which he threw overboard out of his cabin port. Then, filling his cigar case, as dinner was already on the table, he left the box on the table and hurried to mess.

It had been the custom for his monkey to follow him and wait by the table for a morsel of food now and again. This evening, after some little time had elapsed, and the monkey did not appear, his owner, excusing himself for a minute, ran back to his cabin to see what his pet was doing, knowing besides, having a strong imitative trait of character, it was generally up to some mischief or other. Alas, he was too late! The monkey had only too well imitated his master, for as the first lieutenant entered the cabin, he was just in time to see the last of his cherished weeds taken out of the box and thrown out of the port overboard.

Bitter Jerrold.

Among the sayings attributed to Douglas Jerrold is a very bitter one he applied to Mark Lemon, then editor of Punch. Lemon was deeply attached to Dickens and showed it in a very open fashion, which perhaps aroused the great satirist's jealousy. At all events, as Jerrold was walking out one day with Lemon and another friend, and Dickens with several more behind them, Lemon suddenly dropped away and turned back. "What has become of Punch?" asked Jerrold's companion. "Did you not hear Dickens whistle?" was the cynical reply. "Dickens pays the dog tax for Lemon."

More Fortunate Than Most.

"Do you know that Snigley is the father of twins?"

"Yes, I heard it last night at the club. Did you hear what he said about it?"

"No. What?"

"He said that they were the first duplicate wedding presents that Mrs. Snigley and he had received."—Brooklyn Life.

BOBBY BURNS.

The Darkest and Most Critical Days In the Life of the Poet.

As it is always darkest before the dawn, the year which was the most critical in Burns' life and which was destined to give birth to his better fortune opened with peculiar and unmitigated dreariness. The Kilmarnock edition of 1786 appeared while the poet was "skulking from covert to covert" to avoid the jail with which Jean Armour's father threatened him; its raison d'etre was the earning of sufficient money to pay his passage to Jamaica. Having "pocketed, all expenses deducted, nearly £20," Burns took a final farewell of his friends. He says:

"My chest was on my way to Greenock when a letter from Dr. Blacklock (of Edinburgh) to a friend of mine overthrew all my schemes by opening up new prospects to my poetic ambition."

His fame was, in fact, spreading rapidly. Farm laborers and servant girls expended their hardly earned wages on the purchase of his poems, and the name of the "Ayrshire Plowman" began to be noised among members of wealthier and more cultivated circles. The first person to extend to him the right hand of fellowship was Dugald Stewart; the second was Mrs. Dunlop. Their friendship came with all the charm of a novelty which is yet not strange, but supplies a long felt though indefinable need, while, in the latter case, Burns' proud and independent spirit was gratified by the knowledge that the obligation was not all on his side, but that Mrs. Dunlop and her friends had reason to be indebted to his poet's spells.

After two winters spent in Edinburgh, which seem to have given the poet more disappointment and disgust than gratification, Burns married "his Jean" and settled at Ellisland, an upland farm on the Dalswinton estate, six miles from Dumfries. To this Ellisland period—that is, from 1788 to 1791—most of the unpublished letters to Mrs. Dunlop belong. They are chiefly interesting as indicating Burns' real views on his excise post and his distaste to farming. There were bad times in the eighteenth as in the nineteenth century, and in a letter of March 25, 1789, we hear Burns raising the farmers' customary complaint:

"Madam, I had two plans of life before me—the excise and farming. I thought by the glimmering of my own prudence the excise was my most eligible scheme, but all my great friends, and particularly you, were decidedly, and therefore decided me, for farming. My master, Mr. Miller, out of a real though mistaken benevolence, sought me industriously out to set me in this farm, as he said, to give me a lease which would make me comfortable and easy. I was a stranger to the country, the farm, the soil, and so ventured on a bargain that, instead of being comfortable, is and will be a very hard bargain, if at all practicable. I am sorry to tell you this, madam, but it is a damning truth."—Fortnightly Review.

Laughter Prolongs the Performance.

"Why is the performance so long tonight?" asked a lounger in the lobby, as he glanced at his watch and saw that the time was 11 o'clock. "Have you put in anything new?"

"No, but it's a warm house tonight."

"What difference does that make? I haven't noticed many extra encores tonight."

"But there's more laughing tonight. The house laughs oftener than usual and keeps it up longer."

"Would that make much difference in the length of the performance?"

"Anywhere from 5 to 15 minutes. An ordinary laugh at some joke on the stage lasts 2 or 3 seconds. When the house laughs for 6 seconds, it is a good, long laugh, and 10 seconds is almost the limit. I don't mean the applause to call some one back, but the laugh sprinkled through the dialogue. A good natured and cordial audience, will laugh 6 seconds at every 'gag.' Ten 'gags' will prolong the show a minute, and when you figure that three acts are well filled with funny lines, you will understand why the show sometimes lasts until 11 o'clock and on chilly evenings is over at 10:40 or 10:45."—Chicago Record.

On the Back Fence.

"It's strange," said the Maltese cat, "that in this life nobody seems to get what he really needs without difficulty."

"I've heard that before," said the tortoise shell cat.

"Yes, but I've had more cause than usual to notice it. If I were shoes, I wouldn't have anything like the collection of bootjacks and blacking brushes that come now without the asking."—Washington Star.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of five hundred and eighty-seven dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice, upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Mary A. Holovik and Hans M. Holovik her husband mortgagors, to Security Trust Company of Nashua N. H. mortgagee, bearing date the 17th day of December 1890, and, with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota, on the 19th day of December 1890, at 2:30 o'clock p. m. in book 5 of mortgages, on page 112. Which said mortgage together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Security Trust Co. of Nashua N. H. mortgagee to Mrs. Sarah D. Cooper by written assignment dated on the 7th day of January 1891 and recorded in the office of the Register of deeds on the 20th day of January 1891, at 8:40 o'clock a. m. in Book 56 of mortgages on page 83 and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said Mortgage, viz:

The [illegible] quarter of Section [illegible], Township One hundred and Forty-seven in Range Forty-five in Polk County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Polk County at the front door of the Court House in the city of Crookston in said County and State, on the 8th day of June 1895 at 10 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises and fifty dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said Mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated March 1st A. D. 1895.

PARALYSIS.

From the Press, New York City.

Morris Preslaner of No. 1 Pitt Street, New York, who is a real estate agent and collector of rents, caught a severe cold early last spring, which settled upon his kidneys. Soon he began to suffer severe pain in his backbone, sides and chest. His symptoms grew rapidly more alarming, until at last he was as helpless as a child, and could scarcely move as he lay on his bed.

Though a native of Berlin, Mr. Preslaner has lived in this country for forty years, having served the country of his adoption by three years' hard service in the civil war. He enlisted with the Nineteenth Illinois Infantry, taking part in many battles and marching with General Sherman to the sea. He is now a member of Koltes Post, G. A. R., and is one of the most popular men in the Post.

Mr. Preslaner told a reporter the story of his dreadful illness and wonderful recovery. The reporter met him as he was returning from a long walk; and, saying that he had heard of his wonderful cure, asked him to tell the story. His words were as follows: "To begin with, I was taken sick just a year and a month ago, having taken a severe cold which settled on my kidneys. At first I thought the pain that I had suffered would soon pass away, but, instead of doing this, it grew more intense every day, so that in a week I could walk only with considerable difficulty.

"I called in a doctor, who said I had locomotor ataxia and began treating me for that disease. He did me no good, and all summer long I could scarcely attend to my business at all. Then I called another doctor and took his medicine for several weeks, but experienced no relief. Dr. Truman Nichols, of No. 257 East Broadway, whom I at last called in, helped me more than any of the other doctors, but along towards fall I grew worse despite his treatment.

"Early in November the little strength I had in my legs left me and I was unable to stand. The pain in my back and sides became almost unbearable, and my limbs grew cold. An electric battery I bought failed to help me, and for weeks I felt myself gradually growing weaker until all hope left.

"Some time before this I had read of a wonderful cure a man had received from Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, but was so prejudiced against what I thought was a patent medicine of the usual worthless character that I could not make up my mind to try them. As my pains increased and death seemed coming near, I thought of what I had read and of the symptoms of the man who had been cured. They were precisely the same as mine, and at last, with my wife's earnest entreaty, I consented to try the Pink Pills.

"I am now convinced that these pills saved my life. Gradually my strength began to return, the desire to live grew stronger within me. After having taken three boxes I left my bed. This was early in March. All pain had left me, and that terrible dead feeling in my legs had gone away. I was still very weak, but before I had taken the fourth box I was able to get down stairs for a short walk in the open air. Now I feel as if I had been born again and am as happy as a child."

All diseases, such as locomotor ataxia, St. Vitus' dance, partial paralysis, sciatica, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervous headache, palpitation of the heart, effects of la grippe, pale and sallow complexions, and all forms of weakness, either in man or woman, disappear when Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are taken. Pink Pills can be bought of any dealer, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50—they are never sold by the hundred or in bulk) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A NERVY SHERIFF.

He Saves the Life of One of His Prisoners.

Sullivan, Ind., Jan. 28.—A mob today endeavored to lynch Grant Atterbury, who is under arrest on a charge of assaulting his sister-in-law, but was driven off by the sheriff. The door of the jail was broken down and an entrance forced. The sheriff confronted the mob and threatened to kill the first man who came up the stairs toward the cell room. The mob halted, and finally withdrew, but threatened to return within twenty-four hours. Atterbury strongly asserts his innocence, and the only evidence against him is that bloodhounds followed a trail to his door.

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 28.—A highly sensational shooting affray occurred in the fashionable Arlington hotel at Hot Springs Friday afternoon, the details of which have hitherto been carefully suppressed. The circumstances attending the affair, as related by eye-witnesses, is to the effect that Col. S. H. Stitt, one of the proprietors of the Arlington, and Col. Abner L. Gaines, a Gaines, a guest, became involved in a dispute, when both drew their revolvers. A hotel detective took a hand at this juncture, and promiscuous firing ensued, in which Abner Gaines was wounded below the knee. Gaines resides in London, England, and is very wealthy. He makes regular visits to Hot Springs in connection with his interest in the valuable Gaines estate.

UPRISING IN HAYTI.

The Insurrection Suppressed After Three Days' Rioting.

New York, Jan. 28.—A special to the World from Kingston, Jamaica, says: A serious uprising is reported in Port au Prince, the capital of Hayti. After three days' rioting in the streets the insurrection was suppressed. There is general uneasiness throughout the island. A company of Haytians arrived here on the steamer Ardle and sailed again after conferring with the exiles here. Agents are said to be secretly fermenting revolution in all parts of the republic, and the government detectives are unable to identify them. President Hippolyte is greatly worried.

Woman Suffragists.

Washington, Special.—The twenty eighth annual convention of the National Woman's Suffrage Association began here to-day. Three hundred delegates are present.

$500.00 for $1.00.

Unadilla, N. Y., (Special)—One of our substantial men her, Fred J. Joyce, recently made a $2.50 investment, and considers the results worth $500 to him. For over fifteen years Mr. Joyce was an inveterate smoker and the tobacco habit gained such a hold on him that it affected his nervous system and made it impossible for him to quit. Upon realizing the loss of health and money which threatened him, he made many unsuccessful attempts to break himself of the life-sapping habit, until on a chance, he took No-To-Bac, the great cure which has saved over 300,000 tobacco victims. Two boxes completely cured Mr. Joyce, and he has no desire for tobacco now whatever. When he attempts to smoke it makes him as dizzy as when he first acquired the habit. He is now in the very best physical condition, and $500 would not tempt him to use tobacco again.

A Pennsylvania Farmer.

M. M. Luther, East Troy, Pa., grew last season over 207 bushels Salzer's Silver Mine Oats from one measured acre! How is that for old Pennsylvania? Over 30,000 farmers are going to try and beat this in 1896 and win $200 in gold! Then think of 116 bus. barley from one acre and 1,200 big full bushels of potatoes and 230 bushels of Golden Triumph Corn!

What's teosinte, and sand vetch and spurry and fifty other rare things? Well Salzer's catalogue will tell you. Largest growers of clovers, grasses and farm seeds in America. Freights cheap.

If you will cut this out and send it with 10c postage to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., you will receive their mammoth catalogue and ten packages grains and grasses, including above oats, free. w.n.

Frost, Frolic and Business.

The wind over frozen ponds and lakes, over snow-fields of plains and open country, is heavily charged with frost and fine particles of frozen matter. It is the most penetrating way for chill to set in. Sudden warmth, sudden chill, and severe colds. Girls and boys skating, driving for pleasure or business, and men at work afield know the difference in temperature. Yet the youngsters skate away, and, with mouth open, laughing, take in a dose of sore throat. Drivers and workmen throw aside wraps, and all know the next day, from soreness and stiffness, what sudden chill means. Now, the best thing to do when housed is to rub well at once with St. Jacobs Oil. If you do you will not have sore throat; or if you are stiff and sore, it will cure by warming the surface to throw out the chill.

A Leap Year Engagement.

"Mr. Wishington," remarked Mrs. Cayenne, with a very gracious smile, "you have not been as polite as most young men of my acquaintance. You have never proposed to me."

"Why—weally," replied Willie, "I nevah thought you would listen to any such conversation on my pahl."

"Oh, but I should, I can assure you. Miss Miggins and Miss Giltinby both told me that you are wonderfully funny when you propose."—Washington Star.

ONE OF NATURE'S ODDITIES.

The Bug that Waits Seventeen Years for Its Transformation.

The late L. L. Langstroth when a boy was a close observer of insect life. Once he was whipped for wearing holes in his trousers by too much kneeling on the ground to observe ants. Between the ages of eight and twelve he made a thorough study of cicadas, including the "seventeen-year-locusts," as they appeared in Center Square, Philadelphia. This is his account of them:

"The larvae of these insects come out of the ground late in the afternoon, and I noticed that the holes out of which they crept were almost as smoothly bored as though made with an augur. As soon as an insect emerged it made for a tree or some other object. If suddenly approached while in the act of mounting, it would often drop to the ground as if dead. After fastening its sharp claws into some chosen surface, it remains motionless for a short time. When first leaving its hole the body of the larvae feels quite hard but soon becomes soft as dough. Then it can no longer crawl, and if prevented, before becoming helpless, from getting a firm hold on some object, it could not emerge from its shell; but, fastened firmly by the claws, it soon begins alternately to contract and expand its body, until what at first resembles a little crack on its back opens wider and wider, disclosing more of the emerging insect. At last it raises its head and the lower part of its body from the shell, then the legs, and rests ae while until its claws become strong enough to enable it to climb out altogether and cling to the rough surface of the tree. Its wings, which are narrow and thick, now thin out gradually, like a piece of dough over which a roller is continually passing. Reaching their full expansion, they remain flattened until quite dry, when suddenly they assume the position for flight.

"As the transition from hard to soft conditions is very short, it is obvious that the holes in the ground from which they emerge, often bored through hard ground, must be made a considerable time before they are required, to enable the insect to push quickly through the little space that is needed to let it out when its instincts teach it that the time is at hand for its coming changes.

"The locust lives only a short time as a flying insect, when the female bores holes into the extremities of small twigs in which she inserts her eggs. The larvae, when hatched, feed upon the twigs until the latter wither and fall to the ground. When the young cicadas penetrate the earth to reach the roots of trees, by sucking the juices of which, with their sharp, hollow proboscis (as was discovered not many years ago by a distinguished lady) the species live for seventeen years."

Returning to Philadelphia in his fortieth year, Mr. Langstroth, it being locust year, collected larvae from trees in Independence Square and sat up until midnight, with his daughter and some school companions to show them the curious changes just described; but from boyish recollection he could have described them almost as vividly and accurately before as after the later observations.—Country Gentleman.

THINKS SHE WAS ONCE A CAT.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Believes in the Reincarnation Theory.

Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox believes in reincarnation. She thinks, possibly, she was a cat once. This is due, probably, to the fact that she bestows much of her surplus affection, her interest and the unanswered wondering of her heart upon Banjo.

Banjo is her pet cat. He is, of course, the most remarkable specimen of the feline race that ever scampered after a fluttering ribbon or tried to chase its own tail. Banjo is an aristocrat and he is intelligent. One characteristic that Mrs. Wilcox points to with pride is Banjo's love of mice. Other cats may be afraid of mice, but Banjo is composed in their presence. At night he slumbers on a downy pillow in a warm room, furnished exclusively for his comfort. Mrs. Wilcox declares that Banjo was not always a cat. She has an idea that in some former existence she and Banjo were friends. It is her theory that the soul goes into the vegetable and mineral state from time to time, and that occasionally it passes into animal life—human beings, for instance. By centering our forces at a given point, Mrs. Wilcox thinks, we can tell in advance the next stopping-place of our souls.

"Over three-fourths of the inhabitants of the globe," she says, "believe in reincarnation. I do not call myself a theosophist, because theosophy is only a branch of a mighty tree of truth under which my soul finds shelter and satisfaction. There are too many doctrines in the world and not enough beliefs. I am satisfied with my panicless religion—the reincarnation theory. I believe there is a possible Christ in each of us, and the more unselfishly we live the more quickly we attain to it by lessening the future incarnations and hurrying on to the goal."—New York Letter, in Philadelphia Press.

A SMALL MAN.

An Enterprising Little Newsboy Attracts Attention.

I was attracted by a little newsboy. It was evident that he had not been selling papers very long, for he did not mingle with the other boys, and the childish voice was very weak as he cried his wares. His clothes were neat, but very old and carefully patched. Around his neck was a clean collar and a home-made necktie that had once been a piece of a black alpaca dress. Everything about him betokened that a loving mother's hand had tried to make her boy appear a little gentleman as he went out to sell his papers. I talked with the young news merchant, and found that he lived with his mother, and she is a crippled widow, with none but him to rely upon. For four years of the eleven that had been thus far allotted him by Father Time the little fellow had struggled manfully to bear the burdens fate had decreed should be his, and he proudly declared that "it was not often they went hungry, and then only for a few days, when rent fell due." He had only been selling papers for a week, but earned $3, almost a dollar of which they had sayed toward the rent. And as I left him the lines of care and thought already drawn about the face that had not yet lost the innocence of babyhood, and the picture of a cripled mother proud of her boy, and suffering that he must thus early in the morning of life do the work that belongs to its midday hours, the penury of living on $2 a week, and yet the happiness of saving a few cents, made me look in a new way upon the little fellows who, running around the corners, darting into street cars and dodging between passers-by upon the streets, try to keep the public informed and themselves from starving.—Washington Star.

One of Paul Jones' Men.

It is not generally known that a waiter boy named Isaac Royal, who served under John Paul Jones, of Revolutionary fame, afterward came to Dover, and lies in an unmarked grave at East Dover, Me. A son, the late John Royal of Dover South Mills, related incidents which were remembered by his father while in Jones' service. He was but thirteen years old at the time. Previous to the battle, as the vessels were lying near together, one dark night, the crew of the Bonhomme Richard invited that of the Seraphis to come aboard and partake of a feast, they having killed a pig for the occasion. They did so, and, presumably, had a fine time, but as the morning was breaking, Jones asked them to look aloft, and see what they were sailing under. A glance upward revealed the stars and stripes. They were accordingly, detained as prisoners.—Bangor Commercial.

Wedding-Gown Book.

If you would like to give a bride a gift quite new, buy or make for her a wedding gown book. Put on it a cover of white watered silk or vellum, and letter it with gold or silver letters that will spell "The Wedding-Gown Book." Or, if you have the time and disposition, paint on it a bride in wedding array, or a bevy of bridesmaids. Inside paint on every page a verse or line that seems to you suited to the occasion. Fasten across the pages narrow ribbons or bands of white silk elastic, under which may be slipped and held fast bits of the wedding gowns and the bridesmaids' frocks. Have spaces for the photographs of all the bridal party, and a page or two where the names of the guests can be written.—New York Post.

The New York stock exchange threatens to expel G. B. Hopkins, of the firm of Kennett, Hopkins & Co., Chicago, who was implicated in bucketshop work.

John L. Sullivan has decided to quit Boston and the stage "for good," he says. A Milwaukee brewer is going to fit up a magnificent saloon for him in Chicago.

Mrs. W. H. Bennett of Colona, Mich., has fallen heir to a fortune of $62,000 through the recent death of an uncle in Germany. Her husband is a laborer, and has been drawing a salary of 75 cents a day.

The committee appointed to consider the charges of immorality against Rev. Dr. C. O. Brown, pastor of the First Congregational church in San Francisco, has refused to act, on the ground that it has no power.

The Rockefeller consolidated mines, although owning four times as much ore in the Superior region as any other mining company in the world, is still buying more. The latest is the Mesaba Chief, bought for $150,000.

The fact has become public at Cheyenne, Wyo., that a discovery of rich ore had been made by Cheyenne mining men in the vicinity of Table mountain, thirty miles north of that place, and an exodus of claim seekers has commenced for the new camp.

Official figures show that the exhibition of the Dore pictures in Chicago has drawn greater crowds than in any other city in the world. In three days the number of visitors to the collection there has been over 13,500. No such record has ever been made before, even in London, where the Dore gallery was a permanent institution for twenty-one years.

ST. PAUL TRAGEDY

SHOOTING AFFRAY ON THE STREETS OF THE CAPITAL CITY.

Joseph Friedman, Driven Mad From Love and Jealousy, Fatally Shoots Julia Oelker, Who Jilted Him, Wounds John Hufman, His Rival, and Suicides.

St. Paul, Feb. 4.—Joseph Friedman, a waiter aged twenty-four, attempted to murder Julia Oelker, aged eighteen, and John Hufman, aged twenty-two, last night. He reserved the last bullet in the revolver for himself. It entered his right breast and killed him instantly. The girl was shot in the back and will die. Hufman was not seriously injured. One of the three shots fired at him entered near the point of his collar bone. It made a superficial wound extending to his left armpit. Miss Oelker had jilted Friedman, and, in his own words, "driven him mad."

Friedman is said to have been an ex-convict. A little over a year ago he was sentenced to ten months in the penitentiary for stealing a box of soap from a box car. His sentence was reduced to eight months on account of good behavior. Upon his release, he returned to this city and secured a position as a waiter. For the past two months he has been employed at the Central restaurant at 414 Jackson street. He was a man of temperate habits and reserved disposition. Apparently it was about five months ago that he met Miss Oelker, whose father keeps a saloon at 379 Broadway. The girl lived at 340 East Sixth street. She is a brunette with large, expressive eyes and hair that is inclined to be curley. Her features are large and well moulded. For a girl of eighteen she is very well developed. Generally considered she is pretty and dresses attractively.

Friedman had pressed his attentions upon her, much to the displeasure of the young woman's father. She says that she did not care for him, either. But a few days ago he called on her and asked her to become his wife. His offer was declined. The man was evidently of an insanely jealous disposition, for he kept a careful watch on her movements. Last night when she went to the Grand opera house with Hufman, who runs a barber shop at 355 East Seventh street, near the corner of Olive street, he was at the entrance. The barber did not know the man, but Miss Oelker pointed him out. When the performance was over the couple again saw Friedman at the door. He was eyeing them closely, but did not speak. The girl and her escort passed down to Wabasha street and over to Seventh. They did not notice the waiter again until Wacouta street was reached. He was walking some distance behind them. The girl began to get nervous. She confided her fears to Hufman, who tried to quiet them. Friedman kept behind them until within thirty feet of the corner of East Seventh and Olive streets, where the shooting occurred. Friedman had written a letter telling that he intended to kill the girl, Hufman and himself.

CLEVER MR. LADTMAN.

Disguised as a Journalist, He Passes Bad Checks in St. Paul.

St. Paul, Feb. 4.—A journalist named Ladtman, who has no other claim to that title than his wish to be known as such, has left St. Paul, and numerous mourners, after a short but lively stay. Ladtman ingratiated himself into the good graces of the habitues of Foley's billiard hall, where he was wont to play a smart game of billiards and talk about being an agent of the Associated Press and a special writer for Munsey's and other magazines. When he had made a sufficient number of acquaintances he began to get them to cash checks. First he "soaked" his watch and then redeemed it with a $30 check, getting some $11 in good money from the pawnbroker. Next Mr. Foley was asked to cash a check for $17. He introduced Ladtman to William Bickel, Jr., of the Minnesota Savings bank, who very obligingly cashed the check. Field & Mahler were caught for $25, a Mr. Fredericks exchanged between $15 and $20 for worthless paper, a saleswoman in a cloak store was induced to change a $20 check for a $3 purchase, and, finally, a grocer named Miller was compelled to contribute. There are others, too. Ladtman left town before any of his victims had discovered that he was a fraud.

Will Not Resign.

London, Feb. 4.—To-day Mr. Bayard said relative to a report that he had authorized President Cleveland to announce his resignation in the event of a vote of censure passing the house of representatives at Washington: "I deny any such report with indignation. I never dreamed of such a thing. It is the utmost stuff and nonsense."

Cavalry Horses Cremated.

Aberdeen, S. D., Feb. 4.—The stable occupied by the horses belonging to Troop A, of the Eighth cavalry, at Fort Yates, was destroyed by fire and fifty-three horses and two cows were cremated. Eight horses were rescued from the burning building. Two men were injured in trying to save the horses.

Child Burned to Death.

Aberdeen, S. D., Feb. 4.—A seven-year-old daughter of Karl Renz, living twenty miles north of Eureka, was burned to death while engaged in playing about the stove with other children.

Patent on Bloomers.

Washington, Feb. 4.—After a six months' search through ancient and modern history the patent office has issued a patent on bloomers. The man who gets the credit of inventing this up-to-date article is Thomas H. Royce of Brooklyn. In the future the new woman will have to pay Mr. Royce a royalty on her nether garments.

Col. W. P. Thompson, president of the National Lead company, died of pneumonia in New York to-day.

CONGRESS.

Appropriations for Sectarian Schools Discussed in the House.

Washington, Feb. 4.—The house spent the entire day discussing a series of amendments to strike from the District of Columbia appropriation bill eight appropriations aggregating $34,000 for the maintenance of destitute women and children in various private and sectarian charitable institutions in the district. It was the announced purpose of Mr. Hainer (Rep., Neb.), who led the fight, to place the appropriations in the hands of a board of children's guardians created several years ago. The amendments opened up a wide field of discussion as to the policy of appropriating public money for private and sectarian institutions, and Mr. Robertson (Dem., La.), a member of the appropriations committee, made the direct charge that the war on these appropriations had been inaugurated by the A. P. A. This phase on the matter was, however, approached with great caution by those who spoke; the advocates of the amendments placing their opposition on the broad ground of antagonism to appropriating public money for private or sectarian purposes.

SILVER IN THE HOUSE.

Senate Substitute Referred to the Ways and Means Committee.

Washington, Feb. 4.—The senate free coinage substitute for the house bond bill was referred to the ways and means committee as soon as it reached the house to-day. Under the rules a motion to concur could not be made. It will be reported back to-morrow or next day, with the recommendation that the house non-concur and insist upon its bill. Mr. Dingley, chairman of the ways and means committee, says that "reasonable time" for debate will be allowed. The silver men are asking for two days in which to discuss the bill. The fate of the substitute is so well assured that the house programme excites almost no interest, except for the fact that it will furnish the first direct test of the free silver vote, at from 100 to 125, the latter figure being the limit prophesied by the most sanguine silver men. Mr. Hartman of Montana predicts that the Republican vote for the silver substitute will be 35 or 40, and Mr. Bailey of Texas says that about 70 of the 105 Democrats in this house can be counted upon to support any free silver proposition. These estimates are based upon the proposition of the full attendance, which may not materialize, for there are many absentees this week.

HOPE FOR HUNTER.

This Week May See Him Elected Senator From Kentucky.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 4.—Politicians are looking for lively times in Frankfort during the week, as Senator Ogilvie (Dem.), who was ill, has arrived, and Beckham (Dem.), who was elected Saturday in Nelson county, to succeed Wilson, deceased, will come to-morrow. This makes the assembly again a tie on joint ballot, and it is thought the Republicans will report and act favorably on the contests of Dunlap from Lexington, and Werner, unseating two Democrats, and thus electing Congressman Hunter to the senatorship to succeed Blackburn. The joint assembly convened and went through with the stereotyped preliminaries, which, up to the voting, were without incident. Several of the pairs announced on Saturday held over to-day, and the number present was 112. Senator Stege again complimented Congressman Evans. The sound money men divided, Holloway, Hayward, Johns, N. N. Rice, Speight, Violett and Walker voting for McCreary, and Weissenger and Carroll for Carlisle. Poore voted for Bate. The ballot resulted: Hunter, 55; Blackburn, 46; scattering, 11; necessary to choice, 57.

A Sudden Call.

St. Paul, Feb. 4.—Mrs. Theodore Hamm died suddenly yesterday morning at the family home on Cable avenue. Before marriage Mrs. Hamm was Miss Louisa Bucholz. She was born sixty-three years ago at Baden, Germany. She came to this country in 1854, and was married in Chicago the same year to Theodore Hamm. In 1856 she came to St. Paul with her husband. The children left to mourn a mother's death are William Hamm, Mrs. Louisa John, Mrs. Minnie Keehler, Mrs. Marie Muller, Mrs. Josie Benz and Miss Emma Hamm, all of St. Paul.

Massacres Continue.

London, Feb. 4.—The Daily News this morning gives alleged trustworthy details of the massacres at Oorfa on Dec. 26 and also on Oct. 23, according to which 3,500 persons were killed, 1,500 having perished in the great Gregorian church. Syrians and Catholics were spared. The wells of the city were filled with dead bodies. Foreigners, the dispatch says, were protected by a strong guard placed about the American priests.

Big Lumber Trust.

Port Townsend, Wash., Feb. 4.—The biggest trust ever formed on the Pacific coast and representing a capital of over $70,000,000 has been consummated and went into effect last night. It is the Central Lumber Company of California, and its membership includes every lumber mill, all ship owners, wholesale and retail dealers of the Western coast of the United States and British Columbia.

Identifies Her Assailant.

Iowa Falls, Iowa, Feb. 4.—The man Stork, who was arrested in St. Paul, has been brought back to Iowa and has been identified by Miss Brandt, the young woman whom Stork assaulted. It is conceded that Stork will receive a long sentence in the pen for this break of his.

Exit Kellam.

Pierre, S. D., Feb. 4.—A. G. Kellam left here this morning, and it is probable that this city has seen the last of him. Any question of prosecution is considered at an end. One of the ministers of this city preached a scathing sermon bearing on the case Sunday.

The historic First Unitarian church on "Meeting House Hill," Dorchester, Boston, a familiar landmark and the oldest church in the district, was destroyed by fire to-day.

The Northern Light hotel, situated directly across the river from Winona, at the far extremity of the high wagon bridge, was burned. Proprietor Bramble and his family barely escaped with their lives. The hotel was a saloon on the first floor, and had become a great Sunday resort for local sports. Loss, $3,200; insurance, $2,000.

At Northfield, fire entirely gutted the brick structure known as the Silk building; loss, $1,500, with no insurance. The building was occupied by L. Zekman, furrier, and he lost his entire stock of furs and fur garments. The family occupying rooms on the upper floor narrowly escaped with their lives. An overturned lamp was the cause.

A. M. Davis, night switchman in the Tracy yards, was seriously injured recently. Davis was passing along at the side of a moving train when his feet slipped and the wheels passed over one leg. Four toes were taken off, and the leg is so badly crushed that there are fears of his recovery unless it is amputated.

MORE CONFIDENT.

Encampment of the G. A. R. Assured for St. Paul.

St. Paul, Feb. 4.—"That encampment will be held in St. Paul, and the boys may just as well put on their marching clothes and prepare to fall in," said J. J. McCardy to a reporter to-day. He smiled in a confident manner as he spoke and twirled in his fingers a letter which it was evident had some bearing upon the statement. Continuing, he said: "Gen. Mason said upon his return to the city a few days ago that he considered the present status of our negotiations with the railroads more favorable to our interests than at any former time, and I feel just the same way myself, for, I am now convinced that we will secure the 1-cent rate and the time limit for which we are working.

"I have here in my hand a letter which has reassured me to a considerable extent. For reasons which will be obvious I cannot disclose the name of my correspondent, but I will tell you that he is assistant passenger agent of a road that enters St. Paul, Minneapolis and Chicago and has at least 4,000 miles of track in the Northwest."

In this letter the writer proclaims himself as thoroughly disgusted with the action of the Western Passenger association, and assures Capt. McCardy that the G. A. R. need only stand pat and eventually the committee will accomplish its object. All this talk about some of the roads holding out against the arrangement now proposed he characterized as the "varlest poppycock," and declares that all the roads will eventually fall into line. As a further assurance he states that he is himself preparing to handle one of the longest trains ever hauled into St. Paul.

WANT IT WOUND UP.

Home Saving and Loan Association of Minneapolis Referred To.

Minneapolis, Feb. 4.—Judge Pond signed an order requiring the officers and managers of the Home Savings and Loan association to come into court Feb. 6 and show cause why a receiver should not be appointed for the corporation. The order also contains a temporary restraining order prohibiting the officers, managers and stockholders from interfering with the assets in any way. The order did not come unexpectedly. There is a complaint filed in the action in which J. B. La Fleur, Andrew Thompson and C. L. Norman appear as plaintiffs. They make some serious allegations in the complaint, setting forth that the corporation has been managed recklessly and extravagantly, and that its funds and assets have been used for the purpose of benefitting the directors and managers by paying them the full withdrawal value of the stock, while the stockholders have filed notices of withdrawal which have received no attention whatever.

CENSURE FOR BAYARD.

A Resolution Adopted by the House Foreign Committee.

Washington, Feb. 4.—The house committee on foreign affairs adopted by a party vote a resolution censuring Ambassador Bayard for his two speeches at Edinburg and Boston. The resolution quotes the passages of these two speeches which are condemned in its preamble, and then expresses the sense of the house that the utterances were improper, and that Mr. Bayard is deserving of censure therefor. It continues that it is improper for our representatives abroad to condemn any political party or policy in America, and that such actions tend to destroy their influence and impair the confidence which they should always command at home and abroad. Those who voted for the resolution were Hitt, Adams, Quigg, Couzins, Taft, Smith, Heatwole, Pearson, Republicans and Newlands (Nev.), silver Republican. McCreary, Price, Tucker, Dinsmore, Money, Democrats, voted against it. Draper (Rep., Mass.) was the only absentee.

Another Storm in Newfoundland.

St. John's, N. F., Feb. 4.—Another violent storm has been raging here during the last twenty-four hours. The condition of affairs is really worse than that reported last week. Immense snow blockades have made the railway lines impassable, and trains are unable to run in many sections of the island. At Brink's hall Friday evening February 7th,

D. W. Meeker, special correspondent of the St. Paul Globe is in town today. Mr. Meeker is investigating the wheat grading question.

The St. Hilaire Bachelors are under obligations to Christ Hoch of Crookston for favors. There were twelve of them and quart size at that,

We laughed and enjoyed McKanlass and his merry company last night, August 16.—Duluth Herald.

The Great northern seem to be entirely too slow for Johnson & Marshall the Red Lake Falls millers. They have several teams at work hauling flour and feed and taking back wheat from here, the teams haul about three tons each and make nearly ten dollars a trip.

St, Hilaire will have a new saw mill in operation there in the spring, It will not be as large a concern as their facilities deserve but will be fully as large as any we have as yet. They will still have room for more. We congratulate our sister city on her go-ahead spirit.—Thief River Falls Press,

Here is a list of those who are loved by the lord of newspaperdom according to Granny Pease of Anoka. First the prompt paying subscriber; he always is kindly considered. Second, the advertising patron large or small. Third the person who hastens to the office with an item important, or unimportant. Fourth the citizen who always speaks well of the newspaper its editor and publisher. Fifth the debtor who pays his bills on presentation or notice. Sixth the individual who never works the paper for a free puff, Seventh the man who appreciates a favor and isn't afraid to acknowledge it.

The entertainment given by the negro violinists and his company last night is the best we ever heard in Pierre and they deserved the large audience they had.—the Capital, Pierre S. D.

At Brink's hall Friday evening February 7th,

A certain young man in town is in serious trouble. He has for some time past been paying assiduous attention to a couple of charming young ladies who however live in opposite directions. This being leap year both of the young charmers came to visit him the other day and the young man has looked ever since as if he had been on the wrong side of a horse trade

The Great Northern has cut down the wages of the section men 15 cents a day to take effect tomorrow. They have been receiving the munificent sum of $1.25 per day and it is said that they felt their oats too much. Prosperity was too swift for them and after a pay day they would get gay on their suddenly acquired wealth and fail to return to work for a week or two.—Crookston Times.

G. G. Rapp came back from West Superior last Friday and reported that he had not succeeded in collecting a cent for the farmers who shipped their wheat to the Galloway Grain Co, This company he says "consists of one man Galloway who has offices in a bucket shop and is wholly irresponsible." Mr. Rapp left again for that place yesterday and will either get the money or have the man arrested, At present it looks as if the farmers would lose all that they have shipped him,

The Andersen bill needs but one thing to make it a law—the majority of the votes of the people of Minnesota at the next general election. On us of the northern counties lies the task of getting that majority. Every man of us owes to his fellow men his best effort to that end. The railroads pay yearly some $80,000 of tax. The railroads own in Minnesota some $235,000,000 worth of property. If they paid taxes on it all as all men else must they would pay $4,000,000 of annual taxes. The re. fellow sufferers from this monstrous injustice of untaxed railroad lands, is the text. From it preach an unceasing sermon to every friend relative and acquaintance you have in the state from now till election day,—Aitkin Age,

No well meaning law abiding citizen should withhold from the court and grand jury the need of praise due them for the efficient work done during the session which has just come to a close. The careful manner in which the grand jury went to work to investigate the alleged infractions of the law showed them to be men who while not professing to be prohibitionists, were law abiding, and proposed to enforce those principles in the cases of that class of men against whom the work of law making is directed in a greater degree than against any other one class in existence The leniency of the court in prescribing punishment for the cases was rather restrictive than revengeful and should be so considered by the offenders, The Times believes that the punishment will be taken as a warning and that the temptation upon the part of the saloon keepers to over ride the bounds set by the statutes will not be yielded to in the future, A repetition of the offense will surely be punished by a sentence that will be prohibitive so far as the future is concerned.—Crookston Times,

THE BACHELOR'S BALL

Easily the finest affair that St. Hilaire has seen in years was the Bachelor's Ball at Brink's hall last Friday evening When Frank Juliot, the Pembina Harpist, started the grand march at nine o'clock the hall was filled with nearly fifty couples. The bachelors proved excellent hosts and the dancing continued until gray streaks in the east gave warning of another day. An excellent supper was served at the American House. All who attended report having had a good time,

The following visitors were entertained: Messrs. Daily, LaBissionier, Vesperman Poleit Krieger Jamieson McHenry Watson Zaiser and Borchers. Misses Fletcher, Reichael Owen Schaefer and Wylie of Red Lake Falls.

Seeing Them Burn

Close competition breeds impetuosity, and in our earnest pushing for trade it often happens that we mark goods away down just for the fun of

At last we have found something to fill a long-felt want. The recent organization of a Debating Club in which all the young people are taking a great interest and active part is proving a great success. The last question debated was: Which is the most advantageous to a boy, city or country life. Mr. I. B. Wetler nobly defended the city boy. Mr. J. D. McMillan defended the country boy in a very able manner, and won the debate.

Mr. Bert Murphy, who has recently returned from the east, entertained a few of his friends at his home Friday evening. Dancing was indulged in, interspersed with music and singing by some of the guests. A bountiful lunch was served at 11:30, after which the dancing was kept up until the "wee small hours." A very enjoyable time was enjoyed by all.

He has been in a critical condition since and it is feared that, if he recovers at all he will be paralyzed on one side. Dr. Watson is treating him.

Last Monday evening a man by the name of John Johnson from Clear Water River made things lively for a little while. It seems that he had taken to much St. Hilaire whisky and got hilarious. Mr. S. Dainard thought he would put him in the cooler and cool him off but the man preferred liberty and jumped out of his coat and left at a 2:40 gait. H. O. Jackson saw the rate he was going and tried to stop him which he did but in the tussle broke one of his legs. Johnson was brought before his honor M. Hall Esq., plead guilty, paid his fine and was released. Dr. Watson of Red Lake Falls set the broken leg and all is serene again.

On motion Commissioner Norland was appointed a special committee to direct the making of certain needed repairs upon the Thief River Falls county bridge.

The assessment for structures on s½ ne¼ and lots 1 and 2, sec 2, twp 153 r 49, was on motion reduced from $450 to $200 to correct an excessive assessment.

The bill of C. M. Benson for an allowance for clerk hire in the office of probate judge was on motion disallowed.

The following resolution was on motion adopted: Resolved, that we accept a school bond of $2000 against the Independant school district of the city of Crookston in part payment for the hospital bill due the county from said city.

In response to a resolution adopted by by the board of county commissioners December 5th 1895, and submitted to the attorney general for his opinion as to whether or not quo warrants proceedings could be instituted to terminate the existance of the St. P. M. & M. Ry. Co. as a corporation on the ground that it had ceased to exist for the purpose for which it was created. The following communication was received and read:

State of Minnesota, Attorney General's Office, St. Paul, Jan. 27, 1896.

MR. JOHN GLEASON,
County Auditor,
Crookston, Minn.

DEAR SIR: I am in receipt of your communication of the 20th inst. in which you apprise me of the resolution recently adopted by your board of county commissioners, relative to the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway Company

I am at a loss to understand why your board have requested me to advise them upon the question submitted. It has nothing whatever to do with their official duties, and I must therefore decline to express an opinion upon the subject.

I am, very truly yours,
H. W. CHILDS,
Attorney General.

The following resolution was offered by Commissioner Norland:

Whereas, on the 27th day of January, 1896, the attorney general of the state forwarded to this board a communication, wherein he stated that he was at a loss to understand the reason for a certain resolution heretofore passed by this board calling for his opinion as to whether quo warranto proceedings could not be successfully prosecuted to terminate the existance of the St. P. M. & M. Ry. Co.

Therefore, be it resolved, that the auditor inform the attorney general that the reason for our action was to insure the payment of taxes on lands now held by said company in this county, in the near future, should said corporations existance be terminated and that as representatives of the taxpayers of this county this board expects action to be taken on the part of the attorney general in this matter at once.

The financial statement for the year 1895, as prepared and submitted by the county auditor, was read and on motion the same was accepted and ordered published in the usual form.

The following bills were audited and allowed:

HOW TO CLEAN LAMP SHADES.

The Best Means of Renewing These Filmy Chiffon and Silk Trifles.

Owing to the delicacy of the fabrics a dry process should be used whenever possible, as silk, satin and lace lose their luster when washed, and besides the shademaker's touch is more or less lost when the shades are taken apart. Procure an infant's hairbrush, which is made of soft bristles set in a bone back. The brush is small, and for that reason and also because of its softness is best adapted for cleaning silk and satin. Lamp shades which have been used in suburban houses and are merely discolored with dust may be satisfactorily renovated by a careful and gentle scouring or scrubbing with this little brush. To free lace covered shades from dust apply cornmeal for light ones or fuller's earth for dark and remove all loose powder by gentle brushing or tapping, or by means of compressed air if this is available. Fly specks can generally be picked off with the point of a knife.

Shades that are used in the city soon become noticeably soiled and blackened, particularly about the collar, by reason of the soot with which the air is charged. The quickest way to clean a shade that has been thus discolored is to immerse as much of it as possible in gasoline, which should be placed in a clean dishpan, and move it briskly about in the fluid.

How to Test a Thermometer.

To tell whether a thermometer actually does its work, invert the instrument. If the mercury does not fall to the end or if it breaks into several small columns, the thermometer contains air and is inaccurate. If perfectly made the slender thread should fill the tube or should break off at the bulb and fall to the end of the tube.

Gold Nuggets.

The structure of gold nuggets was the subject of a paper recently read before the New South Wales Royal society by Professor Liverbridge. Among other facts stated was the peculiarity of such nuggets, on being cut through or sliced and polished and then etched by chlorine water, of exhibiting a well marked crystalline structure closely resembling the figures shown by most metallic meteorites. On heating such nuggets in a Bunsen burner blebs or blisters form on both the polished and unpolished surfaces, and on still more strongly heating these in some cases burst with sharp reports, and pieces of gold are projected with considerable violence. As no explosions have been observed on dissolving or eating away the crusts of these blisters by chlorine water, it is thought that the blebs may probably be due to the evaporation of some liquid or solid substance. Further, in slicing some nuggets, scattered granules of quartz were met with inside, although quite invisible outside. At first it was supposed that such explosions might be due to the quartz, but the gas in some instances continued to issue from the burst bleb—where the aperture formed was small—and forced the Bunsen flame out into lateral, just as if urged by a blowpipe.

CARVED IN THE BARK.

A Clump of Trees Upon Which Appeared the Names of Many Soldiers.

"I don't quite understand, and I never could," said an observer, "what prompts people to write their names in public places. Trees have always been favorite objects upon which to carve names, and the smooth bark of the beech offers a field most inviting to the knife of the carver. I saw once a bunch of beech trees upon which thousands of names had been cut. This was in Virginia, close by the left bank of the James river. A ravine made back from the river, and at the head of this ravine there was a spring. Around the spring was this clump of beech trees.

"The names carved on these trees were those of soldiers who had been encamped thereabout in the time of the civil war and who had come to this spring for water. It was in 1879 that I saw them, so that they must have been there then at least 14 years. They had probably been there longer. About a third of the names were still legible. Many of them were the names of men of Pennsylvania regiments. Those that had become illegible were mainly those that had been carved on smaller trees.

"There was one big tree that had upon it, I should think, 500 names. They encircled it for 20 feet up from the ground. It seemed as if some of those among the highest must have been cut by men who swung down from the first branch, and one could imagine that men stood on one another's shoulders to reach above the names already carved by men standing on the ground; or that perhaps there was led up beside the tree a horse upon whose back the carver stood.

"These names may have been carved, every one of them, simply as a pastime, and yet it seemed somehow as though this was a case in which the carving might have been done in something more than a merely idle spirit."—New York Sun.

MRS. PEARY WAS FRIGHTENED.

It Was When She Went Hunting Walrus With Her Husband.

Mrs. Peary, wife of the famous arctic explorer, declares she has had more than enough of the polar regions, and is determined that her husband shall never repeat his travels in those frigid lands. When asked what experience stands out most prominently in connection with the unusual life while exploring, Mrs. Peary, without a moment's hesitation, said: "Our hunting the walrus. It is the only occasion in my life when I was so frightened that I would have welcomed death as a relief. We were out in a boat with Dr. Cook, Mat, and some natives. Mr. Peary had broken his leg, but was steering the boat, his leg, in splints, stretched out before him. We saw the walrus coming toward us, and when the natives said, 'Shoot at them,' we took our rifles and did so.

"Then followed a scene too terrible for words. The bullets had only entered the hides of these animals, enough to infuriate them, and they came forward enraged and with but one determination—to turn over the boat. They placed their long tusks on the gunwale and attempted to tip us out. I crouched at the bottom of the skiff, loading the rifles, so that the men would not have to wait a second. The sea was crimson with their blood, and for a few moments I did not know whether I should be shot by the excited men or drowned by the walruses. We killed about 17, and have some of the tusks. But don't let me talk about it any more. All that is past."—Philadelphia Times.

Bought Her Own Gown.

They tell a story of an unfortunate society woman, who, being terribly pushed for a gown to wear at a great occasion, sold seven gowns for the price of one to Mme. X. Among these gowns was one hardly rumpled, and which, though very magnificent, had evidently been worn at most only once. This dress Mme. X. sold as a model to Mme. Y., who was the society woman's dressmaker, and who had been obdurate about making another thing for the poor little woman without cash down.

When this "model" came in, she saw a chance for big return of money, so she compromised with her customer and agreed to let her have a model dress, just imported, for a very low figure. Whereat the poor woman paid all the money she had received for all her dresses, and out Mme. Y. brought the model. The poor woman talked herself blue in the face, but she could not say anything to protect herself without betraying her dealing with Mme. X., so, poor thing, she danced in her old frock after all, having swapped all her other gowns for the privilege.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Costume and Mortality.

A remarkable effect of costume on mortality is shown in a very instructive manner by one of the English registrar general's reports. It appears that among children aged from 1 to 5 years there is an equality in the number of deaths by scalds and burns among boys and girls, but from 5 to 10 double the number of girls to that of boys die from these causes, while from 10 to 20 there die 102 women and only 27 men, and from 20 upward 71 women and 22 men, showing the influence of muslin and flounce in producing death, notwithstanding the greater caution of the female sex.

HARDY, NOVELIST.

SHORT SKETCH OF A SUCCESSFUL MAN OF LITERATURE.

How He Abandoned Architecture For Story Writing—The Greenwood Incident Shows That There Is Sometimes Something In a Name.

Much has been said and written about Thomas Hardy's work, but very little indeed is generally known of the man himself. An obvious reason is the novelist's dislike of personalities, his shrinking from public curiosity, and the simple, serene—almost medieval—tone of nature that dominates him.

As a young man he proposed to follow architecture as a profession and studied with diligence. He went into the office of the well known architect, Sir Arthur Blomfield, A. R. A., in London. While equipping himself for his future career, he used his spare moments in writing a novel that he called "Desperate Remedies." This book, after several refusals, at last found a publisher, but it did Hardy no more good than harm. Meantime, following his architectural work, he carried out his first commission—naturally a modest one, as young architects are not usually intrusted with cathedrals. Although his maiden effort in letters had met with comparative failure, his zeal was unabated, for he immediately wrote "Under the Greenwood Tree."

At the time this book appeared Frederick Greenwood, now the distinguished student of European policies, edited The Cornhill Magazine. It is a habit with Mr. Greenwood occasionally to "prowl" about old bookstalls. Looking over a basketful of cheap books all thrown together, he chanced to light upon "Under the Greenwood Tree." For the sake of its name he picked it up, paying a few pence for it. The able editor saw at a glance that there was genius in that neglected and discarded work, and, finding out Hardy, then in his thirty-first year, he commissioned him to write a novel for The Cornhill. It was then that Hardy, forced by circumstances as well as impelled by his love for letters, abandoned architecture, and, throwing himself into his work with perfect singleness of purpose, wrote "Far From the Madding Crowd," a book that now stands with a few others among the lasting literature achievements of this century.

Though he is neither listless nor languid, Hardy's appearance is that of a man who has lately recovered from an illness. His cheeks are slightly sunken and his skin is sallow, speaking of sedentary labors, the midnight lamp and of a constitution that could not support the sustained strain of an arduous task. Yet his eyes tell another tale and possess that phosphorescent light that indicates energy. The solution of these contradictory marks must be that he is mentally as robust as he is physically delicate, or it may be that the strong mind has sometimes to struggle against the drooping of the body.

Hardy is neither tall nor commanding in stature. His manner is free from nervousness, showiness or excessive movement; indeed, a tranquil, thoughtful spirit is characteristic of him, and there is nothing in his presence that is strong enough to intimate the quality of his mind. The most that can be said is that his face is exceedingly keen and clever. His bronzed hair, now tinged with gray and brushed back, is becoming thin. His slender mustache adds point to his finely modeled features. Although spare in type, his shoulders are broad and give him the appearance of being larger than he is when he is seen sitting down.

As is the case with many English writers, Hardy lives in the country and goes to London once every year for a few weeks to brush away the cobwebs by contact with men who keep the rust from their steel and the tarnish from their silver. Hardy's quiet home is not far away from the pretty little town of Dorchester, in Dorsetshire, his native county.

This home is entirely the work of his own hands. Every room, window and hall; every alcove, cupboard and doorway is designed to suit his own and his wife's fancy. The house stands on a small piece of land and is surrounded by a few acres of garden and lawn. The manner in which the land came into his possession is interesting.

The particular piece of ground he wanted was part of a large tract belonging to a land company of which the Prince of Wales was president. Though the prince did not know Hardy personally, he greatly admired his work. On one occasion the directors of the land company met, the prince presiding, and when the report was read Mr. Hardy's application for a few acres of the company's land was alluded to, but merely incidentally, with the remark that it would, of course, have to be declined. The prince said: "What Hardy is it? Not the author?" "Yes; Thomas Hardy," was the reply. "Then why not let him have the few acres?" said the prince. "He would not have asked had he not set his heart on the spot. Yes; let him have them."—Cor. Boston Transcript.

A Course Dinner.

"When I open the front door upon my arrival home at night," said Mr. Flatby, "I inhale the fragrant odor of a delightful soup. Passing in a leisurely manner up the first flight of stairs, I finish the soup at the second floor, and, then I find that the fish has been served. I take fish as I proceed along the hall and up the second flight of stairs. On the third floor I find the roast and on the fourth a dainty dessert. When I reach my own floor, all I want is a cup of coffee and a cigar."—New York Sun.

SHE AND HER PARENTS.

There's a house a few miles from the city
I frequently linger outside;
'Tis the home of a maid who is pretty,
A maid I would like for my bride.
I fear that I never shall win her,
My passion is hopeless and mute.
I'm sure that her parents would skin her
If they thought that she smiled on my suit.

Her eyes are the purest and brightest
That ever encouraged a hope;
Her skin is the softest and whitest
That ever shed luster on soap;
Her hair is the richest and goldest
That ever a hairdresser dressed,
And her parents are surely the coldest
A heroine ever possessed.

Her voice—it's a mezzo soprano—
Would make even Patti afraid,
And the way that she plays the piano
Puts Rubinstein quite in the shade.
More perfect she is than perfection;
Resign her I can't, and I won't!
And she looks upon me with affection,
But her parents—oh, bother them—don't.

They intend her to marry a title;
They want to address her, "Your Grace."
They've made up their minds this is vital;
Which scratches me out of the race.
Nor do I, in theory, blame them.
She's worthy a duke, I aver.
It's true I'd be puzzled to name them
A duke who is worthy of her.

Oh, I know she's beyond and above me;
I deserve to be hung, I'm aware,
For presuming to think she could love me,
But I don't altogether despair,
For my heart undergoes an expansion
When I think, what I'll tell you about,
Of that night when I called at her mansion,
And her parents, God bless them, were out.

When I think of the way she received me,
Of the way, and the words, that I spoke,
Of the way that she blushed, and believe me,
Of the sixpence we solemnly broke,
Of the mutual hopes we confided,
As we blended our voices in song,
And that rapturous kiss we divided—
Well, her parents can go to Hongkong!

A Rheumatic's Museum.

A Fifteenth ward man who has been a lifelong sufferer from rheumatism has a queer collection of alleged "cures" arranged in a neat cabinet. One shelf is devoted to a series of small, wrinkled objects which look and feel like large pebbles. They are not pebbles, however, but potatoes which have become almost petrified through being carried a long time in the pocket of the rheumatic gentleman. Each potato is marked with a small label bearing some such inscription as this: "Carried from Nov. 12, 1878, to May 18, 1880. Very efficacious." The collector claims that the potato carried in the trousers pocket has proved to be the best of the many remedies he has ever tried. He carries one potato until the return of his rheumatic twinges seem to testify to the decline of the tuber's curative properties. Then he takes a new potato, and locks the old one up in his cabinet. On the other shelves of the cabinet are several shriveled horse chestnuts, a string of amber beads, a dried up rabbit's foot, the right foot of "an eastern sho' crow," a number of iron finger rings, a few horseshoe nails, and several other odds and ends. "All these things seem to have given me more or less relief," says the collector.—Philadelphia Record.

The Signs of the Times.

The office boy, with his legs curled round those of the chair, was tilted back in the corner gloating over "The Midnight Murder; or, The Milkman's Mystery," when a visitor entered. The boy had heard his step through the passage, and was calmly expecting him when the door opened.

"Is the guv'nor in?" asked the visitor.

The boy looked at him with an almost contemptuous expression, and was slow to reply.

"I said," snapped the visitor, "is the guv'nor in?"

"That's a pretty question to be askin me, ain't it? Don't you know he ain't?"

"How should I know?" inquired the astonished caller.

"By lookin at me. Do you think I'd be tucked up here readin this book if the old man was in? Well, I should say not—hardly. Come in again tomorrow."

And the boy once more plunged into the amazing adventures of the mysterious milkman.—Strand Magazine.

MAKING CARBON BOIL.

This Is What Happens When the Arc Light Is Burning.

The electric arc light, with its intense, steady brilliancy, is now so familiar an object that few stop to think how wonderful a thing it really is. Here is light enough to illumine many square yards nearly as well as daylight does, proceeding from the points of two little carbon rods as large as one's finger. What is the state of the carbon in that small spot? Professor S. P. Thompson, in a recent Cantor lecture before the Society of Arts in London, tells us that it has actually melted there, something that was until recently thought impossible. Moreover, he says that when the light hisses, the liquid carbon is really boiling. The facts that lead him to these conclusions are quoted below from the report of his lecture that appears in Industries and Iron:

"Captain Abney had found the white surface of the luminous crater to be always of an equal degree of whiteness, which obviously means that it is always of an equal degree of temperature. The only thing that could account for there being a fixed temperature for the crater surface was the fact that carbon is at the surface in a state of volatilization; that the carbon is evaporating off from the positive carbon into the arc or flame. At that surface you necessarily must have the temperature at which carbon evaporates, just as you cannot have the surface of ice under ordinary conditions either hotter or colder than the temperature which is taken as zero of the Centigrade scale. My present view of the physical state of the arc crater is that the solid carbon below is covered with a layer or film of liquid carbon, just boiling or evaporating off.

"When hissing takes place, a new state of things is set up. If you watch a short, hissing arc, you will see a column of light concentrating itself on a narrow spot, and the spot keeps moving about and is very unstable in position as well as in the amount of light it gives out. The contracted spot from which light seems to start pits deeper into the carbon. Mrs. Ayrton made the observation that the crater surface, after the arc has been hissing, is found to be literally honeycombed. When the arc is hissing, you can see little bits erupted out, and the hissing seems to be comparable to the hissing which takes place in water just when it is beginning to boil. If you have some water being heated in such a way that there is not more than a certain quantity of heat given off from the surface, you have the water evaporating quietly, but you cannot get more than a certain quantity of heat given off per square inch of top surface of the water in that quiet way.

If you force more than a certain quantity of heat to pass off per top square inch of the water, you find the water begins to break up internally, and you have bubbles formed below the surface; the surface breaks up, the bubbles are thrown out, and you have a noisy phenomenon. I think you will find there is exactly the same kind of difference between the silent arc and the hissing arc as between quiet evaporation and noisy boiling. There is a sort of decrepitation, as the solid particles are being torn asunder to make way for something coming out, when the arc is hissing."—Literary Digest.

They Dropped It.

Here is an unrecorded "minute" concerning a certain woman's club in New York city. Following the example of all such organizations, the club, when first organized, prepared an elaborate constitution and bylaws. These were duly printed and bound. Soon after they appeared, a copy chanced to fall into the hands of the husband of one of the members. After he had perused the volume the entire edition was at once recalled and a new one prepared. The second edition, however, differed but in one respect from the first. It had merely followed the advice of the aforesaid member's husband and omitted the following bylaw, "No two members shall occupy the floor at the same time."—New York Sun.

Built a House In a Bottle.

A few years ago the writer saw a genuine curiosity which had been made by a little blind boy in Chicago. It was nothing more or less than a miniature house, made up of forty odd pieces of wood, which was placed on the inside of a very common looking four ounce medicine bottle. The general verdict of all who examined the wonder was that it would puzzle a man with two good eyes to put the pieces in the bottle, to say nothing of the task of gluing them together so as to make them resemble a house.—St. Louis Republic.

Woman as a Hostess.

Whatever the aesthetic or sensuous attractions, the ultimate fact is that when people assemble socially they meet to talk. In popular definition "sociable" means "conversation," and "unsocial" means "silence." The success of any social gathering will be largely decided by the prevailing spirit of the conversation. And in this, more than in any other feature of the occasion, the personality of the hostess should appear. No matter how many gifted conversationalists there may be present, she should not permit an outsider to create the atmosphere of her house. Even the most diffident woman, who glides unobtrusively through a throng elsewhere, should courageously assert herself when the responsibility of entertaining rests upon her. In her admirable fearlessness she may recall the terse self-announcemtnt of Rob Roy, "My foot is on my native heath, and my nam is MacGregor."—Agnes H. Morton in Ladies' Home Journal.

DOLBY'S DOOR.

It Caused a Great Deal of Trouble While It Lasted.

When Dolby got ready to put up a storm-door for the winter he sat and thought and smiled and reflected for a long time. Then he went over to a carpenter shop and had a long and confidential talk with the carpenter. When it was concluded, both grinned and patted each other on the back.

"There'll be more fun than a horse kin draw!" chuckled Dolby.

"Betcher life!" cackled the carpenter.

"It'll aid the cause of temperance."

"And work for moral reform."

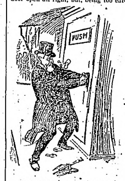
"And cause men to reflect on the seriousness of life."

"And rip and tear and cuss."

When the door was hung in place there was a sign out of "Pull." The meaning was so obvious that a child could catch on. The idea was to take hold of the handle and pull the door open. There was a peculiarity about the hinges of that door, and the sign was fastened on so that it could be detached in five seconds, but with that the public had nothing to do. The carpenter had scarcely departed when along came an eminent citizen who had business with Dolby. He took a good look at the storm door. He spelled out the sign "P-u-l-l," pull. Then he stepped up and pushed on it—pushed, and pushed, and pushed, and because he could not push his way in he called Dolby an ass, an idiot and lots of other gentle and endearing names. He was so mad that he went away, but he hadn't gone two blocks before his guardian angel whispered to him that all storm doors should be pulled instead of pushed. He had been hasty about the matter, and he felt chagrined that so small a thing should have put him out. He, therefore, decided to return. Old Dolby knew he would come back, and he, therefore, took a pin out of the top hinge and substituted the sign of "Push" for "Pull." When the eminent citizen returned and pulled on that door it wouldn't come his way. He was angered until he saw the sign. Then he demanded of himself:

"Am I blind? Am I drunk? Am I a full-fledged idiot? Am I such a dolt that I can't tell the difference between 'push' and 'pull?' Now, by the beard of my father, but I am wroth! Old Dolby can take his storm door and go to Ballyhack with it, and I will do business with him no more!"

And for weeks and weeks it was the same way with others. The young man who wanted to ask Dolby for his daughter's hand in marriage pulled the door open all right, but, being too early, he walked around the block. When he returned he pulled and tugged and sweat his collar in vain and finally got so mad that he consigned old Dolby and his daughter to a climate where ice becomes water in ten minutes. The man who wanted to borrow $10 of Dolby opened the door, and hesitated, and skated around to get his nerve up. When he returned the door would not open, though he disintegrated his suspenders in pulling. The man who read "Pull" as he went up the street found "Push" staring him in the eyes as he returned, and he dodged around a corner to see if he was too drunk to walk a line. Canvassers, and solicitors and tramps got knocked out by that door until they dodged across the street in passing, and old Dolby chuckled and cackled and laughed till his weight increased twenty pounds. But one day he looked out to see a grim and determined man standing before the place. It was a man who had tried a hundred times to get past that door to sell Dolby a hat-rack. He had always found "Push" and "Pull" so badly mixed up that he couldn't work the door. Now he had desperation in his eyes and a screwdriver in his hand. He pulled and he pushed, and he finally struck it. Then he held the door open with his knee, unscrewed the hinges, and taking the outfit on his shoulders, he walked off up the street and on and on until lost sight of in the misty distance. By and by the police pursued, but they were too late. On the bank of a turgid river they found "Pull" and "Push," and, floating on the stream, a storm-door, but the grim and determined man, still clutching his screwdriver, rested in the ooze of the bottom, with a smile of triumph on his pallid face.—Detroit Free Press.



It Wouldn't Come His Way.

They Took No Chances.

One of the Massachusetts congressmen lives near Boston. He has a beautiful estate, his admiration for which is shared by his coachman, Mike. The other day Mike brought a couple of his Irish friends upon the place, and, after escorting them around the grounds and showing them the stable, ushered them into a hall. There, somewhat to his surprise, he met his employer, but the latter was determined not to be outdone in hospitality by his coachman. "Bring your friends into the dining room, Mike," he said, and into the dining room the trio followed him. "Now, my men, of course you can have what you like," he remarked, as he stood by the sideboard; "but I have a drink here that I think you will like. There is a story to it, by the way," he added, "which may interest you. It is called Benedictine, and it is made by monks up on the Alps. They fill a little flask with it and send out their St. Bernard dogs to find travelers who may be overcome by the cold. When a poor, half-frozen fellow is found he drinks a little of this cordial from the flask and then he is able to follow the dogs to a place of shelter." The men listened to the story in silence. Finally one of them mustered up courage to speak. "Have you any gin?" he asked. "Certainly," said the congressman, as he laid aside the cordial. "Help yourself." The men took a good, substantial drink of the gin and smiled happily over its familiar taste. "That wasn't bad," said one of them. "Now bring on your dog liquor!"—Washington Post.

A Serpentine Costume.

At the last fancy dress ball at Covent Garden, one of the most conspicuous persons present was Mrs. Langtry, who was attired in a "serpentine" costume of great originality. "The Lily's" domino was of black satin, veiled in black gauze, spangled with metallic particles. The fluffy, frilled and glittering cape that adorned her shoulders was fringed with small snakes, while more reptiles of portentous size adorned each breadth of the flowing skirt. Down the front from chin to hem fell a perfect school of infantile snakes, while all around the hood that shielded her famous features from view wriggled a mass of these shining worms. Around her slender waist a boa constrictor clasped his gleaming folds, while on each of her black-gloved hands a smaller edition of the same creature was discernible.—London Letter.

Some persons are always taking iron. If weak and easily exhausted; pale and without appetite; if the nervous system is weak, and sleep difficult, what do you take? Iron? But iron cannot supply food to the tissues; nor does it have any power to change the activity of unhealthy organs and bring them back to health. Cod-liver oil is what you need. The oil feeds the poorly-nourished tissues, and makes rich blood. Iodine, bromine, and other ingredients, which form part of the oil, have special power to alter unhealthy action.

PICTURES OF THE STREET.

Three Hundred Itinerant Photographers in New York City.

There is quite a large business done in the East and West side sections of New York, on clear and pleasant autumn days, by itinerant photographers, who work on the following plan: A boss photographer has the apparatus for turning out quickly and in good shape a large number of pictures. But his store or studio is either on some side street or up stairs on a thoroughfare the passersby on which have little money to spend for photographs. So, he enters into an arrangement with perhaps half a dozen young photographers who may be temporarily out of employment and who are willing to earn an honest dollar, and each of these he fits out with a kit of photographic materials at the studio. They start on a clear morning on their daily rounds, carrying under one arm the photographic apparatus and under the other the stand upon which the camera rests.

The outfit costs the itinerant photographer nothing, for it is borrowed property. When he sees standing in a doorway or entrance to a store, or in a park, or near a public building, an individual who might be willing to pay for photographs, he begins negotiations, and agrees, usually, to take a photograph on trial. The camera is put in position and the portrait or group is taken, and a memorandum is made of the location. Then the photographer proceeds on his way to take another portrait or group, and so continues until nightfall. Then he turns over the photographs to the studio owners, who finishes them off, and a few days later the itinerant man pays another visit to the neighborhood, and, showing the proofs, arranges for the sale of as many copies as are desired. Where these have been regularly ordered the sale is usually effected; in cases where the photographers took the picture at his own risk, he gets an order only if the pictures are satisfactory, or, it may perhaps be better said, if they are flattering, for it is a well known fact among photographers, as among others, that a "good picture" or "a picture which does one justice," so-called, is really one which puts the lineaments of the individual in a favorable or flattering aspect; whereas, a poor or unsatisfactory picture is one which either represents them as they are or less attractive than they think themselves.

The usual base of division between the boss photographer at his studio and his itinerant photographer is half and half. One secures the customer, takes the picture and collects the money, the other completes the picture and mounts. They divide the proceeds equally. Photographers—even the humble sidewalk artists who wander about town seeking casual trade—depend very largely for their success upon a streak of vanity which is almost universal. There are few persons, either men or women, who do not like to have their pictures taken, though in the majority of cases few of them would think of going to the trouble or expense of visiting a photograph studio, unless they desired to get a picture for some special purpose, usually of presentation. But the suggestion of a sidewalk photographer that a man or woman should have his or her picture taken, "just to see how it looks," and with no charge unless it be satisfactory, is almost irresistible, and in very few cases does it fail. There are about three hundred traveling photographers in New York, and this is their busy season.—New York Sun.

GUARD AGAINST BULLETS.

The Use of Chain Armor in the British Army.

Setting aside at once all talk about protections that are perfectly bullet proof, I give you my assurance that an immense number of the officers of our army and navy who go on foreign service, especially when one of our "little wars" is expected, provide themselves with certain easily recognized protections.

These, mind you, are well known articles of trade to the service. The commonest and most useful type of these protections consist of fine beautifully tempered single chains, inclosed in soft leather, which run along the shoulders down the outer side of the arms and over certain parts of the body. These can either be sewn into a particular tunic or they can be adjusted separately and put on like harness. Take it absolutely, hundreds upon hundreds of sets are sold. The most valuable of all chains, in connection with accoutrements, are those which guard the head, and in cases where the regular cap or helmet is not sufficiently protected in this way, specially made chains are sewn inside the same and covered by the lining.

Only those who have been in actual conflict know how valuable all the chains mentioned are in minimizing the effect of sword cuts. As regards protection from sword and bullet, the general belief of officers nowadays seems to be in thoroughly tanned leather, and great quantities of tight fitting leather under-tunics are made for officers, the favorite patron—said to be the invention of the late Sir Richard Burton—being that which forms a not too prominent ridge down the center of the chest. I have heard innumerable stories from officers of bullets which have been diverted in some degree by these leather tunics, some of which are lined with woven steel wire. Of course, none of these things are supposed to be an absolute protection, but only a sort of palliative.—Tid Bits.

Made of Aluminum.

We sent to a New York house for a catalogue of pure aluminum articles, and have selected a few out of the numerous array. They are as follows: Puff boxes, perfume bottles, whisk brooms, pin-cushions, hair-pin boxes, drinking cups, shaving mugs, candlesticks, bon-bon baskets, pocket match safes, smoker sets, funnels, chafing dishes, tea pots, tea kettles, coffee pots, egg boilers, tubed bake pans, sauce pans, oyster pans, water pitchers, stew pans, soup tureens, syrup pots. There is a long list of other articles, but we have selected only such as seem to require combination of parts.—Brooklyn Eagle.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. "What do you mean, child?"

"I heard some of the folks next door sayin' this morning that they saw papa the other day with three sheets in the wind."—Chicago Tribune.

Forecasters. Some people are so influenced by the electric currents of the atmosphere that they can foretell the coming of a thunder storm with perfect accuracy, and others there are with nerves so sensative that they are sure of having neuralgia from a low and fretful state of the nervous system. Now, why can't the latter be warned in time and know that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. To use St. Jacob's Oil promptly will ward off an attack, or if attacked, will promptly cure. Such people can do for themselves what others do from weather prophecies, heed the signals and save the wreck and disaster.

Sound Doctrine.

"Josiar," said Mrs. Corntossel, as her husband came in from feeding the pigs, "what is the Monroe doctrine?"

"The Monroe doctrine, Mandy," he replied, after a moment's thought, "is a principle which lays down thet jes' because we don't put both feet in the trough ourselves is no sign thet we're goin' to incourage others to do it."—Washington Star.

Refreshments.

"Are you really going to eat me?" faltered the terrified victim.

The cannibal laughed harshly.

"Do you take this for an informal reception?" he demanded, with palpable irony.—Detroit Tribune.

Conflicting Complaints.

Exasperated Citizen—Look here, I want to make a complaint against your confounded cable cars. Yesterday I got caught in a blockade and had to sit and wait nearly an hour.

Superintendent—That's just like you fellows, never satisfied. Why, another man just came in and complained that the cars went so fast he couldn't get on.—Life.

Living on Milk for Thirty Days.

Dr. H. F. White recently tried the experiment of living thirty days with only sweet milk as nourishment. At the beginning, says the Dairy, London, England, he had no difficulty in changing his diet from solid to liquid. During the thirty days of the experiment he lost five and a half pounds in weight, but he lost no strength. He probably lost weight because the weather was warm and because he took a good deal of exercise. He rode a bicycle considerably during the time, and used sixteen-pound dumb-bells and other heavy weights during the day. On the seventh day of the experiment he ran several foot races with a skillful runner, and was beaten in each race. On the thirtieth day he ran some more races with the same person, but did better than in the first races. This fact proves that he lost no strength.

PITH OF THE NEWS.

EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

A General Resume of the Most Important News of the Week, From all Parts of the Globe, Boiled Down and Arranged in Convenient Form for Rapid Perusal by Busy People.

The Nation's Capital.

A patent on bloomers is found in Washington, and wearers of the garment must pay royalties.

The Cripple Creek, Col., postoffice has been greatly embarrassed for a month past by enormous mail receipts beyond the capacity of the force to handle. Postoffice Inspector W. M. McMechen says the accumulation includes 35,000 letters besides tons of second, third and fourth class mail.

Virginia S. Washington and Mary L. Washington of Portsmouth, Ohio, representing themselves to be immediate descendants of George Washington, have written to the secretary of the interior offering to sell to the government a number of relics of Washington. Among these is a snuffbox presented to Jefferson by Washington and afterward returned to the donor.

People in Print.

Judge Taintor of Hartford, Conn., a prominent candidate for commander-in-chief of the Grand Army, has withdrawn.

In the death of Bishop Atticus G. Haygood the colored people of the South have lost one of their wisest and most helpful friends.

Rev. Milton Bradley, aged eighty-eight, for over fifty years pastor of the Presbyterian church at Richland, Mich., is dead.

The report cabled London that Rev. John A. Brooks of Memphis, Tenn., had been called to the pastorate of Spurgeon's tabernacle is not correct.

Spencer W. Coe, one of the most prominent of the older New York merchants, is dead at his country home in Winsted Conn., at the age of sixty-nine.

Gov. Hastings of Pennsylvania, who has been in Hot Springs, Ark., for some time on account of illness, has returned to Harrisburg with his health fully restored.

Shadrack Inman, father of John H. Inman, the prominent New York banker, and of Samuel M. and Hugh T. Inman, well known capitalists of Atlanta, is dying at his home in that city.

Col. David S. Turner, aged ninety-two years, veteran during the late war, and grandfather of Prof. N. L. Britton, of Columbia college, New York, died at New Dorp, Staten Island.

R. McKay, aged eighty-three, died suddenly in Bruce, Mich. He was one of the original abolitionists, casting his vote for that party in 1842, when it had hardly two anti-slavery votes in the town.

H. M. Shearman, an artist, formerly employed by Chicago newspapers, is dead at Kansas City, Mo. He was a nephew of Thomas Shearman, the attorney whose work for the defense was conspicuous in the Beecher-Tilton trial.

Miss Marie Jaeger, twenty-two years old, of New York, a guest at the charity ball given in honor of the unification of Germany, was taken suddenly ill at the Metropolitan opera house. She died before medical assistance could be summoned.

Lieut. Commander Robert F. Carmody, of the navy, died suddenly at his home in Georgetown, D. C. He was appointed to the navy from New York on Sept. 29, 1860, and received the rank of lieutenant commander on Feb. 28, 1890. He was retired June 6, 1895.

C. Egbert Borchbrevink, the Norwegian explorer, has arrived in New York. Borchbrevink has taught the world pretty much all it knows about the great continent which lies in South polar seas, and if his plans, as now arranged, are carried out, he will be able to tell much more after he gets back from an expidition which he is to undertake next winter.

Casualties.

John C. Hale, a medical student at Fostoria, Ohion, took aconite liniment, by mistake, and died within an hour.

The Congregational church at Auburn, Mass., built in 1770, was totally destroyed by fire.

The steamship Caracas, of the Red D line, went ashore on Governor's Island, and was floated several hours later. She proceeded to sea at once. The superintendent of the line said the vessel was little the worse for her running on the rocks.

An explosion of tanks containing compressed air for sewer construction at Lawrence, Mass., wrecked the engine house and killed John Lee, the engineer, and Alexander Gordon, the fireman. A subsequent explosion in the sewer sent paving blocks flying all over the street.

The ship Louis Walsh, from Callao, brought to Port Townsend two of the crew, Stewart Chase and Cook Mitchell, from the ship Parthia, which burned at sea, 300 miles southwest of Juan Fernandez island. The Parthia was coal-laden from Liverpool to San Francisco.

A piano blazing furiously in a room which did not contain a fire and which had not been entered for several days, came near destroying the home of Andrew Smith, at Bloomington, Iowa. How the piano came to be on fire is a deep mystery. Not another article of furniture was damaged.

Peter Rosselot, an electric lamp trimmer, met with a terrible death at Fort Wayne, Ind. He was going up the elevator in an iron tower, when the weight on the top loosened and fell, striking him on the head and crushing it to a pulp. His body hung in the air twenty-five feet above the ground two hours before the coroner arrived, and hundreds of people viewed it as it swung to and fro.

When the Old Liberty Bell arrived at Wilmington, Del., on its way to Philadelphia from the Atlanta exposition, John Poppa, aged eleven eyars, climbed upon the car and hugged and kissed the old relic fervently. When he jumped off the car he was struck by a shifting engine on the Wilmington & Northern railroad, and instantly killed.

Crimes and Criminals.

O. E. Wilbur, who was assaulted with a club by Carl Kreft at Fairmount, Mont., is dead, and Kreft will be tried for murder. Wilbur was riding with Kreft's wife at the time of the assault.

The latest and apparent plausible theory of the Fort Thomas, Ky., murder mystery, where a woman was beheaded, is that the murderer was a jealous husband and the victim his wife.

Developments which came to light at Knoxville, Tenn., show that Lee Sellers, who was lynched there ten years ago for the supposed murder and robbery of Edward Malness, was an innocent man.

The supreme court of Pennsylvania listened to arguments on motion for an appeal in the case of H. H. Holmes, convicted of the murder of B. F. Pietzel, and under sentence of death. The court reserved decision.

One year ago Joe King, a farmer, was killed in John Smiser's saloon at Petersburg, Ind., by being thrown to the floor by some drunken toughs. Mrs. King sued Smiser and his bondsmen for damages. The jury returned a verdict for $1,000.

A sensational suicide was that of Mrs. Augusta Schwartz, a wealthy widow who owned a handsome residence in Berkeley place, the aristocratic section of Brooklyn. For some time past she has been a constant sufferer from neuralgia, and that, together with the fact that her husband, Anton Schwartz, a prominent member of the brewers' exchange, had been found dead about a year ago under peculiar circumstances in New York city, had given her great mental worry, and led her to shoot herself.

Last December more fruit was exported from Sicily to the United States than ever before in the month, the aggregate being 375,000 boxes of green fruit, 160,000 of which were oranges The lemon crop is less than that of last year, but is of fair quality.

An epidemic of religion has struck George B. Smith college at Sedalia, Mo., and all but four of the 100 students have professed religion. The shouting and singing of students has put an end to class work and all-day praise meetings are held in the college chapel.

Francis Schlatter, the healer, has not been heard of for two weeks. He was seen by Solomon Block of Valencia, N M., going to the Mogollon mining district over the mountain trail that most men would not undertake to cross in the winter. It is possible that he has perished in the snow.

The bricklayers and hodcarriers are all out in Cincinnati, on account of a cut from 56 1-4 cents to 45 cents per hour for bricklayers. The strike affects only 300 men who are working now, but it will affect 3,000 men if not adjusted before the building season opens.

Gov. Matthews of Indiana has officially announced that he would call an extra session of the legislature to enact a new apportionment law. The governor advises that the eligibility of the twenty-five hold-over senators, whom many authorities claim are merely defacto officers, be not questioned.

FIFTEEN INJURED

BAD COLLISION ON A ROAD NEAR HANNIBAL, MO.

A Passenger Train and a Stock Train Come Together Near a Tunnel—Fifteen People, Including a St. Paul Man and a Minneapolis Man Are Injured—A Coach Nearly Thrown Into the River.

Hannibal, Mo., Feb. 11.—Fifteen persons were more or less seriously hurt and one cannot recover as the result of a collision to-day between an eastbound Wabash stock train and a St. Louis, Keokuk & Northwestern passenger train coming south. The collision occurred near a tunnel one mile north of this city. The stock train, which had just emerged from the tunnel, struck the passenger train, crushing in the side of the ladies' coach and throwing it over an embankment almost into the Mississippi river. There were fifteen passengers in the coach. All were more or less bruised but only the following are seriously hurt: H. F. Hudwell, St. Paul, arm crushed; Miss Eva Pettit, Hannibal, Mo., forehead badly cut; Miss M. Whitney, Quincy, Ill., hip fractured, recovery is doubtful; J. C. Cohen, stockman, Minneapolis, head cut; Mrs. Triester and son, Hannibal, Mo., both cut about the head; D. C. Webster, engineer Wabash train, knee injured.

The injured were sent to St. Louis. J. C. Peaseley, vice president of the Burlington system, and family, were in the special car "Lycoming," at the rear of the passenger train. They returned to Quincy. Responsibility for the collision is alleged to rest with the engineer of the Wabash train. He did not stop as law and instructions require before approaching the crossing. He stated that the air brakes failed, but it was found that his engine was not reversed. The damage will approximate $5,000.

KILLED HIS CHILD.

Terrible Crime of a Wisconsin Man.

Hancock, Wis., Feb. 11.—News was received here to-day of a terrible crime in the town of Richfield, Adams county, eight miles south of this place. Lote Wilson, a well-known character, whipped his nine-months-old child with a stick of kindling wood, and it died in the afternoon. It was found on examination that the babe's skull was crushed in in one place, both eyes nearly put out, and its back beaten to a jelly. The father fled as soon as the child died, and his whereabouts is not known. A party of neighbors visited the house at night with the intention of wreaking summary vengeance, and finding that he was away they demolished the house and its contents. It is charged that he nearly killed the child on another occasion, holding a revolver in his hand to keep his wife off, and pounding the babe with the other. The people are very excited over the affair, and if Wilson is caught he will probably be lynched.

Republic Not Recognized.

Honolulu, Feb. 11.—The 17th of January having been declared a national holiday by the republic, invitations to take part were sent in the usual way to the diplomatic and consular corps. Favorable replies were received from all but the representatives of the United States, England, Japan and France. Of these representatives the last three stated in their replies to this government that, as their governments had never recognized the provisional government, and as the holiday was given in celebration of the formation of that government, they did not feel it incumbent upon them in any way to participate. Mr. Willis replied, stating that he would lay the matter before Secretary Olney.

Wood in Hiding.

Greencastle, Ind., Feb. 11. — Will Wood, arrested for complicity in the Pearl Bryan murder and released on $5,000 bail, reached Greencastle late last night and was kept in hiding. Excitement became so intense that friends of his father, presiding elder of the M. E. church of this district, warned him that his son was in danger of being lynched. He and the young man hurried to the station and left on an east-bount train at 2 o'clock.

Insurgents Defeated, of Course.

Havana, Feb. 11.—An important battle is reported to have occurred between Col. Segura, who commanded the Spanish forces, and Maceo, who was at the head of the insurgents. The conflict took place at San Cristobal, and the insurgents left eighty dead on the field as they retired.

Indians Indicted.

Deadwood, S. D., Feb. 11.—The federal grand jury returned a number of indictments against Indians from Pine Ridge agency.

GIRL IS INVOLVED.

Developments in the Cincinnati Murder Case.

Indianapolis, Feb. 10. — The Fort Thomas murder mystery is now nearer a solution than it has been since the headless body of Pearl Bryan was found. Lulu May Hollingsworth, one of Pearl Bryan's girl friends, has been boarding at No. 1 Henry street, and probably knows a good deal about the tragedy. She was taken to police headquarters. She said that Jackson was responsible for Miss Bryan's condition. She knew that Miss Bryan was going to Cincinnati for the purpose of procuring an abortion, and before she left they bought medicine. In her talk with the officers she said Pearl was not murdered, but would not tell all she knew because it would incriminate herself. She continued:

"There was an occurrence between Jackson, Pearl Bryan and myself that were I to tell of, would clear up the mystery surrounding her death. However, I do not propose to see those boys hang, and when the last hope is gone I will tell what I know in order to save their necks. They did not kill Pearl. This is my theory: She took the medicine while in Jackson's room and died, and the boys took her body across the river and cut off the head to avoid identification."

Miss Hollingshead will probably be taken to Cincinnati to-morrow.

Later Miss Hollingsworth told the police all she knew. She said she bought for Pearl Bryan three kinds of drugs here and instructed her to buy another drug in Cincinnati, but to be careful of it as it was deadly poison and would kill her if not used correctly. Miss Hollingsworth says Pearl Bryan then said to her: "I will go to Cincinnati and take the stuff, and if it kills me I will be near Jackson and he will have to swing for it." Miss Hollingsworth further says that Pearl was very bitter toward Jackson, who was responsible for her condition.

More Eivdence.

Cincinnati, Feb. 11.—All day the detectives from three cities have been out busily hunting the missing links in the chain of circumstances by which the story of the murder of Pearl Bryan is to be shaped into perfect evidence. All search for the head has been fruitless, though made by hundreds of volunteers along with detectives to-day. A very material addition to the dumb witnesses of the deed was discovered. Detectives Grim and White found the girl's hat. In it a bloody handkerchief was found and a big stone placed there to keep it from being blown away. It was found in an angle between the Fort Thomas electric railway and the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad, near their intersection southeast of Newport, Ky. When the detectives arrive they will sho wthe hat to the prisoners. It answers the description of the hat worn by the girl.

The mystery of the whereabouts of the girl on Thursday night, Jan. 30, the night before the murder, remains unsolved. From her arrival here Monday, Jan. 27, up to 11 o'clock Thursday forenoon her movements have been traced. Then comes a hiatus until 7 o'clock Friday evening when she was last seen alive. This was at Dave Wellington's saloon, where she and Jackson were seen, and she drank a glass of mineral water. The rest of the story has been told barring certain gaps in it which detectives are now trying to fill. The finding of the hat weakens the theory that a cab was used to take the murderers and their victim to Fort Thomas. It looks very much as if they went by the electric railway to Fort Thomas, committed the deed and then walked back to the city, and finding this hat too conspicuous to be hidden, left it where it would be most likely to be unobserved.

Several New Clues

have been found and are under investigation. One is a blood-clotted laprobe in a cab, which has already been suspected to be the cab used by the murderers in bringing home the girl's head. Another is the identification of the prisoners as the men who were ferried across the river from Dayton, Ky. Jackson and Walling were taken to Epply's undertaking establishment and were brought before the headless body of their victim, which had been brought over from Newport. The whole scene was uncanny. The prisoners looked upon what remained of the girl whose life they had taken less than a week ago and saw the shocking sight of a headless body, the miserable work of their own hands, but no sign of remorse or even of any sort of emotion was visible in their faces. To add to the unparalleled ordeal, Mrs. Stanley, sister of the dead girl, went to her murderers and begged of them with tears coursing down her cheeks to tell her where she might find her sister's head. But nothing moved them, and, heartbroken, the weeping sister was led away, while the men were taken to the county jail, where they will be kept until the day of their examination, or until it is decided that they shall go to Kentucky for trial.

The body of Pearl Bryan was given up to her relatives, and the sorrowing company started with it to Greencastle to give it peaceful burial in the home cemetery.

Successful Bond Bidders.

Washington, Feb. 11.—The secretary of the treasury made public the names of the successful bidders for the new loan, together with the amounts subscribed for by each, and the rate offered per $100 with interest from Feb. 1. The last revision of the list reduces the amount awarded to J. P. Morgan and his associates by $32,100, making their allotment $33,170,250. The amount awarded at each rate has not yet been ascertained.

Snow in the East.

New York, Feb. 11.—There was a heavy fall of snow throughout the East to-day. It is two feet deep in some places.

Kruger Accepts.

London, Feb. 11.—President Kruger of the Transvaal has accepted the invitation extended to him by Colonial Secretary Chamberlain to come to England accompanied by some members of the Transvaal executive.

Army Officer Dead.

Missoula, Mont., Feb. 11.—Second Lieutenant Samuel G. Creden, Twenty-fifth infantry, died at 8:55 o'clock this morning in the fort hospital of typhoid fever. His remains will be shipped to Boston for interment.

WEYLER IN HAVANA

THE NEW CAPTAIN GENERAL ARRIVES IN CUBA.

According to Reports He Was Given a Rousing Reception and Began at Once on His Plan of Campaign Against Insurgents — German Warships on Their Way to Venezuela to Enforce a Demand.

Havana, Feb. 11.—The steamer Alfonso XIII. arrived here at 8 o'clock this morning, having on board Gen. Weyler, the new captain general of Cuba; Nicolau, marquis of Tenerife, and Generals Enrique Barges, Ferderico Ochando, Miguel Melquizo, Marinues Ahuemada, Luis Castello, Sanchez Bernat and Juan Arolas, the latter being the hero of Jolo, Philippine islands. The entire city was brilliantly decorated in honor of the occasion, and the bay was a splendid sight, all the war ships and merchant craft present being decorated with bunting. The wharves were crowded with people at an early hour, and all the steamers and tug boats procurable were loaded with sightseers. The chamber of commerce, the bourse, all the big commercial houses and government departments, the Canarian association, Gen. Weyler's countrymen and others crowded upon the chartered steamers or about the landing places.

Gen. Weyler received the city council on board the Alfonso XIII. He was presented with an address of welcome and assurance of loyalty. Later he came ashore and was received by Gen. Marin and staff. The streets were packed with people who displayed the greatest enthusiasm. He seemed to be much pleased with his reception, and upon arriving at the palace formally looked over the duties of the captain generalship, taking the oath of fealty over a crucifix and upon a Bible. Gen. Marin administered the oath of office, and soon afterward he received the local military and civil authorities, the different corporations and the bishops and priests. The German warships which are here saluted the arrival of Gen. Weyler, as did all the Spanish warships in port and the forts ashore. It is asserted that the German ships will now go to Venezuela in order to enforce the demands which certain German railroad contractors have made upon the Venezuelan government for the payment of certain guarantees for their work.

After the reception was completed Gen. Weyler appeared upon the balcony of the palace and reviewed the troops. His appearance was the signal for a long outburst of most enthusiastic cheering, firing of cannon and the sound of martial music, all the bands of the city being stationed at different points. Thousands of people flocked into the city from all directions before daybreak. The military procession was very fine.

Accompanying the captain general were two captains, known as "military editors." They will most likely have charge of the press censorship here, and it is already rumored that there will be considerable more difficulty experienced in this direction by the correspondents in the future.

BIRDIE IS PACIFIED.

Settement of What Promised to Be a Sensational Case.

London, Feb. 11.—The suit of Birdie Sutherland, a well known member of the ballet, against the Hon. Dudley Churchill Marjoribanks, eldest son of Baron Tweedmouth and a lieutenant in the Fourth battalion of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, claiming $100,000 damages for breach of promise of marriage, which was to have been tried to-day before Judge Russell and a special jury, has been settled out of court. Miss Sutherland, who had previously refused $15,000 to settle the case, has withdrawn her suit upon the payment of $25,000. The case was expected to furnish much interesting testimony.

BRITISH INQUIRY.

Preliminary to Arbitration in the Venezuelan Boundary Dispute.

London, Feb. 11.—The Bradford Observer says it learns that the marquis of Salisbury has requested the authorities of British Guiana to inquire into the number and extent of the districts occupied by British subjects. This, according to the paper mentioned, points to the fact that the British government is willing to arbitrate on condition that Great Britain be allowed to retain the districts occupied by British subjects, or that the latter be compensated for their loss by Venezuela, in the event of the territory passing into the possession of the latter country.

Good Showing by Railroads.

St. Paul, Feb. 11.—Thanks to the enormous crop and the general improvement in business the State of Minnesota will receive this year about $100,000 more in taxes on the gross earnings of the railroads than she received last year. Last year the aggregate taxes from this source amounted to $850,000. The reports thus far received this year indicate that the state will derive at least $950,000 from that source this year. The reports from nearly all the companies are now in.

Scandal at a Fort.

Omaha, Feb. 11.—A scandal developed at Fort Omaha to-day when Privates Cavanaugh and Murphy were arrested for prize fighting and 100 others who witnessed the fight are expected to be ordered to the guard house to-morrow. It has been stated and generally credited that the two men fought for a purse that was furnished by the officers at the fort.

Glyndon Has a Fire.

Glyndon, Minn., Feb. 11. — Fire destroyed J. A. Shea's merchandise store, Smith & Crawford's meat market, Severson's restaurant, Tom Anderson's saloon and outbuildings attached. The fire started in the meat market. Incendiarism is suspected. Loss about $8,000; small insurance.

The grand jury has held Mrs. Kate M. Nellis and Edgar O. Gardner of Girard, Pa., for trial on the charge of administering poison to Peter H. Nellis, the former's husband.

CONGRESS.

Mr. Davis Will Call Up the Monroe Resolution Next Week.

Washington, Feb. 11.—In the senate Senator Cameron offered a joint resolution which quotes the president's references to the Cuban war in his last message, declares that there are no means of securing peace to Cuba, except by giving it the right to self-government, and offers to Spain the friendly offices of the United States to bring about this result. The resolution to recommit the tariff financial bill went over until to-morrow. Mr. Smith then addressed the senate on the Monroe doctrine. Mr. Davis gave notice that he would call up the Monroe resolution the first of next week.

The desk of W. H. Crain of Texas was draped heavily with black when the house convened. Mr. Crain died early this morning. The debate on the bond bill proceeded until the noon hour. Mr. Hainer (Rep., Neb.) spoke in favor of non-concurrence in the free coinage substitute, and Messrs. Dearmond (Dem., Mo.), Calderhead (Pop., Kan.) and Skinner (Pop., N. C.) for concurrence. Mr. Sayers (Dem., Tex.) made the formal announcement of the death of his colleague and offered the usual resolutions which were unanimously adopted. A committee consisting of Messrs. Pendleton of Texas, Crowley of Texas, Kyle of Mississippi, McDearmond of Tennessee, Miles of Maryland, Milner of Michigan, Leonard of Pennsylvania, McCleary of Minnesota and Murphy of Illinois was appointed by the speaker to accompany the body to Texas, after which the house, as a further mark of respect, adjourned until to-morrow.

ANNEXES FIFTEEN TOWNS.

Roseau County, Minn., Grows at the Expense of Beltrami.

St. Paul, Feb. 11.—The state annexation commission granted petition of citizens of Roseau and Beltrami counties for the annexation from the latter county to Roseau of fifteen townships, situated in the northwest part of Beltrami county. In accordance with the action of the commission Gov. Clough issued a proclamation and certificates declaring the townships annexed according to the plat and description of the lands provided in the petition. The annexed land lies well for agricultural purposes and borders for quite a distance on the Lake of the Woods, thus placing Roseau county in direct communication with the Rainy Lake region, with which country and Manitoba it has quite a trade in lumber and cereals. The annexation was greatly desired by the citizens of that portion of Beltrami county, as heretofore they have been compelled to travel more than 400 miles to and from the county seat.

ST. PAUL ON DRY DOCK.

Inspectors Do Not Think Her Hull Has Been Injured.

New York, Feb. 11—The International Navigation company's steamship St. Paul has been sent to Newport News to be placed on dry dock. This course was adopted upon the recommendation of the assistant inspectors of steam vessels, who have been examining the big steamer to ascertain the results of her experience on the sands of Long Branch. The inspectors express the opinion that the St. Paul's hull is uninjured, except some slight injury to her bottom plating. All of her interior construction, such as frames, stringers, web and belt frames, deck frames and the butts in her upper deck and rails are, the report says, as perfect as they were before she stranded. Her sheer is also unchanged, all of which clearly shows that she is not strained or weakened.

ENGLISH ESTATE.

Five Million Dollars, Nearly All of Which Goes to Son and Daughter.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 11.—The will of William H. English was probated to-day. The estate is stated to be worth $5,000,000. He gives $2,000 to Crown Hill cemetery, the interest to be used to keep up the English monument; $2,500 to the Indiana Historical society; $10,000 for the completion of the history of Indiana; to Miss Ruth Hedges, confidential clerk, $5,000 in money and certain real estate in this city, to be accepted and receipted for as final settlement. The remainder of the estate is divided between his son and daughter. The son and daughter are made executor and executrix, to serve without bond. The provision looking to final settlement with the confidential clerk is supposed to preclude any contest, even if one was contemplated.

LETS WIMAN OUT.

All Pending Indictments Against Him Are Dismissed.

New York, Feb. 11. — District Attorney Fellows to-day made a recommendation in the court of general sessions that all the pending indictments against Erastus Wiman be dismissed. Judge McMahon promptly granted the motion. The indictments against Mr. Wiman were found early in the spring of 1894, a few months after his failure in business, and he was tried early in June of the same year. He was charged with forging the indorsement of E. W. Bullinger to a check for $50,000. Wiman's defense was that he was a partner in the firm of R. G. Dun & Co., to which the check was drawn, and as such was entitled to draw checks.

Cyclists in Session.

Baltimore, Feb. 11.—League politics absorbed the attention of the delegates to the national convention of the League of American Wheelmen to-day to the utter exclusion of everything else. As a consequence the experimental "good roads" meeting was only a moderate success in point of attendance, although the mental pabulum served to those who attended was of a high order.

Mystery in Gotham.

New York, Feb. 11.—What appears to have been a cold-blooded murder was committed to-day in the institution for the improved instruction of deaf mutes. The victim was Prof. Max E. Glau, sixty-eight years old, an instructor in drawing.

About 200 men employed by the United States Bicycle Company in Chicago went out on a strike to-day, according to one of the company officials, because a foreman was discharged Saturday.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Interesting Happenings in the North Star State.

Farmers have been sowing wheat in different parts of Martin county.

There is much sickness at Spicer and Dr. Gibson, of Atwater, reports two cases of diphtheria.

Frank Kostal, while walking on the Omaha track near St. Paul was struck by an engine and killed.

Maurice Bergren, a prominent young man of Houston county, was found dead in his bed at Houston. Heart failure is the supposed cause.

At the Duluth municipal election Henry Tinelson, Democrat, was elected mayor. The aldermen are all Republicans.

H. G. Delloff, hardware merchant at Good Thunder, assigned to William Wrucke. Assets and liabilities are each $5,000.

Two runaway boys from the state training school at Red Wing were detected at Hastings and sent back on the afternoon train.

The Sims hotel barn at Brownsdale was burned. Loss about $200, partially covered by insurance. Origin of the fire unknown.

O. E. Wilber, the victim of a brutal assault at Fairmont, died of injuries. Wilber was an old citizen and greatly respected. Kraft is in jail charged with the murder.

B. L. Summer of Park Rapids made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. He dealt in furniture, and his assignment was the result of the hard times of the past two years.

John McDougall, a prominent farmer living near Delhi was killed in a runaway accident at Redwood Falls. He was fifty-five years old and leaves a wife and seven children.

J. C. York of Elysian is dead. He was eighty-six years old, was one of the original owners of the St. Peter townsite and built the first house in St. Peter. He was well known in Minnesota valley in the fifties.

The Seventh congressional district will hold an immigration convention in Fergus Falls Feb. 26 and 27. The programme for the convention is not yet arranged, but every effort will be made to make it a big success.

At Stewartsville a man by the name of Henderson had four fingers cut off by a buzz saw while sawing wood. A son of Lee Duncanson, a farmer living near Stewartsville had a leg broken by falling under a horse.

At Lakeville the building occupied by George Messing took fire and the inside was completely gutted before the fire could be gotten under control. Messing's loss is about $800; insurance, $000.

Ernest Browne, a colored boy, 17 years old, an inmate of the Red Wing training school, was found dead in bed. He came from Minneapolis. Heart disease was the cause of his death.

The Red Wing and Trenton Transit Company has elected the following officers: President, P. Nelson; vice-president, E. H. Blodgett; treasurer, W. H. Putman; secretary, L. C. Smith.

John McDougall, aged about 50, and a prosperous farmer, living six miles west of Redwood Falls fell from his wagon and struck on his head, causing concussion of the brain. He lived but a short time. He leaves a widow and several children.

At a recent meeting of the board of prison managers the warden was authorized to purchase new twine machinery, which will increase the output of the factory to 12,000 pounds per day. The board also granted three paroles and transacted other business.

The farmers assembled at Dodge Center to further consider the matter of a farmers' elevator. A committee was appointed to see how many shares of stock could be secured and report in two weeks. If sufficient money can be raised the elevator will be built.

Willis McLaren of Crookston, 16 years of age, while stealing a ride to South Crookston, fell under the wheels on attempting to get off. Forty cars passed over his legs, severing them both. Hopes are entertained of his recovery.

The old foundry and machine shop of J. G. Brundin at Albert Lea was gutted by fire, and it had to be flooded before the flames were put out. The foundry had not been operated for some time, and the origin of the fire is a mystery. The loss was heavy, but the insurance light.

At Wabasha Charles Jacobs of Gilford was bound over to the grand jury on the charge of having stabbed Frank Haradon at Lake City New Year's night. At the close of the case Haradon, the complaining witness was arrested, charged with an unmentionable crime.

Before Judge Searle at St. Cloud F. F. Weber of Perham was removed as assignee of the insolvent estate of J. L. Krouschinabel of Frazee, Becker county. The removal was on statutory grounds, being caused by a petition signed by heavy St. Paul creditors. No successor has been appointed as yet.

The farmers' institute, which was held at Buffalo was largely attended at each session. Supt. Gregory presided. The different subjects were treated with ability by the speakers, and many remarks of approval and appreciation were heard from farmers who attended.

At Redwood Falls Judge Webber has denied the motion of the state for a new trial in the case of the county commissioners of Redwood vs. the Citizens' Bank of Redwood Falls, insolvent, and the bondsmen of the bank as a county depository. The county had over $3,000 in the bank at the time of the failure. The county will appeal from the order denying a new trial.

Mrs. E. Y. Hunewell of Owatonna, recently deceased, leaves an estate of $100,000 to be distributed as follows: Twenty-five thousand for the settlement of debts, $10,000 to St. Paul's Episcopal church of Owatonna, $3,000 for a rectory, $15,000 to Shattuck school at Faribault, two-thirds of the remainder, about $30,000, to the Wilder school of the diocese of Minnesota; the remainder, about $15,000, for a public library for the city, provided the city raises an equal amount.

BREVITIES.

Today is a legal holiday Lincoln's birthday,

Miss Caroline V. Mason of Chicago visited H. E, Ives last Friday.

Marvin Loy, of Crookston, is in town this week on business.

Fred Eichoff has been suffering lately with a badly inflamed eye.

Adam Zeh of Thief River Falls was in town on business this afternoon

Jas. Meehan of Thief River Falls was in town a short time last Monday.

Messrs Hoff Rapp Messrs Brink and Bjerk were at Thief River Falls last Sunday.

Andrew Nelson a prosperous farmer of River Falls will here after be a Spectator reader.

Alfred Dainard went down to Crookston today as a witness on the Kenmston examination,

E, J. Holmes left today for Cannon Falls where he will spend a few weeks with his family.

Gen. Supt Barr and Division Supt. Jinks of the Great Northern passed over the line last Monday.

T. L, Tillisch of the Security Trust Company of Grand Forks is here this week making settlements.

We had official notice the first of the week that winter had not yet left us in the cold snap

D, Alberle of St Paul treasurer of the democratic state central committee was doing business in town today.

We learn that a movement is no foot for a daily train on this line commencing April 1. We hope it may prove true,

Henry Norland was in town on Monday with the Erickson children who are to be taken to the state school at Owatonna.

I, C. Richardson, of Thief River Falls was in town today on his way to Crookston where he acts as Rev Kenniston's attorney at the examination there tomorrow.

The Judge Benson investigation seems to fizzle out completely. Some do say that Gov, Clough has a kindly feeling for the Judge since he has turned Republican and the whole matter will be dropped.

A certain young lady in town had a brilliant scheme and for all we know it may have worked. It is well known to all that C. A. Brink is inclined to be nervous and the young lady figured it out that if she should suddenly use her leap year privilege and propose, Charley could not help but "jump" at the chance,

C. G. Rapp returned from West Superior last Saturday where he had been to settle with the Galloway Grain Co. No settlement has been reached as yet and it is not probable that the farmers will get a cent for their wheat They should have been more careful who they consign their grain to in the future. It is said that Galloway will be arrested.

Later.—Mr. Rapp has received a telegram from West Superior, stating that Galloway was under arrest.

Sever Moe who has been working for Marshall & Johnson the past winter hired a team last Wednesday night and drove to Crookston. He went down to look after his wife who left on the train Wednesday, so he claimed, He or his wife have not been heard from since and it is supposed they have left the country, Moe owed various parties here in the neighborhood of one hundred dollars.

The preliminary hearing of John White on charge of attempting to use poison on a victim at East Grand Forks with the intention of committing robbery came up before Judge Sullivan in that city yesterday and the defendant was bound over to the district court to answer to the charge. County Attorney Gossman appeared for the state and Attorney Angell for the defence. It was proven that White proposed to dope the intended victim but the proposition was not accepted by the bartender to whom it was made, and it was believed he could not be held for an attempt which was not made. The court held differently however and it is probably all right.—Crookston Times,

Many of our citizens have received handsome invitations to attend a grand ball and banquet given at Red Lake Falls next Monday evening by the citizens of the town, We understand that a number from here will attend

Commissioner Norland is down from St. Hilaire today bringing with him the children of Hygenius Erickson whom the authorities up that way claim are county charges and should be sent to the state public school at Owatonna. Judge Benson seems to be of the idea that all is not right in the matter and has raised a question of authority, the father accompanied the children to St. Hilaire and placed them in Norland's charge and that, the latter thinks, should satisfy. The commissioner has conferred with the superintendent of the state school and finds that Judge Benson's statement to him by wire a week ago, was not correct as there was plenty of room at that time. Judge Benson now claims that he got mixed and the Faribault school was the institution referred to, The county attorney was appealed to and decided that the proof of the father's relinquishment was sufficient to warrant action on the part of the court, at press time the matter was not fully settled,—Crookston Times,

Judge Ives Tuesday issued an order authorizing the sheriff to destroy the outfit of gambling devices, now in his possession by burning them in some public place in the city on Saturday next. The property consists of tables wheels and other paraphernalia which was secured on the occasion of the memorable raid made by the authorities upon the gambling establishments of East Grand Forks, last fall, and which resulted in the wholesale indictments by the late grand jury. The value of the property could not have been less than two thousand dollars and the occasion will be one of great interest to the people here and throughout the country. —Crookston Times.

The tables which have been the medium across which so many thousands of dollars have been spent during the wide open days of East Grand Forks ultra hilarity went up in smoke at the corner of Robert and Main streets on Saturday night. A large crowd was out to see the bonfire and the salvation Army drum sounded a dirge for the holocaust.

"Yim" Hill has been constrained to abandon his attempt to confiscate the Northern Pacific, It was to have been a masterly stroke and James would have netted about $25,000,000 out of the deal, But the commands of the constitution, the denunciation of the people, and the patriotic utterances of the press actually proved potent to overthrow his plans. Mr. Hill can stand a great deal but the hot shot of the editors annoyed him and perhaps cost him those millions, hence he has decided that no editorial transportation shall be issued by his road hereafter and the poor quill drivers will have to walk or patronize the N. P. While striding along from ties to ties the editor will have opportunity to thank his lucky stars that James failed to get a cinch on all railroads of the northwest, and also to muse on the stirring times of the recent past when every editor rose to the defense of Hill's railroad and helped deter an army of strikers from destroying it. These things may have been forgotten by Magnate Hill but each editor still remembers the exact number of subscribers he lost among the strike sympathizers through his fearless championship of law and order at that time.—Scott County Argus.

PTERODACTYL

We print a likeness of the skeleton of this remarkable paleontological reptile because some of its physical characteristics are synonymous with our business methods. Perhaps the most striking similarity may be found in its

Big Bargains

Its little finger is very large: and so are our bargains. The paradox of a little finger being big may be likened to the paradoxical inducements we offer you.

Profits and Hind Feet Small

Its hind feet are out of all proportion to its fore feet, just as our profit is overshadowed by the buyer's. Its large head represents the size of our stock. The many years that have elapsed since the time when this creature flourished will hint at the wearing quality of our goods.

HIRAM, KING OF TYRE.

The Phœnician Monarch and His Effort to Imitate the Deity.

Hiram, the Phœnician monarch, strove to imitate God by erecting four mighty pillars, upon which he caused seven heavens (apartments) to be built. The first was constructed of glass—500 by 500 yards—storing therein mock images of the sun, moon and stars. The second compartment—of iron, 1,000 by 1,000 yards—was the receptacle of precious stones, causing a terrific noise resembling thunder when they crashed against each other and the casement of the inclosure. The third chamber was of lead, 1,500 by 1,500 yards. The fourth was of tin, 2,000 by 2,000 yards. The fifth was of copper, 2,500 by 2,500 yards. The sixth was of silver, 3,000 by 3,000 yards. The seventh was of gold, 3,500 by 3,500 yards, containing precious stones, pearls and a magnificent throne. A channel of water separated the apartments.

Hiram, imitating the royal splendor of the court of King Solomon, surrounded himself by the grandest conceivable display of magnificence. In the seventh apartment was stationed a golden bed, the corners of which were set in pearls without value in all the world, sparkling forth beautiful flashes resembling lightning, which spread wonder and terror among all his subjects.

The prophet Ezekiel was ordered to appear before Hiram, who, at a loss as to how to reach the seven heavens wherein the monarch presided, was transported into his castle by "the locks of his hair." Upon perceiving the divine messenger Hiram trembled. "Who art thou?" thundered the indignant harbinger of future events. "Why dost thou boast? Art thou not born of woman's womb?"

"I am," replied Hiram, "but I live forever. Like God dwelling over waters, dwell I. Like him reigning over seven heavens, I rule in seven apartments. As God is surrounded by lightning and thunder, so am I. God has stars in heaven, so have I. Many sovereigns have succumbed to mortality, and I still exist. Twenty-one kings of the house of Israel and David, 20 prophets and ten high priests have departed this earth, but I outlive them all."

"Why dost thou boast?" again demanded Ezekiel.

"Because thou didst supply the cedars for Solomon's temple? This puts me in mind of a subject who prepared a splendid garment for his sovereign, and as often as the servant gazed at the glorious piece of work he boastingly asserted, 'This is my manufacture,' until the king, observing his vanity, tore it off in disgust. Such will be thy lot. The temple which thou helpest to build will be destroyed. What will then become of thy pride?"—Dr. Alexander Kohut in Independent.

Dumas' Unfinished Plays.

M. Alexandre Dumas has left two unpublished comedies, "La Route to Thebes" and "La Tremblante." It is now known, however, that neither will ever see the light. Strict injunctions have been laid upon his executors by M. Dumas to burn all his unpublished manuscripts. The decision is regretted by his admirers, as great things were expected of one at least of these comedies, "La Tremblante," which had been read to certain intimate friends, according to whom it was a masterpiece of wit and satire.

The fact is that as he got old Dumas, who was always a laborious writer, polishing and repolishing his sentences with infinite care, found it almost impossible to please himself. Latterly he had complained to M. Claretie that he was not well enough to revise the play he had promised to the Comedie Francaise. Not long ago, however, he wrote, "You shall have it before the end of the year, or I shall be dead." As was always the case, adds M. Claretie, he kept his word.—London News.

Color of Antarctic Birds.

It was remarkable to see how the plumage of the birds gradually changed into lighter and lighter colors as we drew southward, altering with the colors of the surroundings. Whether the birds, like the polar hare, also changed their color with the seasons I had not an opportunity to notice, but it is clear that within the antarctic circle also Mother Nature takes care of all her children and protects the defenseless from the eye of their larger enemies by giving them an invisible clothing. It was thus almost impossible to discover the magnificent white petrel when it was on the dazzling snow. It was likewise difficult to discover the white seal when it stretched itself on the ice floes.—C. E. Borchgrevink in Century.

The Truth of It.

Willey—I tell you, it's better in the end to be honest. Did you ever know a rogue who wasn't unhappy?

Shalley—No, but, then, one would hardly expect a rogue to be happy when he is known. It's the rogues who are not known that are happy.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

THE HISTORY OF WORDS.

Mint and Money—Curious Connection of Cattle and Capital.

We all know that a place where metal is coined is called a mint. But why is it so called? Is it not a strikingly curious fact that the two words mint and money are made from the same Latin word? Yet it is not more so than many other facts disclosed in the study of etymology. There is very commonly a close connection between the history of events and the making of the words most prominent in the record of that history.

Mint is the name of a place for making coins simply because when the need of such a name was first recognized the place used for their making happened to be the Roman temple of the goddess Juno, one of whose surnames was Moneta, said to mean literally "adviser." In Anglo-Saxon the word had two syllables—mynet—which shows its origin more clearly than the monosyllable mint does. Money is called moneta in Italian and monnaie in French, and the French name for a mint is "hotel des monnaies."

We habitually think of money only as coined metal, or what we call paper money. Our ideas would be profitably amplified by a little special reading on the subject, and one interesting book for the purpose is "Money and the Mechanism of Exchange," by W. S. Jevons, which begins with the following narration:

"Mlle. Zelie, a singer of the Theatre Lyrique at Paris, made a professional tour around the world and gave a concert in the Society islands. In exchange for an air from 'Norma' and a few other songs she was to receive a third part of the receipts. When counted, her share was found to consist of 3 pigs, 23 turkeys, 44 chickens, 5,000 cocoanuts, besides considerable quantities of bananas, lemons and oranges. At the Halle in Paris, as the prima donna remarks in her lively letter, printed by M. Wolowski, this amount of live stock and vegetables might have brought 4,000 francs, which would have been good remuneration for five songs. In the Society islands, however, pieces of money were very scarce, and as mademoiselle could not consume any considerable portion of the receipts herself it became necessary in the meantime to feed the pigs and poultry with the fruit."

The singer's payment in this way arose merely from a scarcity of money, but there was a time when live stock was the standard measure of value or "medium of exchange," and in several languages the name for money is identical with that of some kind of cattle or domesticated animal.

The name cattle arose from the fact that the animals were counted by the head, which suggested the Latin name capitale, from caput, meaning head. Because cattle were the measure of value all property was reckoned as worth so many cattle, and this circumstance also gives us the words capital and chattel.

Is it not an interesting suggestion from these facts that other words must have come from the same source? Any etymological dictionary will tell us that caput, Latin for head, is a part of many common English words. I will mention only a few that occur to me without reference to books. They are capillary, caption, capitulate, chapter, decapitate, and each of them has a curious history.—Philadelphia Times.

Edna Lyall's "Dream Children."

The famous English authoress, Edna Lyall, writing of her life and early literary influences and work in The Ladies' Home Journal, says: "From the early days of my authorship up to the present time there has always been a story on hand, and writing has become so much a part of my life that it is difficult quite to understand what life without a vocation would be like or how people exist without 'dream children.' They cost one much suffering and bring many cares and anxieties. They are not what we could wish, and we are conscious of their faults. Still they are our 'dream children,' and when they cheer the dull or interest the overworked, there comes a glad sense that it has all been worth while, and we are thankful that the gift was given us."

His Broker's Advice.

Hicks—Want to consult your broker? There's no dependence to be placed upon the advice of a broker.

Wicks—Not with some brokers perhaps, but I have every confidence in Pcotsinkalls. I've consulted him a hundred times, and I never regretted it.

Hicks—And you always follow his advice?

Wicks—On the contrary, when he says buy I sell, and I buy when he says sell.—Boston Transcript.

Not an Iconoclast.

"Do you ever expect to marry your ideal?"

"What, and destroy him? Nit."

And the woman who knew what she was doing laughed lightly.—Detroit Tribune.

Syrup of Figs

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness, without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, then laxatives or other remedies are not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, then one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

FELINE MODELS FOR ARTISTS.

How Cats Are Caught and Made to Pose for Painters.

From the Brooklyn Times: The celebrated artist, Henrietta Ronner, of Paris, who is the foremost animal painter in the feline department at present, has been the subject of much attention concerning her methods of work among the lowly or the aristocratic, for she paints cats of both high and low degree. Brooklyn has a kitten painter also. He did not begin life as one, figures and fruit having always stood for August Laux in art. A patron wanted him to paint a cat group once, and the artist succeeded so well with the order that he took felines on his list, and his name has become largely associated with them of late. Mr. Laux was found in his pleasant studio on Carroll street, and responded to the request to give some information as to his methods of work as follows: "I use a large cage to put my little models in when I am ready to paint them. If I want a lively, bright subject I place a work basket in their bastile. That brings out all the mischief there is in them. They tangle the thread, roll the spools about and assume the very sauciest, most comical expressions and poses. When they are tired of playing they go to sleep, and then again out comes my notebook and I jot down some very pretty attitudes. Do you want a quiet, pleasant little picture? Then place a saucer of milk in the cage, and the little animals will come around it, and all you have to do is just to paint them. The picture is almost sure to be satisfactory if well handled."

Of course, Mr. Laux did not attain his present felicity of delineating the cat all at once. To paint Miss Tabby is "one of those things which break your heart," as Tait, the famous animal painter, once said. Kittens are mercurial. It requires much practice and long concentration of mind to make a perfect sketch of grimalkin, for often it must be done at lightning speed.

COURTING IN THE PARK.

Winter's Chills Have No Terror for the Loving Couples.

"Ugh!" said the sparrow cop to the New York World man. "There's no accounting for taste, but as for spooning around in the mud on a night like this—I have my opinion of them that does it. Now with me I have to hang around here whether it rains or shines, but it's about as cheerful a place as a cemetery to do your courtin' in if you're selecting a place to spend the evenin' with your best girl. But, on my honor, there's couples that comes spooning here on the coldest drizzly winter nights and seem to like it. They don't seem to mind the weather a bit. Now, look at 'em trailin' along there like as it was a night in June."

Down the pathway and up the next, and circling the arch, and around the four sides of the square, slowly, very slowly, under the drip of the branches and the drizzle of the sky, they loitered.

And lingered.

A long time and slowly.

Very slowly.

And when the reporter passed that way half an hour later they were still lingering under one umbrella and the drizzle of a December night.

And loitering.

Very slowly.

And the sparrow cop watched the broad back of the romantic umbrella as it peregrinated its leisurely way with the bitter upper-curve of nostril that settles upon the face of him who has considered the folly of the world and does not approve of it.

Society Has a New Dance.

The edict of fashion has gone forth, which has decreed that the varsouvianna shall be the dance "de resistance" for the winter. It is a medly of graceful steps. It consists of a combination of the polka redowa, the mazurka, and the glide waltz. Slow music, melodious tunes and deliberation of movement are the complement of requisites to master it.

First part, polka redowa, one measure; point left in second, one measure. Polka redowa to left, one measure; point right second, one measure. Repeat the above instructions, in all, eight measures. The second part alternates into two measures of mazurka and one polka redowa. Use the mazurka for two measures, commencing with the left foot. The polka redowa in the first part is made by turning alternately from left to right. Two quick slides may be introduced by expert dancers to advantage, providing a certain grace of movement much to be desired.

The Home.

Home should be a beautiful place, not a den nor a nest like the habitation of beasts; not a hut nor wigwam like the abode of a savage; not an establishment for ministering to vanity. Home is just what women make it.—Rev Charles Scadding, Toledo, O.

SPEAKING OF PEOPLE.

The duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha plays the fiddle with fervor and skill.

King Humbert of Italy is a strong man, but his only son and heir is slight and delicate.

Crown Prince William of Germany, now 13 years old, is not half so bright and strong as his younger brother.

Speaker Reed denies the report that he studied for the ministry when a young man, but admits that his folks wanted him to do so.

The wife of President Cleveland has a most mellifluous voice, and an admirer says, "Her speech is a continual song without words."

Bjornstjerne Bjornson's new play, "Der Konig," is objected to by the Danish censorship, as its hero is King Oscar and the play is an attack on royalty.

And now they are saying that Washington played the flute. But the muse of history adds that, though he played very well, he never did so when anybody was within hearing distance.

The appalling statement is made that Gladstone is at present engaged in editing the letters which he has received and which he thinks worthy of preservation, and these are said to number no fewer than 200,000.

"Why, Judge Jones," exclaimed the lady, "you have forgotten me, and I met you only two years ago!"

"On the contrary, madam," bowed the courtly judge, vainly racking his memory the while, "on the contrary, I have been striving for two years to forget you."—Harper's Magazine.

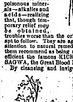
The Reason. Many White Mothers Might Profit by it.

HOW the little "pappoose" ever lives beyond it's infancy is a marvel; unprotected from the elements and knocked about generally, utterly regardless of what we are pleased to term hygienic laws. But live they did, and grew up into a race renowned for health, perfect physical development, and endurance.

The reason is, they were the offspring of a nation whose systems had not been shattered by the use of poisonous drugs—Nature's own children—turning to her for help in times of sickness. By their close communion with nature, discovering roots, barks and herbs, the great medicinal properties of which are unquestioned by the highest medical authorities of to-day, the most universally now used being the well-known Kickapoo Indian Remedies. The best physicians are now beginning to abandon the use of poisonous minerals—alkalies and acids—realizing that, though temporary relief may be obtained, troubles worse than the original disease are apt to follow. They are again turning their attention to natural remedies, and many of them recommend as being most reliable and efficient the famous KICKAPOO INDIAN SAGWA, the Great Blood Purifier.

By cleansing and invigorating the most vital organs, the kidneys, liver, stomach and blood, it dispels all diseases of these parts speedily and permanently.



Try it. It will do as much for you as it has for others. Remember it can do no harm, as it contains no poisonous ingredients, and many of its cures are simply marvelous.

Thousands are living to-day who owe their lives to its use; as many more, who, by taking a bottle in time, have been saved from weeks of misery, sickness and suffering, which is ever accompanied by an awful expense. For the cure of Rheumatism, a Blood Purifier, Dyspepsia, Kidney, Liver, Heart, Nervousness, and diseases resulting from a derangement of these parts it is infallible. We employ a large force of Doctors, who will give you medical advice free if you will write us and describe your symptoms. $1.00 per bottle; six bottles for $5.00. All druggists. Kickapoo Indian Medicine Co., New Haven, Conn.

FEMALE MURDERERS.

Desperate Characters Whose Appearance Belies Their Acts.

The women in the Neudorf convent prison were all so kindly in their ways, so peaceful and good-humored, they differed so completely from our preconceived ideas of criminals, that we were puzzled to imagine what could have brought them into prison, says a writer in the Cornhill Magazine. We had never a doubt that their offenses were of the most trivial nature and we said so. The superior gave us one of her odd, humorous smiles.

"Did you notice that woman in the corridor?" said she. "She is Marie Schneider."

That insignificant-looking little woman who had stood aside with a gentle, deprecative smile to allow us to pass, Marie Schneider? Why, in any other place one would have set her down at once as the hard-working wife of a struggling curate, so thoroughly respectable did she look. And she is Marie Schneider, a European celebrity with more murders on her conscience than she has fingers on her hands!

"And you let her stay here?"

"We have nowhere else to put her," the inspector, who had joined us, replied, "and we don't hang women in Austria."

Nor is she, as we soon found, the only notoriety in the place. One of the prisoners is a delicate-looking girl, with large brown eyes and golden hair—a type of beauty almost peculiar to Australians. She has a low, cooing voice and a singularly sweet, innocent expression.

"What on earth can that girl have done to be sent here?" I whispered.

"Done," the inspector replied, grimly, "set a house on fire in the hope of killing a man with his wife and five children."

The girl must have had extraordinarily sharp ears, for, though we were standing at some distance away, she heard what he said, and she gave him a glance such as I hope never to see again in my life. It was absolutely diabolical; had there been a knife within reach the man would have died on the spot. Yet only a moment before she had been looking up into my face with a smile an angel might have envied.

Several of the prisoners are in the convent for killing their own children; some for killing, or trying to kill, their husbands; others for stealing or embezzling; others, again, for no more serious crime than begging. There are all degrees of guilt there, in fact, and all ages, from girls of 16 to women of nearly 80. And they all live together on terms of perfect equality; for there are no distinctions of rank there—no one is better or worse than her neighbor. When the convent door closed behind them they have done, for the time being, not only with the outside world, but with their own past. They start life afresh, as it were.

Herbert Spencer and the Blackie Family.

One afternoon Mrs. Blackie and the writer, sitting on a garden seat, noted a weary wayfarer with dusty boots open the little gate and climb up the footpath. He wore a soft wide-awake and gray clothes and displayed no badge of saintship or lantern of philosophy. "A dominie for Pro.," said Mrs. Blackie. The professor's voice was ringing out from the open window of his turret study, laden with soft Gaelic gutturals. It ceased and the dominie stood under the porch. A few minutes passed and Bella came flying to the garden seat. "Please, mum, it's Mr. Herbert Spencer in the drawing room and the professor is not to be found." He had closed his book and gone by the back door to breathe on the "sublime heights" before dinner.

Trembling with responsibility we faced the illustrious visitor, who restored our composure by abusing the highlands, libeling the inn-keepers and accusing our sex of bribing porters with threepenny bits and so compassing every railway disaster ever recorded. With some indignation we flung our gauntlet in the face of the "father of modern philosophy," and it is to be feared that he fled from such unwonted treatment. "This has been a very stormy interview," he said and took his leave. And just afterward, returning from his walk, the professor missed his visit.—"John Stuart Blackie," by A. M. Stoddard.

London Has a Woman's Hotel.

In London the "lone, lorn" woman need not have the humiliating experience of being rejected at one hotel and then another. There is an hotel for her especial convenience, situated near an underground railway station, easily accessible to all parts of London. It is the Sloane Gardens Home, and it is an attractive hotel, where the drawing room has not the usual barren "barracks" air of hotel drawing rooms. There is a writing room and music room besides. Single rooms and suites are let to women. They are daintily furnished, or unfurnished, as the lodger pleases. The furnished rooms cost from $2.50 to $3.50 a week. Unfurnished rooms may be had for about $1.50. Meals well cooked and well served may be had for prices ranging from $4 to $4.50 a week.

Amusements.

Too many Christian people look upon amusements narrowly if not fanatically, and would apply to them the most heroic treatment. Amusements are important, and religious men sometimes tolerate them with a wry face, but in no broad, sweet way. They do not see how indispensable they are. The maker of a toy, the writer of a play, the furnisher of a pure amusement, are public benefactors. Amusement, subordinate to the high and noble ends of life, is more than mental diversion; it fortifies virtue.—Rev. Dr. Peabody, Rome, N. Y.

Christianity.

Christianity was not a result of the accident of sin. It was God's eternal purpose that this should be a Christian world. There is only one way to live, for God and for man, and that is the Christian way.—Rev. George W. Brooks, Universalist, Dorchester, Mass.

SCIATIC RHEUMATISM AND ITS CURE.

From the Gazette, Burlington, Iowa.

The story of Mr. Tabor's nearly fatal attack of sciatic rheumatism is familiar to his large circle of acquaintances, but for the benefit of others and those similarly afflicted The Gazette has investigated the matter for publication. Mr. Tabor is Secretary and Treasurer, for the Commercial Printing Company, with offices in the Hedge Block, and resides at 417 Basset Street, Burlington, Iowa. A Gazette man sought an interview with Mr. Tabor at his place of business to-day, and although he was busily engaged with imperative duties, he talked freely and feelingly on the subject of his recent severe sickness and subsequent wonderful cure.

"Yes," said Mr. Tabor, "I can safely say that I am a well man, that is; my old trouble with rheumatism has entirely disappeared, but I am still taking Pink Pills and will keep on taking them as long as I continue to grow stronger and healthier, as I have been every day since I began to use them. You will not wonder at my profound faith in the merits of Pink Pills after you have heard what I have to tell you. About one year ago I was stricken suddenly with sciatic rheumatism and was confined to my bed. It grew worse and rapidly assumed the form of inflammatory rheumatism. I suffered constant and acute pains and all the tortures which that horrible disease is capable of inflicting. At length under the constant care of a local physician I was enabled to return to my work, but only at intervals. Severe attacks would appear regularly in my back and descend into my leg and foot, and threatened to make me a permanent cripple. I tried various remedies for rheumatism, but without any beneficial results. I grew pale, weak and haggard, and my family grew alarmed at my condition.

"About eight weeks ago my mother induced me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and you know the result. Before I had used one box I felt greatly relieved and much stronger. I continued their use and improved rapidly. I have now taken eight boxes and feel like a new man and completely cured."

In reply to inquiries Mr. Henry, the druggist, stated that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were having a large sale, that it was particularly gratifying to him to know that the customers themselves were highly pleased with the benefits they had derived from their use: that many of them stated that the pills were the only medium that had done them any good; that they not only gave them quick relief but permanent benefit. That the pills do sell and that the pills do cure is a certainty.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. Pink Pills are sold in boxes only at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

Walter Baker & Co., Limited, Dorchester, Mass., the well-known manufacturers of Breakfast Cocoa and other Cocoa and Chocolate preparations, have an extraordinary collection of medals and diplomas awarded at the great international and other exhibitions in Europe and America. The house has had uninterrupted prosperity for nearly a century and a quarter and is now not only the oldest but the largest establishment of the kind on this continent. The high degree of perfection which the company has attained in its manufactured products is the result of long experience combined with an intelligent use of the new forces which are constantly being introduced to increase the power and improve the quality of production, and cheapen the cost to the consumer.

The full strength and the exquisite natural flavor of the raw material are preserved unimpaired in all of Walter Baker & Company's preparations; so that their products may truly be said to form the standard for purity and excellence.

In view of the many imitations of the name, labels and wrappers on their goods consumers should ask for and be sure that they get the genuine articles made at Dorchester, Mass.

Expensive Ocean Greyhounds.

Few people have any idea of the enormous expense of keeping the ocean greyhounds in ship shape. It costs one company on an average of $10,000 a month for repairs to the various vessels. They are thoroughly overhauled every month, and the amount of small repairing necessary would astonish even the old voyager. In the shops on the American side there is a duplicate of every bit of machinery used in the make-up of an ocean liner, from enormous pieces of shafting down to the smallest bolt. The International company has to pay, among its other expenses, for a professional rat catcher, who clears the ships of the little pests. About fifty rats are caught at the end of each voyage.—Westminster Gazette.

CURE CONSUMPTION.

T. A. Slocum, M. C. Offers to Send Free Two Bottles of His Remedy to Cure Consumption, and all Lung Troubles.

Wonderful Progress of Medical Science.

Nothing could be fairer or more philanthropic than the offer of T. A. Slocum, Manufacturing Chemist, of 183 Pearl street, New York City.

Perfectly confident that he has an absolute remedy for the Cure of Consumption and all Pulmonary Affections (and to increase its usefulness, and make its great merits known), will send two bottles free to any reader who is suffering from Throat, Chest and Lung Troubles and Consumption.

Already this scientific treatment, by its timely use, has permanently cured thousands of cases.

Knowing this remedy as he does, and being so proof-positive of its beneficent results, he considers it his religious duty, a duty which he owes to humanity, to donate his infallible specific remedy.

Offered freely, is enough to commend it—and more so in the perfect confidence of the great chemist making the offer.

There will be no mistake in sending—the mistake will be in overlooking the generous invitation; the only expense to the sufferer being slight express charges on delivery of the remedy.

Mail your express and postoffice address to T. A. Slocum, M. C., 183 Pearl street, New York, and mention reading this article in this paper.

PITH OF THE NEWS.

EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

A General Resume of the Most Important News of the Week, From all Parts of the Globe, Boiled Down and Arranged in Convenient Form for Rapid Perusal by Busy People.

Washington Talk.

The state department shows that the stories of Canadian aggression along the border of Alaska are untrue.

The senate in executive session today confirmed the nomination of Hon. Edwin F. Uhl to be ambassador to Germany.

United States Vice Consul Bondinel at New Chang, in a report to the state department, says now that the Japanese have evacuated the Manchurian peninsula and the Chinese are resuming possession, there will be some demand for cannon, small arms, ammunition, smokeless powder and other military stores to replace those carried off by the Japanese.

People in Print.

The czar of Russia owns a single estate that is 100,000,000 acres in extent, and it is said to be the largest in the world.

Early widowhood appears to be the sad destiny of many members of the British royal family. The queen herself was widowed at forty-two, the Empress Frederick at forty-eight and Princess Beatrice at thirty-nine.

Lord Dunraven refuses to deny or confirm the report that he has sent an apology to the New York Yacht club as a result of the complete refutation of the charges his lordship brought against the Defender.

Dr. A. Graham Bell describes in the current issue of the Progress of the World a device by which he transmits sounds and ordinary conversation along a sunbeam, in the same way that one now uses a telephone wire.

Albert Bruce Joy, an English sculptor, has just finished a life-size marble bust of Chauncey M. Depew, which is to be exhibited in London, but is eventually to become the property of the New York Union league.

Gladstone became a law student at Lincoln's inn just sixty-three years ago. He was then a youth of twenty-three, fresh from Oxford, where he had received his bachelor's degree at Christchurch. Mr. Gladstone was never called to the bar, however.

If Francis Schlatter, the divine healer who created such excitement in Colorado and New Mexico, is not now confined in jail in San Bernardino, Cal., on the charge of vagrancy, there is a man in jail who certainly resembles him most remarkably.

Casualties.

During a fire at Brooklyn a chimney fell and Minnie Specht and Harry Bolzen, children, were crushed to death.

The four-story building of the Cambridge, Mass., Improvement company burned. Upward of 2,000 rubber tires were destroyed. Loss, $125,000.

A passenger train was blown from the track half a mile from Colorado Springs, Col., at noon. Fred Van Sicklen of Chicago, editor of Fowler's Truth, a bicycle paper, was badly cut about the head.

Michael Hannigan, brother of David F. Hannigan, whose acquittal of the murder of Solomon H. Mann, the alleged betrayer of his sister, which occurred two months ago, fell to the bottom of the air shaft in the rear of his flat house on Fifty-second street, New York. He was killed.

Dr. A. F. Joseph of Osgood, Ind., had a nightmare. He walked out of his room into the hall and fell headlong down the stairs, breaking several bones and fracturing his skull. He will die. He is 67 years old, and the oldest and best known physician in Ripley county.

The handsome residence of ex-Controller of the Treasury A. C. Matthews, one mile west of Pittsfield, Ill., was destroyed by fire. The house was built by Col. Ross, father-in-law of Mr. Matthews, a number of years ago and cost over $25,000. Mr. Matthews' magnificent library and most of his furniture were saved.

Evil Doings.

The safe of the Leesburg, Ohio, bank was opened by explosives and all the money, amounting to $6,000, was taken away.

The body of Benjamin Kilgore, aged sixty years, who has been missing from Battle Creek, Mich., since Jan. 31, was found hanging to a tree by a hunter.

A fracture in the skull of H. Cranston Potter of Tacoma, whose body was found on the beach near San Francisco leads to the suspicion that he was murdered.

Charles H. Dreher, who killed Bertha Hunicke, his sweetheart, at St. Louis, was found guilty of murder in the first degree. Dreher affected the insanity dodge, but it failed to help him.

James Walker, a negro, and Miss Hallie Shafer, daughter of a wealthy Indiana farmer, were married. The crime is punishable by ten years' imprisonment, and officers are searching for them.

Miss Annie Maud Brewer was sentenced in the superior court at Salem, Mass., to serve seven years in the house of correction for killing her lover, Gideon W. Lattimer, Jr., of Lynn, Dec. 13, 1894.

A scandal developed at Fort Omaha, Neb., when Privates Cavanaugh and Murphy were arrested for prize fighting, and 100 others who witnessed the fight expect to be ordered to the guard house.

A body found on the ocean beach near the Cliff house, San Francisco, has been identified as that of H. O. Potter, a wealthy grain merchant of Tacoma. Mr. Potter was a brother of James Brown Potter and a nephew of Bishop Potter of New York. It is believed to have been a case of suicide.

W. I. Burdett is dying at Sugar Lake, Mo., the result of a Sunday fight. George and Charley Way, brothers, engaged in a fight with the Burdetts, and after a desperate tussle worsted them. The elder Burdett was killed almost instantly, while his son received wounds from which he cannot recover.

Among the second cabin passengers on the steamship La Gascogne, which arrived at New York, a deputy United States marshal recognized a man registered as Leon Istace as Henry Augustine, wanted for robbing the post-office at Paleseul, Luxemberg, Belgium. The prisoner was committed to Ludlow street jail to await the arrival of requisition papers.

Charles Swear, a ten-year-old boy, is at the police station at Omaha, having been picked up on the streets by the police. Steps are being taken to send him to the reform school on the charge of incorrigibility. The boy's father is unknown. His mother is a Salvation Army woman. Some time ago she set out on a mission to convert the heathen in Iowa, and left the boy without a home.

From Foreign Shores.

The sultan has invited the powers to recognize Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria.

Dispatches received in Madrid from Cuba say that 107 insurgents were killed in the recent fighting there.

One of the first projects which will be submitted to the national convention of the Republic of Ecuador which assembles in May will be a commercial treaty with Spain for the construction of a railway from Ibarra to Pallon.

The United States minister, Alexander W. Terrell, is using his influence with the Turkish government in order to procure the necessary escorts and protection for Miss Clara Barton, president of the American Red Cross society, and her assistants, while they are distributing relief to the suffering Armenians.

President Kruger has notified Sir Hercules Robinson, governor of Cape Colony, that he is willing to visit England, according to the suggestion of Joseph Chamberlain, secretary of state for the colonies, provided the subjects of the proposed conference between himself and Mr. Chamberlain are definitely specified beforehand.

Thomas Sexton has declined the chairmanship of the Irish National federation. Mr. Sexton expresses his deep regret that he is unable to accept the proffered honor, and expresses the conviction that no public advantage could be gained by his acceptance, which, under the present circumstances, would subject him to a strain entirely beyond his strength.

Reynold Rost, LL. D., formerly Oriental lecturer in St. Augustine college, Canterbury, secretary to the Royal Asiatic society and librarian to the India office, who retired in 1893 from active duty, is dead in London. He was born in 1822 in Germany and went to London in 1847. He was a member of a number of literary and scientific societies, including the American Oriental society, and was generally recognized as a high authority on Oriental literature.

Miscellaneous.

Tammany had a big banquet and gave Richard Croker a loving cup.

Wood & Robinson, lumber dealers, New York, have assigned. Assets and liabilities about $40,000 each.

Gov. Morton has signed the bill transferring the Palisades to the national government for a national park.

The Bartlett Hardware company and Warner Manufacturing company at Rockford, Ill., were closed on a confession of judgment aggregating $92,000.

Sir Henry Irving, the actor, wasn't allowed to room with his dog at one St. Louis hotel, so he transferred himself, luggage and dog to another.

James McDougall & Co., wholesale clothiers of Montreal, are in financial difficulties. Their liabilities will aggregate $78,000, estimated assets $45,600.

D. L. Bowersmith, for many years with the Ohio State Journal at Columbus as city editor and editor, but lately in the business office, has been taken to an asylum.

At Flemingsburg, Ky., the Exchange bank of David Wilson & Co., assigned to-day. The estimated liabilities are $70,000, with assets of over $100,000.

Executions to the amount of $10,000 have been issued against George Shulmyer, a coal dealer of Lancaster, Pa. His total indebtedness will reach $30,000.

A large number of officers of the Salvation Army from five Western states have arrived in St. Louis to attend the midland conference which is now in progress there.

The joint committee of coal miners and operators, called the committee of ten, appointed to settle wage disputes during the year, went into session at Pittsburg. It is a most important session, as on it depends the wages of the miners in the Pittsburg district and also in five other mining states.

The congregation of a country church northwest of Shelby, Neb., was surprised when Rev. E. W. Cole, who presided over them, deviated from the usual teachings of the United Brethren church and preached that there is no hell, and then severed his connection with the congregation.

The directors of the Wheeling & Lake Erie railroad have elected A. G. Blair of Toledo president of that company. Mr. Blair is a prominent railroad man and coal operator and his election as president of the road is looked upon with favor by all who are interested.

Ex-Judge Edward Cahill of Lansing, Mich., returned from Chicago, where he prepared the articles of incorporation for the Michigan Liquifying Gas company and the Michigan Carbonide company. These companies propose to organize in Michigan with a capital of $1,000,000 each for the manufacture of acetylene gas, a new product of scientific investigation.

A new woman's society at Coloma, Mich., was so unsuccessful in devising means to raise money for charitable purposes that the twenty members offered to work an entire afternoon for 50 cents. A thrifty farmer saw profit in the scheme, and when night came his last year's bean crop had been nicely hand-picked.

THE DRIVER FOUND

MORE EVIDENCE AGAINST JACKSON AND WALLING.

A Colored Man Claims to Have Driven the Surrey in Which Miss Bryan Was Taken to the Scene of the Murder—He Recognizes Walling and Is Certain of Jackson—A Third Man Is Now Wanted.

Cincinnati, Feb. 18.—The strongest link in the chain of evidence against the two murderers of Pearl Bryan has made its appearance. George Jackson, private coachman for Maj. Widdlefield, on McGregor avenue, Mount Auburn, revealed the story. He said that on Friday night, Jan. 31, he was engaged by three unknown men to drive a surrey over the river. One of the men rode on the seat with him and threatened to kill him if he ever said anything about the ride. The other two men were inside with a woman. Arriving at a thicket the men got out, helped the woman out and took her into the bushes. The driver heard suppressed cries of a woman, became frightened and hastened to the city.

George H. Jackson was taken to the jail and picked out Jackson and Walling among thirty other prisoners. He first went to Walling, looked up and down from head to feet, in front and all around him, and said:

"I am sure this is the man who sat on the seat with me." Then he added: "If I could hear his voice I could tell better."

Walling was bid to speak and to repeat the threats that he is alleged to have made to the negro.

The negro said: "That's his voice, only it is a little stronger."

As to Jackson he went around and selected several men that seemed to be about Jackson's size. He said: "I did not see this man except when he got out of the carriage in the darkness, and I only know about his size; bring him up to this other man."

Jackson was brought up by Walling. The negro said: "This looks like the other man. I'd like to hear his voice. I can't be sure of this man; that sounds very much like the voice of the other man who told me to turn the carriage around and who helped the woman out, only it was a great deal harsher."

The negro went with the detectives on the road to where he took those people the night of the murder. The police consider the identification complete as far as Walling is concerned.

More Strong Evidence.

Special circumstances that give weight to the testimony of the negro are the high name and respect he bears among all his employers. He is highly intelligent, has no bad habits, never drinks liquor or uses tobacco, is competent, trustworthy and efficient as an employe, and is an active member of Zion Colored Baptist church. He takes two daily papers and is a man of more than ordinary intelligence.

In his statement he said that he found in the surrey instead of a round hitching weight, a piece of railroad rail about a foot long, while waiting for the return of the two men who had gone away with the girl at the place of the murder. It had two holes through it. A leather strap was fastened to one of these holes. That he used for a hitching weight and then ran away as fast as he could run until he came home. Right here is the great point in the chain of circumstances. It was just precisely such a piece of railroad iron that was wrapped up in Jackson's bloody coat when it was fished out of a sewer catch basin. What emphasizes this evidence is the fact that this coat being wrapped around a piece of railroad iron has never been mentioned in the newspapers.

Detectives Grim and McDermott have found the surrey and gray horse used by Jackson and Walling at Mullen's stables, on Walnut Hills. The colored driver identified the horse and surrey. The vehicle still had the blood stains over its seat. A bloody lead-pencil was found in the bottom of the surrey.

FIRED ON THE BRITISH FLAG.

French Quell a Rebellion in the South Sea Islands.

San Francisco, Feb. 18.—L. Paris Le Claire, late procureur and prosecuting officer for the French government at Papete, Tahiti, brings news of a serious skirmish which took place between the French forces and the natives of Raitoea before he left the islands, early in January. The natives rebelled against French rule and the British flags were raised in the principal villages. Le Claire says a French ironclad proceeded to the scene of the insurrection, and bombarded both villages. No troops were landed, but there was considerable firing from the ship. Guns were brought to bear on the flag masts from which the British flags were flying, and flags and poles were leveled to the ground. There was no disposition to spill blood or harm the natives in the slightest, so no shells were thrown. The flag poles were brought down with solid shot. When this had been accomplished the war vessel returned to Tahiti.

Serious in France.

London, Feb. 18. — The Paris correspondent of the Times telegraphs as follows to that paper: "If the senate stands firm, there are only two alternatives: the resignation of the ministers or the expulsion of the senate by a mob. The latter would mean the superseding of the constitution by a revolutionary convention. The situation is the most delicate we have seen in twenty-five years."

Lamont's Victim.

West Superior, Wis., Feb. 18.—The body of the man found murdered has been identified as that of Newman McMillan, who disappeared some time ago and for whose murder Henry Lamont, now in jail here, has long been suspected. Lamont has been identified as the man who signed for McMillan's trunk in which there was $800.

Senator Pettigrew's bill for the conditional killing of seal in Bering sea will be reported favorably.

HIRSCHFIELD WEDS.

The Montana Banker Takes Another Wife.

St. Paul, Feb. 18.—Aaron Hirschfield, the millionaire banker of Miles City, Mont., was married at the Aberdeen Saturday evening to Mrs. F. Cluxton of Chicago. The ceremony was performed by Judge William Mitchell, of the supreme court. It was private in its nature. Mr. and Mrs. Hirschfield remained in the city until yesterday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock, when they took the overland train on the Northern Pacific road for their future home.

It was not generally known that Aaron Hirschfield had spent so much of his time of late in St. Paul. He arrived in the city Dec. 10 and remained until Jan. 13. During that time he had apartments at the Aberdeen, where Mrs. Cluxton had made her home since early in the summer. Mr. Hirschfield was very ill while in the city, and the best of medical attendance was sought to effect a cure. When he had finally recovered he returned to Miles City. It is understood that all the preliminary arrangements for his marriage with Mrs. Cluxton were made before his departure. She had also been ill. The hope of being benefited by the rigorous climate of Minnesota was what brought her to St. Paul. Chicago had been her home for years. Her mother, Mrs. D'Episy, said to be an intimate friend of Mrs. Potter Palmer, is a woman of enviable social distinction in the Windy City. She is of French extraction, as the name would indicate, and possesses a charming personality. While in Chicago her daughter, the present Mrs. Hirschfield, now perhaps thirty-five years of age, had no difficulty, by reason of her beauty and attainments to hold her own in the social swirl of the great city. It was in Chicago that she met Mr. Hirschfield. He was on one of his frequent business trips. The new Mrs. Hirschfield is a protestant. Mr. Hirschfield about three years ago married Miss Della Hogan. The marriage caused trouble in the Hirschfield family, and Hirschfield left her and tried to secure a divorce in Fargo. He was not successful, and soon afterward Mrs. Hirschfield secured a divorce in Helena and was given $30,000 by Hirschfield on condition that she drop her damage suit against Hirschfield's sister-in-law. He is a Hebrew and very wealthy.

UNDER ARMS.

Militiamen at Frankfort, Ky., Prepare for Trouble.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 18.—The McCreary Guards are under orders and a load of ammunition was taken to their armory. There were rumors that this precaution is in anticipation of trouble in the legislature, or at Newport on account of Jackson and Walling, the murderers of Pearl Bryan, being transferred across the river and on account of the danger of a lynching at Augusta, Ky. While the state officials deny all the rumors, it is generally believed that this action is in anticipation of a lynching at Augusta. At the funeral of Mrs. Laughlin and May Jones to-day, Robert Laughlin broke down. The officers watched him closely and the popular belief is that he assaulted May Jones and was caught by his wife, when a struggle ensued, resulting in his killing his wife and his thirteen-year-old niece and then burning his house to hide the crime. The people do not believe the story that masked robbers killed his wife and niece, assaulted him and fired the house. The neighbors are so indignant that a lynching is expected.

RUNAWAY ELECTRIC CARS.

Frightful Accident Narrowly Averted at Butte.

Butte, Mont., Feb. 18—A frightful accident was averted on the street car line last evening. Two electric ore cars, heavily loaded, got beyond the control of the motorman at the top of a steep, two-mile grade, and rushed down at lightning velocity, meeting a passenger car coming up. The motorman of the latter saw the runaway in time to reverse his car and a chase for life followed. The ore cars overtook the passenger, but the collision was slight, and then the ore cars flew over the track, down grade, around curves, over bridges and high embankments, and crowds of people watching, every moment expected to see the cars leave the track and a dozen people crushed to death, but at the foot of the grade the ore cars jumped the track, throwing Motorman Joe Nelson forward into the passenger car, breaking his left leg in three places. He was the only person seriously injured. The passenger car was soon stopped, and the people in it escaped with a bad scare and a shaking up. Supt. Wathy, who was on the ore cars, was slightly injured while climbing into the passenger car during the flight down grade.

TANDY IS FOUND GUILTY.

He Is Sentenced to Two Years in the Penitentiary.

Jefferson, Wis., Feb. 18.—In the Jefferson county circuit court to-day Douglas H. Tandy of Hewitt, Minn., was sentenced by Judge Bennett to the state penitentiary at Waupun for two years at hard labor, the first day to be spent in solitary confinement. Tandy wept bitterly when sentence was pronounced. He is an attorney about thirty-five years old, and was convicted of embezzlement at Waterloo, Wis. He has a wife and two children who live at Red Wing, Minn., where he is well known.

Carbolic Acid Killed Him.

Lake City, Minn., Feb. 18.—George Watson, Sr., who in a despondent mood swallowed carbolic acid on Tuesday last, with suicidal intent, died early this morning from the effects. He was an old resident of this section and leaves a family.

Ended His Life.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—William H. Hughitt, the twenty-two-year-old son of Marvin Hughitt, president of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad, shot and killed himself at his father's home to-day. The young man, who was a law student at the university at Madison, Wis., had come home owing to illness, and it is supposed to have taken his life while temporarily insane.

As a result of the crisis in France, the cabinet will probably be remodeled this week, two members retiring.

The official notice of the transfer of Beltrami county lands from St. Cloud to Crookston for the purpose of land office business was received at Crookston, and the officers are conferring with those of the St. Cloud office relative to the date when the papers, books and plats may be sent to Crookston. The advertising of filings has already been done to quite an extent for future proofs at St. Cloud, but it is assured that the transfer can be completed in time so as to have a month to spare before the rush of settlers to the Red Lake lands.

BUYS ITS OWN LAND.

Situation of the Site of the Fergus Falls Asylum.

St. Paul, Feb. 16.—State Treasurer Koerner builded better than he knew when he decided to call and place on file in his office all the deeds to the public institutions of Minnesota, as provided for by law. He began this work about two weeks ago, and so far has received about 100 deeds to land purchased by four state institutions. They are the state prison at Stillwater, the St. Peter state hospital for the insane, the St. Cloud reformatory, the Faribault school for defectives and the third hospital for the insane, located at Fergus Falls. With the exception of the latter institution he has found the deeds all regularly issued and vested in the state. The site of the Fergus Falls insane hospital comprises 638 acres. Forty acres of this site, described as the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 27, township 133, range 43, is held under certificates of assignment to the commission. The property is really a portion of the state school lands, and before it becomes legally a portion of the third hospital site it will be necessary for the legislature to make an appropriation for the purchase of this land from the state. The land will have to be appraised in the usual way and sold to the highest bidder. The chances are good, however, that the commission will be the only bidder.

AUDITORIUM TO BE BUILT.

St. Louis Will Make Provisions for the Republican Convention.

St. Louis, Feb. 16.—The committee on hall of the national Republican convention met here this morning. Gen. Powell Clayton of Arkansas, Henry C. Payne (by John W. Ewing, proxy) of Wisconsin and Col. R. C. Kerlus of St. Louis were present. After conferring with the local committee and their architect, Mr. Isaac S. Taylor, and the consulting architect of the national committee, Mr. D. Adler of Chicago, and, carefully examining all of the plans and propositions, decided that while the exposition building was one of the best of its kind in the United States, it was not so constructed as to afford all of the best facilities for the accommodation of the convention, and the seating of 12,000 people so that all could see and hear. They also decided that a wigwam was not desirable, whereupon the local committee generously acceded to the wishes of the hall committee and agreed to build an auditorium, especially designed upon all its appointments to fully meet the requirements of the convention, and to seat not less than 12,000 persons. The location of the convention auditorium is to be left to the local committee of St. Louis, subject to the approval of the hall committee.

MANY TIMES A MILLIONAIRE.

Alleged Unclaimed Bonds Find New Owners.

Winona, Minn., Feb. 16.—Many Winonans will remember C. J. Boardman, who resided in this city for many years. He ran a livery stable here and was an esteemed citizen. He seemed prosperous, but was by no means considered wealthy. He is now situated at Loraine, Ohio, and is today as rich as Monte Cristo, so the story goes. The town where he lives is said to have gone wild over his great luck. It seems that thirty years ago Charles Durkee was territorial governor of Utah. Some $60,000,000 of Union Pacific bonds were assigned to him and were in his possession at his death. These bonds are now in the United States treasury and have for years been marked as unclaimed and owner unknown. The unpaid interest swells the amount to about $100,000,000. Boardman and three others have turned up as sole heirs and claimants, and their title to the wealth is said to be unquestionable and without opposition. Each one will receive $25,000,000.

GRAIN FIRMS GUILTY.

Madelia Farmers Will Take Steps to Recover from a Grain Firm.

Madelia, Minn., Feb. 16.—The Farmers' Warehouse company, which has been robbed of a large amount of wheat in its elevator by some one, at first generally alleged to be the buyer, will continue business. The net losses are $6,000. The directors are some of the best farmers in the community, and have already taken steps to make good the loss. It is the general opinion that some commission firm in the cities is generally responsible, with the inspector of the warehouse, for the sale of stored grain, and steps will be taken for the recovery of some of that so sold. The inspector has made arrangements to cover losses made through him.

Lena Olson's Murderer.

Duluth, Minn., Feb. 16.—A recent letter from a man in New York to Chief of Police Armstrong states that A. A. Austin, the murderer of Lena Olson, the woman who was found on Minnesota Point in the summer of 1894, was in jail at Pomeroy, Ohio. The chief sent Austin's photograph and description and to-day Sheriff Hutchart received a message asking if he would divide the reward with the sheriff of Pomeroy if Austin was caught. The authorities here believe Lena's murderer has at last been located.

Albert Lea Falls in Line.

St. Paul, Feb. 16.—The Albert Lea to-day asked Chairman Caldwell, of the Western Passenger association, for relief authority to meet the competition of the Chicago Great Western and the Wisconsin Central in the matter of arrangements for the G. A. R. encampment. This is the beginning of the end. All other roads will no doubt now come to time.

Chancellor G. E. MacLean.

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 16.—The inauguration of State University Chancellor George E. MacLean, late of the University of Minnesota, which occurred to-day, was one of the most famous and enjoyable events in the history of the Nebraska institution.

Judge Whiteside Dead.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Feb. 16.—Judge Whiteside has expired. Four weeks ago he was accidentally shot in the foot, which resulted in blood poisoning.

MINNESOTA REPUBLICANS.

The Delegate Convention Will Be Held in Minneapolis March 24.

St. Paul, Feb. 15.—The Republican state convention for the selection of four delegates at large to the national Republican convention at St. Louis, and nine Republican electors for this state, will be held in Minneapolis at high noon Tuesday, March 24. The apportionment will be five delegates at large for each county in the state, and one for each 200 votes or major fraction thereof cast for Gov. Nelson in 1894, making a convention of 1,151 delegates. This was decided upon at a meeting of the Republican state central committee at noon to-day. There was no mention of presidential candidates or resolutions in the committee. But among the individual members the talk was in favor of sending a solid Davis delegation to St. Louis, and having no talk of a second choice. The several counties are entitled to representation in the convention as follows: Five delegates at large to be added to the number opposite the name of each county.

CAUGHT IN TRAPS.

Game Commission Seizes 834 Grouse and Prairie Chickens.

Minneapolis, Feb. 15.—A large seizure of game birds, shipped by railroad contrary to the provisions of the state game and fish laws, was made at Minneapolis to-day by Deputy Game Warden Johnson. The lot included sixty-nine and one-half dozen spike-tailed grouse and prairie chickens, nearly all of which were shown by their condition to have been caught alive in box traps and killed afterward by wringing their necks. None of those examined showed the marks of shot. It is supposed they were caught in the northern part of the state. The birds had been shipped to Chicago firms over the Great Northern road, and billed as books and domestic poultry. They were all found in two cars at the Great Northern depot at Minneapolis, and are now held under orders from the state game and fish commission at the warehouse of the Baltimore Packing company. Included in the lot is one consignment to R. E. Cobb of St. Paul.

TO PREVENT POT-HUNTING.

North Dakota Authorities Will Co-Operate With Minnesota.

St. Paul, Feb. 15.—Agent Fullerton, of the state game and fish commission, has received a letter from the private secretary of Gov. Allin of North Dakota, who asks that the authorities of that state be furnished as full information as possible concerning the names of persons who have illegally shipped game from North Dakota towns into Minnesota and the points from which these shipments have been made. He adds to this request the assurance that every possible means will be used to stop the illegal shipment of game of all kinds. Mr. Fullerton is greatly pleased with this evidence of co-operation on the part of the North Dakota authorities, and states that if those of South Dakota, Wisconsin and Montana will show the same disposition the game of the Northwest can be pretty effectually protected.

Close of E. A. U. Convention.

Winona, Minn., Feb. 15.—The grand union of the E. A. U. this morning elected the following officers: W. E. Cee, Winona, chancellor; I. N. Bryant, St. Paul, president; Mrs. Nettie R. Owen, Minneapolis, vice president; J. E. Collins, Lake City, auxiliary; Mrs. F. N. Berthe, Winona, secretary; Mrs. J. V. Morrill, Lake City, treasurer; Miss L. L. Amerland, Wabasha, sentinel; Levi Brown, Winona, watchman; Mrs. Mary Matthews, Minneapolis, chaplain; Miss Mona Case, Minneapolis, warden; H. B. Gras, Northfield, trustee; J. Schmidt, Wabasha, supreme representative; Charles E. Case, Minneapolis, alternate. It convenes at Northfield next year. North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Iowa and Wisconsin were admitted to this jurisdiction.

Ambassador Bayard's Case.

Washington, Feb. 15.—The resolution censuring Ambassador Bayard was briefly touched upon in the foreign affairs meeting to-day. Chairman Hitt stated that he expected to be able to call it up in the house next week and that he would have done so before but for the debate on the bond silver bill. The agricultural appropriation bill will have the right of way after the bond bill, he said and that will be before the house for two or three days.

Pontoon Bridge Sold.

Sioux City, Iowa, Feb. 15.—Arrangements for the sale of the pontoon bridge across the Missouri river at this point, to a Yankton, S. D., company, have been completed. The barges will be taken up the river as soon as the ice goes out in the spring.

Sad End of an Engineer.

St. Paul, Feb. 15.—John B. Grogan, a stationary engineer about forty years of age, was killed by a Duluth passenger train near Hamm's brewery about 11 o'clock this morning.

There was all kinds of grief at Red Lake Falls last Monday night for a while. Two of the young ladies who attended the ball from here found upon arriving that they had left their white kid slippers at home. You may think this was not a serious affair but you would have thought so had you been there.

The term of court just finished was the largest ever held in Polk county. The calendar contained 113 criminal cases and 116 civil cases making a total of 229. Only ten cases went over to the next term of court and the others were disposed of. The term lasted about two months.—Crookston Tribune

One of the saddest accidents that has happened in this vicinity occured last Monday in River Falls in the death of Anton Julin, He was cleaning a gun at home and after drawing the charge put his mouth to the muzzle while a young brother applied a match to the other end, There must have been some baked powder in the barrel for there was a light explosion and the young man dropped dead. He was a young man of good habits industrious and prosperous and his sudden death was a great shock to all of his friends,

Both of our senators and six of our seven representatives in congress voted against the free coinage bill. One would not suspect there is much difference of opinion on this question in Minnesota, Even the seventh district stands solid for a gold basis. Was that what the people wanted? That's what they voted.—Norman County Herald,

The people of Red Lake Falls are to be congratulated on the successful termination of their carnival and ball last Monday evening., Their large hall was well filled with an enthusiastic crowd from all parts of the county. Their hall is one of the best in the county, their music the very best to be procured, their supper was ample even for the large crowd and the gentlemen in charge were courteous and attentive to the wants of their guests. In fact united Red Lake Falls has reason to be proud of their splendid effort to entertain their friends.

There is something facetious in the statement current that the saloonkeepers of East Grand Forks will entertain the members of the Enforcement League of North Dakota during the convention to be held at Grand Forks in March next. While it is possible it is not probable that the saloon men will invite the members of the league across the Ruby to be entertained. Dan Sullivan who has the matter in hand, is too shrewd to allow of such a procedure. The boys will merely pass the hat and the proceeds will be lugged across the bridge into North Dakota and will be presented to the league with the best wishes of the saloon men that the league's efforts to exterminate the blind pigs in North Dakota will—not eventually—but speedily, succeed,—East Grand Forks Courier.

A study of the money question by any person other than those who are blessed with a quantity of the commodity has a depressing effect as it shows that the supply of money is gradually becoming smaller and more concentrated and as all wealth visible and invisible in any country is measured exactly by the amount of money in that country, that if that supply becomes lessened that property is proportionally cheapened and debt and money obligations are accordingly increased and upon this basis the truth of what we see every day is verified that a large amount of property sometimes the accumulation of hard toil and deprivation is sacrificed to satisfy a small debt secured by said property. Then too taxes and other ordinary dues are made greater as they remain fixed while the task of accumulating that amount from the constantly decreasing volume is greatly increased.

Most of wealth accumulated by the mass of humanity consists of goods other than money so when those goods become lessened in value the desire to obtain them is lessened and the impetus of business receives a check,

Some time ago Commissioner Norland made application to Judge Benson to have three children of Hygemus Erickson sent to the state public school at Owatonna, as the mother of the children was dead and the father was not in a position to take proper care of the children. Arrangements were made to have Mr, Norland bring the children down and when he got to St. Hilaire he got a telegram from Judge Benson telling him not to bring the children as he had a letter from the superintendent to the Owatonna school saying that the school was full. Mr, Norland took the the children home and wrote to the aforesaid superintendent enclosing Mr. Benson's telegram. The superintendent wrote Mr. Norland saying he had never written such a letter to Mr. Benson as they had plenty of room at the school. Mr. Benson explained that he had meant the Faribault institute. Last Monday Mr. Norland brought the children here but still the probate judge refused to commit them claiming that Mr. Norland was not the proper party to bring them, notwithstanding that the statute says distinctly that it shall be the duty of the commissioner to look after such children in his district and bring them before the probate court have them committed and take them to the state public school, A deputy was sent to St. Hilaire to serve notice on the parent of the children notwithstanding that the parent had brought the children to St, Hilaire and turned them over to Mr. Norland who had promised him that he would see the children safe at school, Last Saturday the probate judge committed the children and turned the commitment over to Commissioner Kroch to take the children down. Mr. Norland and the county attorney went before Judge Ives and got a peremptory mandamus commanding Mr. Benson to turn the commitment over to Mr. Norland to allow that gentleman to take the children to school. It is needless to say that the probate judge did not attempt to fight the matter any further and Mr. Norland took the children down Saturday evening.—Crookston Tribune.

MINNESOTA

STATE NORMAL

AT

WINONA, MANKATO, St. CLOUD AND MOORHEAD.

These schools are organized for the training of teachers for the public schools of the state.

ORGANIZATION.—Each school comprises two departments—the Normal Department and the Training Department or Model School.

The Normal Department embraces:

(a) An elementary course of two years for teachers of rural district and elementary grades.

(b) An advanced course of five years for teachers of advanced grades.

(c) A professional course of two years to graduates of high schools.

(d) A kindergarden training course (at Winona, St. Cloud and Mankato).

ADMISSION.—Graduates of high schools and and colleges and teachers holding county superintendents' first and second grade certificates are admitted without examination. All others are required to pass an entrance examination.

EXPENSES.—Tuition is free to all who pledge themselves to teach in Minnesota. Text books are furnished at a rental of $3 per year. Provision is made in each school for economical living. The average cost of furnished rooms with board is about $3 per week. The Ladies' Home at St. Cloud offers board, furnished room heat and light at $3 per week. The new dormitory at Moorhead, and the ladies' Home at Winona furnish similar accommodation at a slightly higher rate. Winona accommodation $3.50 per week.

The next school year opens at Winona September 2nd; at Mankato, September 2nd; at St Cloud September 3rd; at Moorhead September 3rd.

Judge Ives formally adjourned court today and the long strain is over. The session has occupied nearly half of each of the months of December January and February and has been remarkable for the amount of fines collected. These during the winter term have aggregated together with the costs the sum of $6-237.51. During the June term they amounted to $3614 10 making a total for the year of $9851.61 while the total expenses of both terms was between seven and eight thousand dollars.—Crookston Times.

IN A HOSPITAL WARD.

It Is Pleasanter to Be One of Many Than In Solitude.

A Wall street broker who had spent six weeks in a big city hospital said: "I have been in the hospital three times, and this visit was the shortest and least tedious of any of them. The fact is I found that I could not get a private room, as I had in previous years, and so I had to go into a common ward, although the idea was very repugnant to me."

"I don't see how a man accustomed to the soft side of everything, as you are, would stand being in a common hospital ward for six weeks," interrupted one of his listeners.

The broker, who looked so sleek and prosperous and well fed that it was difficult to imagine him in a hospital ward and on the same level as a charity patient, said: "I can tell you, however, that I learned one thing this trip that I never knew before—that it is much easier to get well in a ward, where you're one of two dozen patients, than in a private room, where you're all alone and have nothing to distract your thoughts from your own hurts. It's surprising how soon you learn to take an interest in the people about you, even if they are only bricklayers or Italian laborers or hack drivers, and of course the majority of the patients belong to what we call the "lower classes" of society. And in getting acquainted with these poor fellows and listening to their talk you are often able to forget yourself and your own broken leg or cracked skull or whatever misfortune may have befallen you.

For example, if you're in a private room and happen to see a man carried by your door on a stretcher you're just crazy to know who he is and how he got hurt, and it won't do you any good to get your curiosity excited, because neither nurse nor doctor nor orderly will give you the slightest information on the subject. It seems to be against the rules for them to tell anything that they know about the patients. But if you're in a ward there are always two or three men to hobble out to the elevator man and get the whole story from him and then come back and spread the tidings from bed to bed. You've no idea how much better you feel when you are able to keep track of all that's going on around you."

"I suppose you were glad to get out, just the same," remarked one of the company.

"Of course I was, but there were plenty of men in my ward who would have been glad enough to stay. There was one fellow named Maginnis, whose bed was next to mine, and he had been playing possum, as every one of us knew, for six weeks. Just as I was going away Maginnis hobbled slowly down the room, with agony on his face and groans on his lips, and an Irish bricklayer, who had had his leg amputated the week before, called out to him: 'Look out, Maginnis. You're limping on the wrong leg this morning. The doctors will catch you.' And I'll be hanged if the fellow wasn't so broken up that he changed his limp from the right leg to the left before he realized what he was about."—New York World.

Matthew Arnold In Paris.

During his visit to Paris Matthew Arnold made the acquaintance of several distinguished French men of letters, notably among these of Sainte Beuve, les beaux esprits se rencontrent, and the French critic admired the English poet almost as much as the English poet admired the French critic. We see what ensued in the following passage in a letter to his "dearest mother:" "What Sainte-Beuve says of me is charmingly said. I value his praise both in itself and because it carries one's name through the literary circles of Europe in a way that no English praise can carry it." And then he adds, with perfect truth, "Apart from that to any one but a glutton of praise the whole value of it lies in the mode in which it is administered, and this is administered by the first of living critics and with a delicacy for which one would look in vain here."—National Review.

The Spider Tree.

Dr. Welwitsch, who has recently explored the country about Cape Negro in Africa, tells of a curious plant called the spider tree. It grows on windy plains, its stem attaining a diameter of four feet, although it does not exceed one foot in height. It puts out two leaves six or eight feet in length, and these are split by the whiffling of the wind into a number of stiff, narrow ribbons bearing no little resemblance to the legs of a gigantic spider. This resemblance becomes startling when a strong breeze puts the leglike leaves into rapid motion, and the negroes shiveringly exclaim that the great spider is struggling to get loose.

Not on the Chase.

"Walter," called out the indignant guest to the careless attendant, who had spilled some of the toasted cheese on the tablecloth, "I wish you would clean off these Welsh rabbit tracks."—Chicago Tribune.

AN OLD TIME NOVEL.

A pretty girl,
With wavy curl,
An evening party somewhat late,
A homeward walk,
A loving talk,
A kissing tableau at the gate,
A moonlight night,
A hand squeezed tight,
A little reference to papa,
A little kiss,
A little bliss,
A consultation with mamma,
A little church,
"For bad or worse
You take this maid your wife to be,"
A trembling yes,
A loving press,
A little wife to live with me.

Skeletons of Giants.

In one of his recent lectures Professor Osborne of King's college, London, alluded to the recent discovery of an enormous skeleton in one of the caves of Saxony. The bones, which were in a good state of preservation, were those of a man who could not have been an inch under 21 feet in height when living and who had a head almost as big as a bushel basket. Those of the professor's class who were inclined to be rather skeptical on the subject of 21 foot giants instituted a search in the realms of giantology and found plenty of corroborative evidence. They found accounts of 20 giants who have lived since the time of Christ each of whom was over 21 feet in height. The most noted of the lot were the two Roman giants of the sixth century, the brothers Cambanni, whose combined height was 48 feet.

The French giant Ferregus, a nephew of Charlemagne, was 28 feet high, and Donnan, the Irish giant, drowned in a lake on the isle of Man in the year 1307, was 22 1-2 feet in height.—St. Louis Republic.

Fireless Locomotives.

On the line of railway from the heart of the city of Marseilles to the necropolis in the quarter of St. Pierre, a little less than two miles long, about 2,400 feet of which constitute a tunnel, fireless locomotives are employed, these consisting of a cylindrical receiver charged with warm water at a maximum pressure of 227 5-10 pounds per square inch. At the end of a run, as stated in The Railroad Gazette, this drops from 43 pounds to 71 pounds, and the water is then reheated to 203 degrees C., corresponding to 227 5-10 pounds of pressure, by steam from the generators at the central station. The cylindrical warm water receiver is 10 feet by 3 8-10 feet, holding 550 gallons and about 21 cubic feet of steam. The steam from the generators is equally distributed throughout the warm water by means of properly arranged pipes and is condensed after being used in the cylinders in a condenser over the receiver consisting of 1,154 tubes with a cooling surface of 538 square feet.—New York Sun.

Dean Hole's Information.

Dean Hole's book giving his impressions of this country contains some curious inaccuracies. He says, for instance, that in prohibition towns liquor is generally dispensed in teapots and tells about a guest in a hotel who, upon calling for something to drink, was told by the landlord, "You will find a little tap near your dressing table in your room which will put you in communication with the old rye, and you can take what you please for yourself and your friends, as there is a meter on the other side of the wall." It cannot be supposed that this was a personal experience of the good dean, and it looks, therefore, as if some wag had been "stuffing" him.

Giving Him Hope.

The pretty girl was lavishing a wealth of affection on her mastiff, and the very soft young man was watching her.

"I wish I were a dog," he said languishingly.

"Don't you worry," she replied. "You'll grow."—London Tit-Bits.

Philosophers have done wisely when they have told us to cultivate our reason rather than our feelings, for reason reconciles us to the daily things of existence. Our feelings teach us to yearn after the far, the difficult, the unseen.—Bulwer.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of five hundred and eighty-seven dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice, upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Mary A. Holuvik and Hans M Holuvik her husband mortgagors, to Security Trust Company of Nashua N. H. mortgagee, bearing date the 17th day of December 1890 and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota, on the 19th day of December 1890, at 2:30 o'clock p. m in book 5[illegible] of mortgages, on page 112. Which said mortgage together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Security Trust Co. of Nashua N. H mortgagee to Mrs. Sarah D Cooper by written assignment dated on the 7th day of January 1891 and recorded in the office of the Register of deeds on the 24th day of January 1891 at 8:45 o'clock a. m., in Book 56 of mortgages on page 81 and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said Mortgage, viz:

The north west quarter of Section 18 in Township One hundred and Forty-seven in Range Forty-five in Polk County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Polk County at the front door of the Court House in the city of Crookston in said County and state, on the 8th day of June 1895 at 10 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and fifty dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said Mortgage in case of foreclosure; and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Nervous

People wonder why their nerves are so weak; why they get tired so easily; why they do not sleep naturally; why they have frequent headaches, indigestion and

Nervous Dyspepsia. The explanation is simple. It is found in that impure blood feeding the nerves on refuse instead of the elements of strength and vigor. Opiate and nerve compounds simply deaden and do not cure. Hood's Sarsaparilla feeds the nerves pure, rich blood; gives natural sleep, perfect digestion, is the true remedy for all nervous troubles.

How to Buy a Carriage.

The great need of the times is a condition whereby the producer and consumer may deal with each other without the intervention of the middle man. The common carrier should be the only middle man. The Elkhart Carriage and Harness company, of Elkhart, Ind., deals directly with the consumer. Their goods are shipped anywhere for examination before sale. Every carriage, every set of harness, every article sold, warranted. One hundred styles of carriages, ninety styles of harness and forty-one styles of riding saddles. Send for their 112 page catalogue. This concern does an extensive business throughout the United States.

Bulgaria was formerly Volgarja, so called from the Volsei inhabiting it.

A New Postoffice.

The United States government has established a branch office in the great seed establishment of the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis. So large and extended is the trade of the Salzer Seed Co. that the government for their own convenience to promptly expedite mail matter, located an office in their mammoth buildings. The editor is told that Salzer's great plant, seed and grain catalogue is mailed to any one upon receipt of 5 cents' postage, by addressing them at La Crosse, Wis.

Very Awkward Indeed.

This is precisely the kind of mistake a man makes if he "turns out" on the wrong side of the road when a vehicle comes toward him. No less absurd is the error of the individual who takes drastic medicines to relieve his liver. That organ is on the right side, and the road to its relief is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a medicine also adapted to the relief of dyspepsia, constipation, kidney and rheumatic ailments and malaria.

BROWN'S AFFINITY.

JUDGING from appearances, you would never have thought that Mr. Elliot Brown was the poet who wrote the exquisite verse which appeared occasionally in the periodicals. He did not wear a Byron collar or flowing neckscarf, nor were his locks left to flow in luxurious profusion about his shoulders. In point of fact, he had no luxurious profusion of hair to flow, being considerably bald, in consequence of a bad habit he had contracted of wearing his hat in his counting-room.

Short and decidedly stout, without the slightest tinge of melancholy in his expression, he did not have one outward sign of being a poet, yet proved he was a true one by writing only when his muse fairly thrust the pencil between his fingers, and what he then produced was well worth reading.

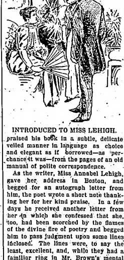
Being a country-bred man, he sung mostly of rural scenes, of songs of birds, the changing seasons, the wild flowers' beauty and kindred subjects, and, coming direct from the heart as his verses did, with their charming wild flavor and the breeziness of hill and field breathing through every line, no wonder they appealed to the heart and touched it as more studied and artificial poetry, be it ever so fine, can never do.

At the age of 45, having amassed a comfortable fortune in the banking business, he retired and gave himself up to the true enjoyment of life with his wife and family, the latter consisting of two young sons and a daughter of 19. About this time he began a small volume, which he called "Rural Treasures," which he finished in six months' time, working only, as has been said, when muse-inspired. The little volume attained an instant popularity, which surprised its publishers, who did not understand how it had caught the public's favor.

But many a city man, who had been born and raised in the country, knew and understood the charm of the book, and wiped away the tears which started unbidden at the memories awakened by such simple verses as "Wading in the Stream," "The Old Schoolhouse," and "The Early Violet."

After its publication Mr. Elliot Brown's mail became so heavy, between autograph letters, flattering friends and begging epistles, he laughingly declared that he must hire an amanuensis. To earn money for a pet charity his daughter Emily eagerly begged for the position and spent the early morning hours attending to his correspondence in her father's handsome library.

During a temporary absence of his young amanuensis, Mr. Brown again attended to his mail and one day found a letter which particularly pleased him. He was above plain, unadulterated flattery, but this letter, while flattering, praised his book in a subtle, delicate veiled manner in language as choice and elegant as if borrowed—as perchance it was—from the pages of an old manual of polite correspondence.



INTRODUCED TO MISS LEHIGH.

As the writer, Miss Annabel Lehigh, gave her address in Boston, and begged for an autograph letter from him, the poet wrote a short note thanking her for her kind praise. In a few days he received another letter from her in which she confessed that she, too, had been scorched by the flames of the divine fire of poetry and begged him to pass judgment upon some lines inclosed. The lines were, to say the least, excellent, and, while they had a familiar ring in Mr. Brown's mental ear, as if he had read something very like them in some long forgotten volume, he could not believe the gentle writer guilty of plagiarism, and wrote commending her verses.

This called forth so immediate an answer, with more poems to be criticised, that Mr. Brown was startled, and yet, having fallen into the correspondence, scarce knew how to extricate himself, so at the end of the month, the limit set for his daughter's visit, he had quite a packet of letters from Miss Annabel.

Singularly enough, he had neglected telling his wife of the affair, but determined to take Emily into his confidence, especially as he knew she would discover the matter for herself. The determination was strengthened by the receipt of a lengthy missive from Miss Annabel, in which, after declaring that her heart told her that he was not only young and handsome, but unmarried and waiting yearningly for his affinity, she boldly declared herself that affinity and bade him fly to her arms.

Mr. Brown had not expected any such complication to arise and was truly alarmed. It was, therefore, with a strong feeling of relief that he shifted his burden onto Miss Emily's shapely shoulders. She being blessed with a keen sense of humor, saw only the ludicrous side of the affair, blamed her father just as little as he deserved for falling into the net spread for his unwary feet and promised to help him out.

"Deal gently with her, dear," he begged. "She is evidently young and romantic and has given too free reins to her fancy."

"Trust me not to be rude, my dear father," replied Emily, and betook herself to her pleasant task, while Mr. Brown, with a lightened heart, went down to Tiffany's to buy an appropriate reward for her kind services.

This is what she wrote:

"My Dear Miss Lehigh: My father has asked me to answer your letter, as he is on the point of departing, against medical advice, for the country to witness the marriage of his favorite grandchild. Being quite feeble and suffering with a distressing form of gout, he will, therefore, be unable now or at any future time to accept your kind invitation to fly to your arms.

"Trusting you will succeed in finding a more available affinity in the near future, I am, sincerely,

"EMILY L. BROWN."

A few weeks later Mr. and Mrs. Brown made a visit to Boston and at a reception the poet was introduced to Miss Annabel Lehigh, in whom he discovered a maiden who, while not yet in the sere and yellow leaf, had passed the age when marriage, as the statisticians tell us, may be regarded as an acute possibility. They were mutually shocked, but Miss Annabel, recovering first, was about to address some cutting remarks to the poet, when Mrs. Brown appeared on the scene, and, fearing from his expression that her husband was about to have an attack of faintness, to which he was subject, hurried him into the open air.

Miss Lehigh was left to gaze with scorn at the retreating form of him whom she fondly hoped might be her affinity.

Whether she ever found the right one Mr. Brown never learned. But one thing he did learn, and that was that Miss Annabel had culled her poetic gems, making a few changes of words, from an early volume of Tennyson's poems.

Gallery of Human Curios.

The initial steps have been taken in an enterprise which, when completed, will give the American Museum of Natural History a collection unique of its kind. The idea is to have model figures representing at least one type from every race of human beings on the globe. Such a vast undertaking will, of course, take years to consummate and can only be carried on by degrees.

The old Wood hall, where specimens of American wood are shown, will contain the specimens. Dr. Boaz, professor of anthropology to the museum, has already plaster casts and measurements of faces, hands and feet of a number of Indian tribes of the North Pacific coast and a few models of some of the British Columbia Indians will be ready next week. Special attention will be paid to the aborigines of this continent and there are now nine museum attaches busy taking measurements of aboriginal tribes west of the Rockies.

Plaster casts will be taken of the faces, hands and feet and photographs of the whole figure, full face and profile, and exhaustive measurements will be made of the physique. With these data to work upon a plaster figure will be cast and then clothed in the costume of the native represented. The figures will not be shown merely standing up but groups will be designed showing the mode of life and occupation of the different races.—New York World.

Parrots Spread Consumption.

Paris is troubled by the fear that parrots spread consumption. Some parrots brought from Brazil died two years ago of a mysterious disease resembling consumption, and recently several persons at Versailles and Maissons-Lafitte have died of what seems to be the same disease.

HINTS OF ALL SORTS.

A dish of water placed in a hot oven where pies, cakes, or puddings are being baked will prevent them from scorching.

Old leather can be made to look like new by applying a coat of French polish with a camel's hair brush.

The skin of fruit should never be eaten, not because they are not palatable or digestible or are unhealthful in themselves, but on account of the danger arising from microbes, which may have penetrated into the covering of the fruit.

A cement for mending broken glass or china is made by dissolving half an ounce of gum arabic in a wineglassful of boiling water and adding enough plaster of Paris to make a thick paste. Apply it with a brush to the edges of the broken parts. Hold the pieces carefully together until the cement has hardened sufficiently for them to adhere. If the article to be mended is broken in several pieces, do not attempt to cement a second piece before the first has thoroughly hardened.

A tested cough mixture recipe comes from an English lady. It is palatable and very effectual. Boil three large lemons in water seven minutes, drain off the water and slice the lemons as thin as possible. Put them in an earthen bowl with one pound of the best brown sugar and stand the bowl on the stove until the mixture is at boiling point. Then draw to the back of the stove and let the mixture simmer three hours. Remove from the fire, and when it has stood half an hour add small tablespoonful of oil of sweet almonds. It is to be used warm. Stir and take in teaspoonful doses as long as needed.

People who are susceptible to the cold should make a point of wearing loose clothing in cold weather.

If you have butter that is not entirely sweet put it in a porcelain dish with a little salt and a tiny piece of soda, place over the fire and bring to a boil. Turn it into a stone jar and set it in a cool place. The butter will be found perfectly sweet and not too salt for cooking. The impurities will settle to the bottom of the jar.

To make a wax for polishing hardwood floors cut one pound of beeswax into small pieces, put them in a dish and place it over the fire in a pan of hot water. Allow the wax to melt and then stir in three pints of turpentine. When the ingredients have thoroughly blended, place some of the wax on a woolen cloth and rub it on the floor, treating one board at a time and rubbing lengthwise. Then cover a heavy brush with flannel and with it rub the floor until it is perfectly smooth. It is usually the case that some parts of the floor are subject to more wear than others. When the polish has worn off in these spots warm the wax and apply to the worn places, and then polish.

In cooking meats the water is thrown away without removing the grease, or the grease from the dripping-pan is thrown away.

Hurrah for Pennsylvania.

The farmers of Pennsylvania are to be congratulated. M. M. Luther, East Troy, Pa., grew over 207 bushels Salzer's Silver Mine Oats on one measured acre. Think of it! Now there are thirty thousand farmers going to try and beat Mr. Luther and win $200 in gold! and they'll do it. Will you be one of them?

Then there is Silver King Barley, cropped on poor soil 116 bus. per acre in 1895. Isn't that wonderful—and corn 230 bus. and potatoes and grasses and clovers, fodder plants, etc., etc. Freight is cheap on seeds to all points east, west, north or south.

If you will cut this out and send it with 10c postage to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., you will receive their mammoth catalogue and ten packages grains and grasses, including above oats, free.

EPITAPHS ON GLASS.

A New Kind of Tombstone Adopted by Pennsylvanians.

A glass tombstone is certainly something unique. Such a grave marker stands in but one place in the United States, and that is in the cemetery overlooking the city of Kittanning. It has but recently been set up there over the grave of Mrs. Elizabeth Pepper of Ford City by her son, Matthias Pepper. The Kittanning cemetery possesses many natural and artificial beauties. It has been handsomely laid out, with winding walks, stately trees and ornamental shrubbery, and in it are many pretentious monuments. Not one of the piles of marble and granite attracts so much attention as the piece of polished glass, with its clear inscription, which stands on a gentle slope falling slowly from the hilltop. A description of this tomb glass was given by Judge Joseph Buffington, who is a resident of Kittanning. Before his appointment to the bench of the United States district court he was counsel for the Pittsburg Plate Glass company, which made the glass at its Ford City works.

Mathias Pepper, who had the glass set up, is assistant superintendent at the Ford City factory. The piece used as a grave memorial is a part of a large plate which was made of unusual thickness for the construction of circular panes to cover the portholes of ocean steamships. The practical indestructibility of glass was the quality which suggested to Mr. Pepper its use in the cemetery. Marble and granite seem to many to be almost eternal in their hardness, but they are far from it, and not at all to be compared with glass. Wind and rain, heat and cold have their effects on stone of any kind, and finally wear away the hardest granite and cause it to crumble. Go into any old graveyard, where stones were erected more than 100 years ago, and it will be found to be the exception where all the lettering on the monuments can be made out. The stone has crumbled and the outlines have been obliterated. No effect is produced by the weather on glass. The Pepper monument is of plate glass one inch thick, a foot and a half wide, and four feet high. It stands in a mortise cut into a cube of sandstone. The top of the glass is arched. The lettering on it is made by the "sand blast" process, and is distinct. The monument bears the inscription:

"'In Memory of Elizabeth Pepper, of Ford City. Died February 4, 1892. Aged 77 Years.

"Also William Pepper, Husband of the Above. Died ——. Age ——."

From this inscription it may be inferred truly that William Pepper is still living. The Peppers are of English birth, and came to Ford City years ago directly from the Great Biltingham glass works in London.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

GODFREY'S TANKARD.

Relic Connected with the London Plague Sold at Auction.

A curious historical relic was sold by an auctioneer recently in London. It is the large tankard of silver presented by King Charles II. to Sir Edmund Berry Godfrey for his valuable services during the plague and the fire of London, for which he received the honor of Knighthood in 1666. The tankard, which is of plain silver, has a hinged cover, and weighs nearly 30 ounces. Its front is engraved with the royal arms and the crest of the recipient, together with inscriptions in Latin, and engravings of scenes connected with the fire, which are still in excellent preservation. The engraving of the pest-house men carrying corpses to the dismal plague pit, and that of the crowded blocks of houses, surmounted by flames, are very quaint and curious. Sir Edmund, who was born in 1621, at Sellinge, in Kent, was a timber merchant, possessing wharves at Dowgate City and at Charing Cross. He prospered, became Justice of the Peace for Westminster and member of parliament for Winchilsea. In history, as no reader of Macauley and Green will need to be told, his name is most famous in connection with his mysterious murder, which was popularly attributed to the zeal with which he had devoted himself to unraveling the alleged popish plot. His body was found in a ditch near Primrose Hill, face downward, and penetrated by his sword, under circumstances which precluded the idea of suicide or robbery. The excitement caused by this still mysterious event is indicated by the fact that when the funeral procession left the city with great pomp and pageant for the burial ground at St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, it was preceded by seventy clergy and followed by upward of 1000 persons of distinction.—Boston Herald.

A Colonial Lady's Wardrobe.

Mistress Jane, widow of Cuthbert Fenwick, of Fenwick Manor, legislator, councilor, commissioner, died in 1660, leaving a will through which we catch glimpses of the wardrobe and toilet of a colonial lady of the period. To her step-daughter, Teresa, she leaves the little bed, the mohair rug and the yellow curtains, besides her taffeta suit and her serge coat; all her fine linen, her hoods and scarfs "except the great one," and her three petticoats—the tufted Holland one, the new serge and the spangled one. To her own three boys she gives that "great scarf" and all her jewels, plate and rings, except her wedding-ring, which goes to Teresa, and to each a bed and a pair of cotton sheets. To her step-sons, Cuthbert and Ignatius an ell of taffeta; to her negro maid, Dorothy, her red cotton coat; and to Esther, the new maid, all the linen of the coarser sort. To Thomas, the Indian, two pairs of shoes and a match coat, and to Thomas' mother three yards of cotton. To the Rev. Francis Fitzherbert, a hogshead of tobacco annually for five years; and to her slave, William, his freedom, provided he pay a hogshead every year to the church; and to the church, the same William, "to be a slave forever if he shall ever leave her communion;" for, had not her beloved brother, William Eltonhead, and many of her dearest friends, "died by the bloody fangs of Puritan wolves?"—Century.

One thing parents should never do is to discuss the failings of their children before the little one. The next worst thing is for one parent to attempt to punish the child and the other parent protest against it. Either action will damage the respect of the child for one or the other of its parents, and if there is one thing more than another that parents want to preserve, it is their dignity before their children. A child who gets the idea that one parent is at variance with the other on the question of discipline will make both unhappy and render itself decidedly objectionable by playing off one parent against the other. If you want to have any harmony in the family, get together on the question of disciplining the children, at least in their presence—and then, if you want to quarrel on methods, do it in the privacy of your own apartments, where you can have it out without lowering yourselves in the eyes of the children.

THE NEWS RESUME.

DIGEST OF THE NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

A Comprehensive Review of the Important Happenings of the Past Week Culled From the Telegraph Reports—The Notable Events at Home and Abroad That Have Attracted Attention.

The Nation's Capital.

Eight new ships, it is proposed, will be completed for the navy before July 1.

A new recruiting system for the army, aided by the hard times of the last few years, has resulted in bringing the enlisted strength up to its maximum.

The postoffice department has issued a general order directing all division superintendents of the railway mail service to stop the practice of depositing mail matter in a postal car unless there is a clerk in the car to receive it.

James H. Mulligan, consul general to Samoa, who is in Washington, said: "I fully agree with those who hold that the United States ought never to have become a party to the existing government in Samoa, and ought to withdraw from it at as early a day as practicable. The Germans are the only people who benefit by it."

People Talked About.

Ex-Gov. D. Robinson of Massachusetts suffered a shock of apoplexy yesterday, and is in a critical condition.

Mrs. Stewart Davis, aged 87, for sixty years a resident of Michigan, died in Ovid township, near Coldwater.

Rev. J. D. McDonnell, pastor of St. Andrews church, Toronto, and probably the best known Presbyterian divine in Canada, is dead.

Slason Thompson, until recently editor-in-chief of the Chicago Evening Journal, has accepted a position on the editorial staff of the Evening Post.

Dr. Joseph Jones, surgeon general of the United Confederate veterans, ex-president of the board of health and one of the leading physicians in the South, died at New Orleans, aged 63 years.

Lucie Freisinger, one of the leading ladies of the Irving Place Theater company, died in New York yesterday of heart disease. Miss Freisinger was twenty-five years old, and was born in Vienna. She was an actress of talent.

Judge Richard H. Clark, one of the most eminent judges on the superior court bench in Georgia, was found dead in his room at his hotel at Atlanta. For more than half a century he has been prominent among the foremost men of Georgia.

Dr. J. L. Snyder, principal of the Allegheny city schools, has accepted the presidency of the Michigan agricultural college at Lansing. The Michigan college is classed as the oldest and one of the wealthiest in the country, having an income of $100,000 a year and land worth $1,000,000 undisposed of.

Miss Elizabeth B. Walling of Cambridge, Mass., has written a two-act comedy entitled "Master Shakespeare Outwitted," which will be given by the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York on Feb. 18. A troupe of strolling players are represented and the bard of Avon himself, who is fooled by a sixteenth century maid.

John A. Russell, on the staff of the Detroit Evening News, but who is at present temporarily with the Chicago Journal, was unanimously elected secretary of the Detroit chamber of commerce. The report of the nominating committee, which selected him from a list of twenty-five candidates, was very complimentary.

Count Manuel Jose Irarrazaval, aged 60, wealthy and a leader of the Conservative party in Chile, died in St. Vincent's hospital, New York. He went to that city for medical treatment, but died before he could take advantage of American medical skill. Had he lived he certainly would have been the next president of Chile.

Accidental Happenings.

The big oil cloth plant of Farr & Bailey at Camden, N. J., was almost destroyed by fire.

The machine shops of the Mexican International railroad at Cuidad, Porfirio Diaz, Mex., were burned. Loss, $200,000.

Fire broke out at the Beta Theta Phi fraternity house at State college, Bellefonte, and before help could arrive the handsome building was entirely destroyed. The students saved nothing.

By the explosion of a boiler at the world's fair site in Jackson Park, Chicago, to-day five employes of the Columbian Salvage company were terribly scalded. The boiler was near machinery hall.

The engine of a passenger train near Ludlow, Vt., was derailed and three coaches were thrown down a fifty-foot embankment. About a dozen persons were injured, four of them seriously.

The Oxford Sanitarium and Turkish bath house at St. Louis burned. John Silvey, a Chicago travelling man, who was lying helpless in the sanitarium, was rescued with considerable difficulty. Loss, $50,000.

Martin Bell, 25 years old, was killed at Linden, O. T., in a shocking manner. He was employed at a saw mill and was carrying a piece of timber. When near the large saw he tripped and fell forward, his body coming in contact with the saw. His head was completely severed.

News has been received at Fort Worth, Tex., of the death by prairie fire of three Mexicans near Laguna Corrados, Hartley county. The men went into camp and while asleep the grass became ignited by sparks from their campfire, and before they could escape they were so badly burned that all died in a short time.

Crimes and Criminals.

Judge John S. Winter charged the grand jury at Montgomery, Ala., to thoroughly investigate the lynching of a negro who killed a policeman.

John Vaughn, a white resident of Rubey, McLean county, Ky., was fatally shot by Henry Shelan and robbed of $137.

Robert Williams, a negro, killed Police Officer Suggs at Montgomery, Ala., while resisting arrest. He was caught and lynched.

Fred Samson, a young man from Decatur, Ill., was found dead in a hotel at Los Angeles, Cal. It is thought he committed suicide by swallowing morphine.

Elmer Sheets, aged 26 years, son of Henry Sheets, who owns a large dairy, was murdered at Muncie, Ind., and his body was found beside the Lake Erie & Western tracks.

At St. Louis Barbara Kossel, a pretty German girl about 19 years old, shot and killed John Rohlfing, her lover, and then fired a bullet into her own brain, dying instantly.

Capt. John M. Allen of Manchester, Mass., was brought into court to answer an indictment charging him with embezzling on six counts. He pleaded not guilty, and bail was fixed at $30,000.

Henry S. Fox, Jr., son of Banker Fox of Houston, Tex., was acquitted of the murder of his mistress, Daisy Douglas, whose proper name was Daisy Trelkeld, and a native of Kansas City.

The New York grand jury refused to indict the Fitzgerald boys, William and James, who were rearrested on Saturday on alleged new evidence, charging them with the murder of Max Eglan, in the deaf and dumb institution on East Sixty-seventh street.

A mob of fifty men compelled the jailer at Monticello, Ky., to surrender his keys and took Fount Martin and Jim Straxtill, accused of barn burning, from their cells. When five miles out in the country they hanged Martin, but Straxtill made his escape.

News just received at Tallalah, Ga., of the killing of Joseph Crumpton, a farmer, and his daughter, Miss Sallie Crumpton, in the mountainous region of Bahon county. Crumpton was suspected of having reported an illicit still to the revenue authorities.

Brockway, aged 74, the patriarch of counterfeiters, will probably die in prison. On the first day of the hearing of evidence at New York the prosecution pieced together in the United States district court a story which seemed to settle his fate beyond question.

Sheriff Carter has gone to Minneapolis to get two men who were selling spectacles in the neighborhood of Mrs. Winter's house at Sibley, Iowa. Maud Strawn is supposed to have been killed. Their business card was found on a table in the house where the girl's body was found.

Foreign Gossip.

British intrigues have been resumed in South Africa.

At Ottawa, Ont., Lord and Lady Aberdeen gave the most elaborate fancy dress ball in the history of viceregal functions.

The marquis of Salisbury has written a letter saying that there is no truth in the report that the Berne tribunal has ordered the sale of the Delagoa Bay railroad.

A second grand battle of flowers took place on the promenades at Nice. The prize winners included Miss Beardsley of New York and Miss North of Chicago.

The English courts have found against the White Star line steamer Germanic as a result of her collision with the steamer Germanic, as a result of her collision with the steamer Cambroso, in the Mersey last December.

Germany has signed an agreement with the Chilian government under which she agrees to accept $75,000 in settlement of all claims advanced by German subjects who suffered loss or wrong during the revolution of 1891 in Chili.

The officials of the London foreign office confirm the newspaper reports saying that a detachment of British marines, among others, have been landed at Chemulpo and sent to Seoul, capital of Corea, in order to protect the British legation.

The sum which the Dominion government will ask parliament to grant for purposes of national defense will be $3,000,000. The new rifle with which the militia will be provided is the Lee-Enfield, combining the Enfield barrel and the Lee magazine.

The seventy-eighth anniversary of the independence of Chili was quietly celebrated in that country. The budget for the coming year contemplates an expenditure of more than $150,000,000. For the war department, $13,064,456 is needed; navy, $8,896,234; public works, $27,617,026, and other expenses, $100,903,607.

Otherwise.

The annual Tuskegee negro conference will be held at Tuskegee, Ala., March 5.

The Pacific Mail Panama contract has not been a success, and plans are now on foot to bring it to a short stop.

At the First Assembly District Republican convention at Utica, N. Y., C. W. Hackett, chairman of the state central committee, was indorsed for United States senator.

The Anchor line steamship Scotia, from Naples, Jan. 21, for New York, and about whose safety there has been much anxiety, put in at Halifax, N. S., short of coal.

Buffalo will have new stockyards. A company is being organized, and soon will be incorporated, to build a better system of yards on land adjacent to the existing yards. One million dollars will be invested.

Three hundred mining men and prospectors have left Spokane, Wash., for Colville Indian reservation, in anticipation of the president signing the bill extending the mineral laws to the north half of the reservation.

At his laboratory in New York, Dr William T. Morton, who has been conducting elaborate experiments with Roentgen rays, made a practical application of them to surgery's aid in trying to get pictures of the deformed or broken limbs of children.

The Anchor line freighter Elysia which sailed from New York for Genoa, put back to port on account of insubordination of her crew, it being claimed the cargo had been improperly stowed. A new crew will be procured.

THE TURK PRAISED

FOR THE RECENT MASSACRES OF ARMENIANS.

Turkish Commissioners Visit the Scenes of the Recent Massacres, Express Their Pleasure to the Turks, but Ask Them to Keep the Peace—Armenians Are Threatened With Death if They Cause Further Trouble.

(Correspondence of Associated Press.)

Constantinople, Feb. 6.—It will be remembered that the sublime porte, soon after the massacres in this country, sent out commissioners to investigate into recent disturbances and took measures for quieting the country. One group of commissioners went to Erzeroum and the other entered the country at Sassoun and came to Sivas. This commission from the interior did its work very rapidly, spending only a few days in each of the principal cities on their route. The day after their arrival they summoned before them a number of the leading men, Moslems and Christians. These were admitted to the presence of the commissioners separately, first the Moslems, afterward the Christians. Report says that the commissioners said to the Moslems: "We did not expect so much of you; but now you have done it, never mind. Henceforth keep the peace."

When the Christians were admitted the commissioners received them standing and at once began to read an address reciting the benefits the Christians had received during the reign of the beneficent sultan, Abdul Hamid Khan, and the perfidious conduct of the Armenians who had started newspapers and sent men to Chicago and Washington to agitate and stir up the nations against their government. In conclusion the address said: "Hereafter if either Turks or Armenians stir up trouble there will be no more imprisonments, but the death penalty will be visited upon such offenders."

After reading the address Abdul An Pasha began to address the Christians in a much more violent strain. He said if the Armenians should again begin to agitate, not even the name of Armenian would be allowed to remain; they would all be blotted out. Drawing himself up to his full height and stretching out his arm like a sword, he said: "What we gained, we gained with blood, and when we give up this morsel we will give it up with blood, blood, blood."

"Converted" Them.

Another fact of interest is the sending out of officials to enroll in the government lists the names of Christians who have become Moslems. Multitudes have been forcibly converted to Islam. I do not mean simply that they have been obliged to choose between becoming Moslems and perishing by the sword, but that they have been bound or held while the rite of circumcision was performed without their consent. I know of one case in which an aged priest was tied to his own door and circumcised, while in other villages Christians begged to be killed, and their Turkish neighbors said to them: "No, we want you to till the fields. We will make you Moslems," and they circumcised the Christians of the place by force.

The carrying off of Christian girls and women still continues. In the city of Palu Turks carry off girls, keep them a few days and return them dishonored. The same is done in many other places. In one of the Arabkir villages eight girls of the place are imprisoned in Turkish harams. Their friends hear their cries but can do nothing to help them. The destruction of the Armenians beggars description. Men who were wealthy in October were begging for bread in November. Villages were pillaged of every scrap of food and clothing. It is estimated there are between 30,000 and 100,000 people in extreme destitution.

MUTINY IN THE ARMY.

Ballington Booth Will Not Recognize London Authority.

New York, Feb. 25.—Ballington Booth, who was relieved of his command in America, appeared at Army headquarters last night with a number of other officers, none wearing uniforms. After a conference lasting several hours Mr. Booth issued a statement in which he says:

"I hereby declare, on Mrs. Booth's and my own behalf, that we cannot under any conditions whatever accept proposals from London, nor enter again under the authority or government of international headquarters in England."

Jameson Reaches England.

London, Feb. 25.—The steamship Victoria, with Dr. Jameson aboard, arrived at Davenport to-day from Port Natal. Two hundred and fifty of Dr. Jameson's men have arrived in London and have been sent to their homes. In spite of the secrecy which it was sought to maintain as to the time of their arrival, a great crowd gathered to receive them and greeted them with acclamation. These men assert that the Boers lost 280 men killed and wounded in the fight at Krugersdorp in which Dr. Jameson was captured.

Death of Judge Cochran.

Toledo, Ohio, Feb. 25.—Judge T. H. Cochran, president of the state board of commerce and secretary of the Toledo chamber of commerce, died last night. Judge Cochran was prominent in judicial and military affairs, and was one of the organizers of the Society of the Army of Virginia. He leaves two sons—Witt K., a newspaper worker, and George D., both of St. Paul, the latter being connected with the Northern Pacific road.

Safe in Port.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 25.—The ferry steamers Promise and Fortune have reached Detroit with the disabled car ferry Shenango No. 2, which they had taken from her perilous position in the Lake Erie ice fields. The crew report the ice in Lake Erie very heavy, and the task of towing the big car ferry through the ice was extremely slow and tedious owing to her great width. The round trip from Detroit occupied five days, although the distance is only seventy miles. The Shenango was taken to dry dock.

MYSTERY IS SOLVED.

Colliers, W. Va., Feb. 25.—People are much excited in this vicinity over a recent find, which, it is claimed, clears up a mystery of thirty-two years' standing—the remains of four human beings having been discovered in an abandoned coal mine a mile east of here. David Snyder has explored the old mine, which has not been worked since the sixties, and discovered the human bones. One of the skeletons was sitting upright against a ledge. Beside this skeleton was found a flask containing a note that explained the mysterious disappearance of four men thirty-two years ago. The notes were written in pencil but well preserved. They read as follows:

"Nov. 2, 1863.—Should this ever reach the outside world let it be known that we, John Ewing, Ben Ayers, Tom Ackelson and Joe Obney are prisoners here owing to the caving-in of the mine. We are deserters and were in hiding here when the mine caved in. Food and water all gone. We are doomed, as no one outside is aware of our whereabouts. This is about the eighth day of imprisonment.

"Nov. 4.—John Ewing and Tom Ackelson have just killed Ben Ayers and are eating him. I have already eaten my boot leg. The water in the mine is terrible. Our oil is getting scarce, air becoming foul. I only know the day of the month by my watch.

"Nov. 6.—Ewing has just killed Ackelson; cut off one of his feet and is eating it and dancing around and flourishing his dirk knife like a maniac.

"Nov. 7.—I am now alone with the dead. I had to kill Ewing in self-defense. I have just eaten my other boot leg. Am sleepy. Good by. I enclose this note in this flask to preserve it, if possible, so that if ever found, our sad fate will be shown.

—"Joseph Obney."

WON'T HAVE THE BELT.

Fitzsimmons Renounces the Championship.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 25.—An Associated Press representative had a talk with Fitzsimmons about the Corbett challenge on the way in from the battleground, and this is what he had to say about it:

"I shall completely ignore that fellow Corbett. It was a thousand dollars to a Mexican cent that Pomp. Jim would get in his oar just as he has. I shall use about the same argument once employed by Charley Mitchell—tell him to get a reputation. Let him go and whip Peter Maher and Joe Choynski before he opens his head to me. Both men want to fight him, and I think either one of them can lick him. This much I shall insist upon. He must first win from Maher and Choynski before he gets into a ring with me. I whipped with ease the man Corbett gave the championship belt to to avoid a match with him. To show how little I cared for Corbett's relinquishment, I now formally, through the Associated Press, renounce all claims to the belt and refuse to accept the championship belt. I am going to Madison Square Garden for the night of Feb. 29, with a half-dozen contracts I made conditionally on winning from Maher, and then, with Julian, Stensler, Roober and my family, I sail for England."

There Will Be No Third Northern Pacific Receiver.

Milwaukee, Feb. 25.—There will be no third receiver for the Northern Pacific Railroad company. This, it is stated, has been definitely decided upon, and consequently Receiver Andrew Burleigh, who was appointed by Judge Hanford, will step down and out. More than this, it is said by attorneys connected with the litigation that Messrs. McHenry and Bigelow are now the receivers for the entire properties of the Northern Pacific company, although part of the road is still in the hands of Receiver Burleigh. Receivers McHenry and Burleigh have been in New York for the past few days. Receiver Bigelow will join them early next week. Then the arrangements will be made for the turning over of the properties in the possession of Mr. Burleigh.

Compromise in Manitoba.

Winnipeg, Feb. 25.—It came out to day that Sir Donald Smith, who came here as special plenipotentiary of the dominion government in connection with the scool question, has taken back a message from Premier Greenway which may settle the troublesome question. Premier Greenway declares if the dominion authorities attempt coercion he will resent at any cost, but that if they withdraw their coercion bill and allow Manitoba to settle the question without interference, he will make such concessions to Roman Catholics as are reasonable and that they cannot fail to accept. Sir Donald will advise the dominion government to drop its proposed remedial bill, which will likely be done. The dominion government will then bring on the general elections on other issues.

Burned to Death.

New York, Feb. 25.—Lillian Cecil Lyons, the sixteen-year-old daughter fo Daniel Lyons of Brooklyn, was burned to death in her bed room today. The fire started througr the accidental explosion of an oil stove, which had been used to heat the room. Lillian, who was an epileptic, was in bed at the time. She was unable to move without assistance.

Used Public Money.

Tacoma, Wash., Feb. 25.—After being out all night the jury brought in a verdict of guilty against James W. McCauley, ex-city treasurer, charged with using public money for personal gain.

In Behalf of Prisoners.

New York, Feb. 25.—The Grand opera house was crowded with Irishmen and women last night who met to demonstrate their devotion to the land of their birth and to voice their sentiments regarding the release of the Irish and Irish-American political prisoners in English jails. Edward O'Flaherty presided, and in his opening address told of the horrors of the English prisons which the political prisoners were forced to endure, and then introduced Judge James Fitzgerald as the speaker of the evening.

He has gone to the depth of ninety-four feet, and fine specimens have been brought to the surface. Mr. Lindquist says that he will have an expert from Iowa in a day or two to investigate the find, and if it proves to be what it now indicates, he will realize well on his farm, which he bought about two years ago.

INTERNATIONAL AMITY.

The Subject of a Hymn by a Carleton College Professor.

Northfield, Minn., Special, Feb. 23.—Rev. McConnell, of the Congregational church here, preached to-day in a most enthusiastic manner on internationalism. President Strong, of Carleton college, introduced resolutions favoring a perpetual treaty of arbitration between the English-speaking nations, which were unanimously adopted. The effect of the meeting became something indescribable as the vast congregation joined in singing the following international hymn, written by Prof. G. H. Huntington, of Carleton college, to the tune of "America:"

Two empires by the sea,
Two nations great and free,
One anthem raise.
One race of ancient fame,
One tongue, one faith, we claim,
One God, whose glorious name
We love and praise.

What deeds our fathers wrought,
What battles we have fought,
Let fame record.
Now, vengeful passion, cease.
Come, victories of peace,
Nor hate nor pride's caprice
Unsheath the sword.

Though deep the sea and wide,
'Twixt realm and realm, it's tide
Binds strand to strand.
So be the gulf between
Grey coasts and islands green,
Great populace and queen,
By friendship spanned.

May the great God above
Guard the dear lands we love,
Or east or west;
Let love more fervent glow,
As peaceful ages go,
And strength yet stronger grow,
Blessing and blest.

MINNEAPOLIS ABANDONED.

By the Grand Council of the Knights of Pythias.

Minneapolis, Feb. 25.—The executive assembly of the grand council of the Knights of Pythias met at the Grand hotel in Cincinnati last evening under the command of Supreme Councillor Walter B. Ritchie. There were also present Supreme Vice Chancellor Colgrove, Prelate Steinhart, Keeper of Records White, John A. Hinsey of Chicago, board of control; Supreme Master of Records Sample, Supreme Master of Arms Gardiner. The session was executive. Judge G. M. Orr of St. Paul and Fred E. Wheaton of Minneapolis were present to resist the abandonment of the meeting of the grand lodge and grand lodge encampment of the Uniformed rank in this city. It was resolved, however, to abandon Minneapolis this year and to hold the biennial convention of the supreme lodge at Cleveland on Aug. 25, 1896. It was also decided to hold no encampment of the Uniformed rank this year. This action was taken because the railroads refused to give the Pythians a 1-cent per mile rate, the same as given to the Grand Army to St. Paul.

NARROW ESCAPE.

Two Harbors Citizens Had Thoughts of a Lynching Bee.

Duluth, Special, Feb. 25.—There was an exciting time at Two Harbors for a few hours. There was talk of holding a lynching bee. Gust Johnson, proprietor of the Swedish hotel there, was arrested on a charge of assaulting his thirteen-year-old daughter. She was brought for examination before Judge Bryan, and told a story implicating her father, but the defendant produced witnesses to show that the charge was due to a conspiracy on the part of herself and a young Frenchman named Napoleon Gratton, with whom she had been found under suspicious circumstances. The evidence was so clearly in Johnson's favor that the judge discharged him, and the crowd which had previously been threatening to lynch him red lustily.

CATHODE RAYS.

Successful Experiments by Winona Scientists.

Winona, Minn., Feb. 24.—Further experiments with the cathode rays were conducted last night at the plant of the Winona General Electric company by Professors Freeman, of the Winona normal, and Schneider, of the high school, and others interested. Photographs of a hand and a frog were taken with an exposure of two and two and a half hours, respectively. They developed well. With an exposure of three hours photographs of a razor and spectacles in cases, pieces of steel, zinc and antimony in a block of wood an inch thick and a fish were taken. The pictures were most satisfactory, those of the razor and glasses being the best. The voltage used was twenty-five volts. The plates were developed to-day. The interested scientists are delighted with their success.

Another Moon.

Northfield, Feb. 25.—The earth is to have another moon, with all its attendant pleasures. Perrine's comet is coming toward the earth at the rate of 1,000,000 miles a day, and the earth is rapidly approaching the comet. The chance of the two heavenly bodies colliding is only one in a million, as they must approach each other direct to accomplish that result, but the liability of this comet fooling around the earth until the two decide that hereafter their fortunes shall be joined is not all imaginary, and might indeed be an accomplished fact. This is the opinion of Dr. H. C. Wilson, of Carleton college.

He Is Kerchival.

Minneapolis, Feb. 25.—William J. Kerchival, the alleged absconding bookkeeper of the Milburn-Stoddard Implement company, arrested in this city Saturday evening by Detectives Hoy and Lawrence and Officer Gus Volk, admitted his identity yesterday when his former employers visited him in his cell at the central police station. In fact, he broke down, and it is said admitted everything, his stealing of the $1,900, which he lost playing horse races.

Dying of Cold and Hunger.

Constantinople, Feb. 25—The consuls of the powers who negotiated the peace at Zeitoun report the most terrible distress and illness there. There are 8,000 refugees in town, and an almost entire absence of beds and clothing. Many are dying of cold and starvation.

Furniture Company Assigns.

Rockford, Ill., Feb. 25.—The Star Furniture company of this city has assigned. Liabilities, $50,000; assets unknown.

April, May are most emphatically the months for taking a good blood purifier, because the system is now most in need of such a medicine, and because it more quickly responds to medicinal qualities. In winter impurities do not pass out of the body freely, but accumulate in the blood.

The best medicine to purify, enrich and vitalize the blood, and thus give strength and build up the system, is Hood's Sarsaparilla. Thousands take it as their Spring Medicine, and more are taking it today than ever before. If you are tired, "out of

Editor Ware of Thief River Falls Press was in town a short time today on his way home from Crookston

M. Z. Epperson has a crew of men at work on his mill. He has a large bank of logs and will start sawing in a few days.

H. E. Adams returned last Saturday from Red Lake where he had been with a load of supplies for the Meehan lumber camps,

A team belonging to Henry Olson indulged in a lively runaway today There were some narrow escapes but fortunately no one was injured.

Warm weather struck us again last Friday and our fine sleighing is now a thing of the past. It is too early for a break up but it looks like it now,

The Republicans of this part of the country seem to favor McKinley and Senator Davis will fail to get the entire Minnesota delegation for president

H. E. Cook of the Polk County Journal surprised his friends by going down to Indiana and getting married. We extend congratulations to Brother Cook.

The red Lake pine will be on the market for next year. The Towne amendment has passed the senate and now only needs the presidents signature to become a law.

Dan Patterson has been on the sick list for several days. While handling some heavy boxes last Monday he in some way injured his back and has been confined to his bed ever since,

W. A. Case left last Monday after starting a camp of Woodmen here. Fifteen members have already joined and Mr. Case will be here again in a couple of weeks to organize the lodge

The funeral of Anton Julin last Monday was held at the Lutheran Church and was attended by a large number of his friends. The remains were interred in the cemetery east of here.

Co. Commissioner Henry Norland was in town last Friday on his way back from Owatonna. While at St. Paul he called upon Gov Clough and seems to be impressed with the idea that nothing will be done in the Benson investigation.

Two thousand letters have been received by the U. S. land office asking for information concerning the Red Lake reservation opening. These might be supplemented by as many more which have been received by the locaters and real estate agents. The boom is on and the arrivals are already increasing. Two months yet intervene before the opening, and from present appearances the rush will be enormous Crookston Times,

It is now generally recognized that nothing further will be done in the Benson investigation. The governor seems disposed to shield the Judge in the matter. The peoples party elected Judge Benson and were in a measure responsible for his acts, but since they have asked for an investigation which has been refused by a republican governor, they can no longer be held, Judge Benson has joined that party and we are pleased that the republicans intend to endorse and uphold the judge and his official acts during the coming campaign. The peoples party need do nothing more, they made a mistake, acknowledged it and tried to correct it but could not owing to the republicans

The commissioner of the general land office made a favorable report to the president on the Towne bill providing for the sale of Red Lake pine. The bill passed both houses of congress and was sent to the president for signature and was signed by him referred to the general land office for opinion. In speaking of the matter Commissioner Lamoreaux said that he should recommend the immediate sale of all the timber that has been estimated and appraised as soon as the bill becomes a law. The commissioner also indicated that in the future his policy would be to sell the pine in small lots as fast as it can be estimated, to obviate the necessity of subsequent estimates made necessary by wind storms and fires.

In chambers this afternoon Judge Ives heard the controversy between the state and M. J. Forbes in which the latter as receiver of the Red River Valley elevator company, failed to pay taxes on the property of the property of the company in this county. The taxes amounted in the aggregate to about $700 which included taxes on a large number of elevators and considerable property of the company in this county. It appeared from the evidence that Forbes had money at the time the taxes became due and was in position to pay them.

The affairs of the defunct company were straightened out and taken out of the hands of the court without the taxes due the county having been paid County Attorney Gossman secured an order to show cause why Forbes should not be made to pay the taxes and this was heard today and the court ordered the tax paid by Mr. Forbes. Judge Ives in his usual outspoken manner told the ex-receiver what he thought of his action in this matter, and it was not very complimentary to the receiver.—Crookston Times.

The mutations of time have brought many changes of heart, politically, and one of the rarest is that of senator J. Q. Cronkhite of Marshall County. This gentleman has been a pop of pops, and during the last legislature attracted the attention of the state by reason of this fact. A Crookston friend sent him a McKinley button a day or two since and in response Mr. Cronkhite says: "Yours containing McKinley button just received. I fully appreciate your wisdom and good judgement. I am in perfect harmony with the G. O. P. on all issues except the silver question and this induces me to go in and bring the republicans fairly into line on this all important question. I am wearing the button bearing the likeness of McKinley and will work and vote to the end that he may be the next president of the U. S."—Crookston Times.

The horrible truth has come out at last and the populists are in despair. Senator Cronkhite has left us. It was rumored last winter that he was preparing for it when he went wrong last winter on the Anderson bill. First Benson and then Cronkhite. It is astonishing the number we have who go wrong first and then join the republicans. Is it possible that the republican party is encouraging this, or is it only their natural asylum?

Close competition breeds impetuosity, and in our earnest pushing for trade it often happens that we mark goods away down just for the fun of

We print a likeness of the skeleton of this remarkable paleontological reptile because some of its physical characteristics are synonymous with our business methods. Perhaps the most striking similarity may be found in its

Its little finger is very large: and so are our bargains. The paradox of a little finger being big may be likened to the paradoxical inducements we offer you.

Profits and Hind Feet Small

Its hind feet are out of all proportion to its fore feet, just as our profit is overshadowed by the buyer's. Its large head represents the size of our stock. The many years that have elapsed since the time when this creature flourished will hint at the wearing quality of our goods.

Major James Stewart of Carthage, O., a retired regular, who commanded Battery B, Fourth artillery, talks about two occasions when he was shocked and saddened. His horse, Tartar, was of blooded stock, and horse and master were much attached to each other. At the second Bull Run battle a solid shot plowed through the rumps of high strung Tarter, gouging out pounds of flesh and cutting off his tail snug to the body. The wounded animal frisked about right briskly for a minute and then settled down and carried his rider until the battle lulled, seeming to know that the commander could not spare time, in that iron and leaden hail, to change horses. He had bled to weakness, but quickly obeyed every summons of the rein. When Stewart dismounted and saw the ghastly wound he was, to use his own language, "as shocked as if I'd lost an arm." He supposed that his favorite riding horse would die or have to be killed. When, the next morning, Tartar slowly and with a wobbly gait walked to his master while he was sipping coffee and munching hardtack and raw pork, and gently laid his head upon his shoulder and groaned, the artilleryman put his arms about his neck and kissed the brown mane. "I can't kill him," said Stewart. "We will leave him here to die in his own way and time."

When Battery B and the other troops moved out on the retreat to Centerville, the major, then a lieutenant, on a new animal, took a tearful glance at his distressed war horse, said "Goodby, Tartar," and passed on in silence. Between sundown and dark that night Tartar, jaded and broken, straggled into camp and sought out his master as if to report for duty. He was tenderly petted and given an extra feed of oats. The next morning Stewart summoned the surgeon, had Tartar examined, and never was a boy gladder over red topped boots or anything else than Tartar's master when the doctor told him that the horse would be ready for service within a month or six weeks. Tartar followed the regiment through Washington to South Mountain and Antietam, sticking close to the horses during the battles, and when McClellan was ready to start from Bakersville back to Virginia, late in October, he was the proudest horse in the Army of the Potomac as he again took charge of Battery B's commander.

The story of Tartar's mishap spread throughout the army. Thousands of soldiers visited the battery on purpose to see him. He fared like a prince. Nothing was quite good enough for him. It often happened that the battery passed troops resting by the roadside. The appearance of "Fighting" Jim Stewart and bobtailed Tartar was always a signal for a variety of comments that put everybody in a happy frame of mind.

Tartar never just relished the beginning of a battle after his Bull Run experience. He didn't try to sulk, grab a root or dodge behind a tree, but he did a good deal of prancing, especially when shells and solid shot shrieked and whistled in his immediate vicinity, but after a few minutes he seemed to be as much interested in what was going on as any one in the command.

Stewart rode Tartar till the war ended and for several years afterward. "You may laugh, gentlemen," said the major to a cluster of comrades who had gathered about him at Detroit during the national encampment—"you may laugh, gentlemen, but it touched me to the heart when that poor, wounded dumb brute came up to me that morning, laid his head on my shoulder and groaned. I'll admit that a tear skated over my hard cheek."

"Let me tell you of another time when I experienced a choking sensation. It was that first day at Gettysburg. Just before we were ordered into the fight I had been talking with Colonel Lucius Fairchild of the Second Wisconsin. Both of us were in good spirits. We knew trouble was coming, but were confident a great victory for our arms was coming also. The order to advance came, and we saluted and separated. That hot afternoon, made hotter by the [illegible] of hundreds of cannon and the continuous rattle of musketry, while I was getting the battery through Gettysburg with as little delay as possible, the other folks being close to us, I heard some one shout my name. Looking in the direction from which the sound came, I saw Colonel Fairchild standing on a porch waving his handkerchief. Then I saw that one of his arms was gone. I can't tell you how shocked I was, nor how my heart crowded up into my throat when I recalled our pleasant visit of a few hours before and thought that forever and forever my dear friend would have to get along with one arm. I want to thank you folks up in Wisconsin for being good to him. Had him for your governor for a long time, didn't you?" Yes, major, and secretary of state. The nation had him for a consul, a consul general, a foreign minister. He has been what no other American has or is likely to be—commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic and commander in chief of the Loyal legion.

The Actress and Her Train.

The English stage has certain customs which greatly hurt a Frenchman who is not used to them. The last scene of every act is constantly interrupted, and sometimes in the most interesting part, by the tinkling of a little bell, which apprises the music to be ready to play in the interval between the acts. The actresses who perform the principal characters drag long trains after them, which have but four corners, like a carpet, the breadth proportioned to the importance of the character, and they are followed by a little boy in quality of a train bearer, who is as inseparable from them as the shadow from the body. This page, who is sprucely dressed and muffled up in a livery made to suit his stature within two or three inches, keeps his eye constantly fixed upon the train of the princess, sets it to rights when it is ever so little ruffled or disordered and is seen to run after it with all his might when a violent emotion makes the princess hurry from one side of the stage to the other. This he does with all the phlegm and seriousness natural to the English.

In one play in the scene between the king and the queen—"in the moment which is to separate them forever the king flies into the arms of the queen, who embraces her royal consort, and they continue clasping each other in transport, which excites in the whole audience the strongest emotions"—who can be affected to so high a degree as not to take notice of the attention of the little page to repair the disorder which the queen's train constantly receives as she stirs and moves with impassioned attitudes in the arms of the afflicted monarch?—Grasley's "London In 1756."

Glad to See Him.

New members of congress feel shy and lonesome. To be thrust suddenly in among almost 400 members, many of whom they have never seen, and only a few of whom they have ever heard of, is rather a trying experience. To make a speech under these conditions takes some courage. James Kerr, ex-member of congress from Pennsylvania, recently told of his experience in going into congress for the first time. He came down from Pennsylvania raw and green. He sat in his seat for several days, and in that time managed to pick up a formal speaking acquaintance with one or two of his neighbors. One day he was sitting in his seat, disconsolate, listening to the reading of some tiresome bill, when the member who sat next to him, who had served two terms, came in like a breeze and said cheerily:

"Hello, Jim."

Mr. Kerr wheeled in his chair and said eagerly:

"Say that again, will you, old man? It sounds like home."

"Well, Jim, let's go down to Murrayville and talk about home."

The reference to Murrayville is unintelligible to the outsider, but Mr. Kerr had learned by that time that the name referred to the house restaurant, where oysters and the cup that cheers were to be had, and they wended their way down stairs.—New York Tribune.

Delinquent Tax List

OF

POLK COUNTY, MINN.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, } ss. DISTRICT COURT,
County of Polk. } 14th Judicial District.

THE STATE OF MINNESOTA, to all Persons, Companies and Corporations, who have or claim any Estate, Right, Title or Interest in, Claim to, or Lein upon any of the Several Pieces or Parcels of Land in the List Hereto Attached, Described:

The list of taxes and penalties on real property for the county of Polk, remaining delinquent on the first Monday in January, 1896, has been filed in the office of the Clerk of the District Court, of the county of Polk, of which hereto attached is a copy.

THEREFORE, You, and each of you, are required to file in the office of said Clerk, on or before the 20th day of March, A. D. 1896, your answer, in writing, setting forth any objections or defense you may have to the taxes and penalties, or any part thereof, upon any piece or parcel of land described in said list, in, to, or on which you have or claim any estate, right, title, interest, claim, or lien.

And in default thereof, judgment will be entered against such piece or parcel of land, for the taxes on said list appearing against it, and for all penalties, interests and costs.

JOHN VTO,
Clerk of the District Court in said County of Polk.

Wherever the notation of "Ex. Int. R.R.Co." appears as a part of any description of land in the following list it means that the title and interest of the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Ry. Co. or its trustees or mortgagees, is not in anywise to be impaired or affected, by the judgment to be entered in these proceedings, and that only the interest of the purchasers from said company shall be affected by said tax judgment or sale thereunder.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, } ss
COUNTY OF POLK. }

I John Gleason, county auditor, in and for the County of Polk, in the state of Minnesota, do solemnly swear that the above and foregoing list of real estate, taxes and penalties delinquent and unpaid on the first Monday of January A. D One Thousand Eight Hundred and Ninety-six for the year One Thousand Eight Hundred and Ninety-four in said county and state from pages 1 to 238, both inclusive, are correct to the best of my knowledge and belief.

(Seal) JOHN GLEASON
County Auditor.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 29th day of January, A. D. 1896.

WM. L. VANNET,
Notary Public, Polk County, Minn.

Filed January 29th, 1896.
(Seal) JOHN VIG, Clerk.
by M. O. SORTEDAHL, Deputy.

Auditor's Office, Polk County, Minn.

I hereby certify that the foregoing copy of the list of real estate taxes delinquent on the first Monday in January, A. D. 1896, hereto attached, has been received from the Clerk of Court in and for said County of Polk, this 5th day of February, A. D. 1896.

(Seal) JOHN GLEASON,
County Auditor.

THE CODE OF HONOR.

Dueling as It Was In France In the Time of Richelieu.

The passion for dueling, which had cost France, it was said, between 7,000 and 8,000 lives during the 20 years of Henry IV's reign, was at its height when his son came to the throne. The council of Trent in 1545 had solemnly condemned the practice of single combat, impartially including principals, seconds and spectators in its penalty of excommunication. In 1602 an edict of Henry pronounced the "damnable custom of dueling introduced by the corruption of the century" to be the cause of so many piteous accidents, to the extreme regret and displeasure of the king and to the irreparable damage of the state, "that we should count ourselves unworthy to hold the scepter if we delayed to repress the enormity of this crime."

A whole series of edicts followed to the same effect, but it was easier to make edicts than to enforce them. Degradation, imprisonment, confiscation of property, loss of civil rights and death were the penalties attached to the infringement of the laws against dueling, and still the practice prevailed. In 1626 Richelieu published a milder form of prohibition. The first offense was no longer capital, a third only of the offender's property was to be confiscated, and the judges were permitted to recognize extenuating circumstances.

A few months later the Comte de Bouteville thought fit to test the minister's patience in this direction. The Place Royale had long been a favorite dueling ground, and De Bouteville traveled from Brussels to fight his twenty-second duel here, in the heart of Paris, in deliberate defiance of the king's authority. The result was not encouraging. Montmorency though he was, the count went with his second to the scaffold, and the marked decrease from that time in the number of duels may be attributed either to the moderation used in framing the law or to the inexorable resolution with which it was enforced.—Macmillan's Magazine.

Where the doves make mournful music and the locust trills a song
To the brook that through the pasture scampers merrily along;
And speechless pride and rapture ineffable shall fill
The beatific bosom of Penn-Yan Bill.

CINCINNATI WOMEN.

A GLIMPSE AT SOME OF THE SOCIALLY AND INTELLECTUALLY PROMINENT.

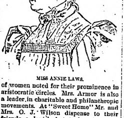
The Magnificent Suburban Homes—Striking Figures and Leaders In Musical, Art, Philanthropic, Literary and Social Circles—Women of Beauty and Brains.

Cincinnati holds a prominent position among the large cities for the beauty of its women, the magnificent homes of its millionaires in the suburbs, and for the brilliancy which characterizes its fashionable entertainments.

The suburban population is distributed on more hills than Rome has, but Clifton and the Grandin road undoubtedly lead in the matter of prominent and influential families. In Clifton are found the owners of those magnificent places along the Lafayette road, the Millers, Schoenbergers, Wilsons, Probascos, Bowlers and others, whose extensive domains are strikingly like English parks. Besides these, Clifton also claims Frank Perins, the Wiborgs, Sherlocks, Jordans, Charles H. Law, the McDonalds, Resors, Kineons, Thralls and many others who are distinctly within the inner circle of the Four Hundred of Cincinnati. On the Grandin road one finds the beautiful and picturesque homes of Larz Anderson, Bellamy Storer, Charles T. Dickson and others. On the Madison pike, hidden from the road by a leafy driveway, stands the beautiful home of the railroad magnate M. E. Ingalls, and nearby are the Fenton Lawsons, the Scarboroughs, the Lee Boutilliers and others who belong to the most aristocratic social set. In the east end of the city a few of the older families still choose urban life despite the general exodus to the suburbs. Here are the Hinkles, Seelys, Tafts, Davises, Fosters, Breeds, Shoemakers, Irwins, Pendletons, Dandridges and other families who are foremost in society, art, music and all the great interests of the community. Mount Auburn was the only suburb of Cincinnati built at the time of Charles Dickens' memorable visit, and in his "American Notes," he makes an agreeable mention of it, far more agreeable than Mrs. Trollope did, and for which she is not forgiven unto this day.

A Cincinnati woman who has a reputation justly national is Mrs. Bellamy Storer, daughter of Joseph Longworth and wife of ex-Congressman Bellamy Storer. Mrs. Storer's interest in art and music is known not only in America, but in Europe. She founded the Rookwood pottery, long since famous for its exquisite ware and its famed "tiger's eye glaze," which cannot be deliberately formed, but comes from the kiln like a gift of the gods. Mrs. Storer is intellectually brilliant, versed in law, music and art, and the castlelike home of the Storers is adorned with many specimens of her skill as a painter. Her daughter, Miss Nichols, is a beautiful and highly cultured girl, who will wed the Marquis du Chambrun, a grandson of Lafayette, this season.

Mrs. Rufus King, Mrs. Mary T. Armor and Miss Miller preside over the Miller establishment in Clifton, a trio of women noted for their prominence in aristocratic circles. Mrs. Armor is also a leader in charitable and philanthropic movements. At "Sweet Home" Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Wilson dispense to their friends a lavish but truly refined and gracious hospitality. Mrs. Wilson is a true type of the gentlewoman. She is prominent in educational and philanthropic affairs.



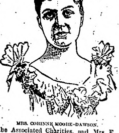
MISS ANNIE LAWS.

Mrs. A. Howard Hinkle, state regent D. A. R. for Ohio, wife of A. Howard Hinkle, the millionaire, is distinctly a social leader. Mrs. Hinkle is a daughter of William Henry Davis, who made a fortune in the days before the Queen City yielded up the title of Porkopolis to Chicago. Mr. Hinkle made his money in Van Antwerp, Bragg & Co., known throughout the country, and became a patron of art and music to whom Cincinnati owes much. Mrs. Hinkle is handsome, distinguished, dignified and a leader in swell social functions.

Among the younger matrons Mrs. Frank Ellis, young, witty, fascinating and beautiful, is very popular. Mrs. Dwight Kinney, Mrs. Clifford Perin, Mrs. Edmund Miller, Mrs. Arthur Stern and Mrs. Will Jackson are all greatly sought after. Mrs. Walter Mitchell is a beautiful and attractive woman noted for brilliant social qualities.

The Charles P. Tafts are among the most prominent Cincinnatians socially. Mr. Taft takes the seat in congress recently held by Bellamy Storer; hence the family will spend this winter in Washington. Mrs. Taft is the daughter of David Sinton, a multimillionaire and the second richest man in the state of Ohio. She is a member of the Cincinnati Woman's club and active in musical interests.

But does society monopolize Cincinnati beauty and culture? Her women are duly abreast of the times, and the young but progressive Cincinnati Woman's club, with a membership of 175, has already made a great record and sent out through the community waves of influence on municipal and educational affairs which have had a distinct influence for good. Of this organization Miss Annie Laws is the efficient president, a woman who represents the best type of the progressive and philanthropic woman of today. Her experience in kindergarten work and various philanthropic movements makes her a fitting head for the club. Cincinnati's most accomplished women sought membership within the fold of this club, and here may be found Mrs. Alice Williams Brotherton, a versatile and accomplished writer and a fascinating lecturer; Mrs. Fayette Smith, as talented as she is handsome; Mrs. W. O. Sproull, a cultured woman, spending the winter in Switzerland; Miss Clara Chipman Newton, an accomplished artist; Miss Emma Louise Parry, noted for her lectures on art; Miss Hickenlooper, an earnest advocate of college and university settlement work; Mrs. Margaret C. Morehead, prominent in the D. A. R.; Mrs. Henrietta Billing of Clifton, a liberal patron of art and music; Mrs. M. L. Buchwalter of Avondale, litterateur and critic; Mrs. William J. Breed, a social leader and prominent in the work of the Associated Charities, and Mrs. E. W. Coy, Miss Charlotte Dulime, Mrs. Howard Eckert, Mrs. George B. Ellard, Mrs. Lowe Emerson, Mrs. E. D. Aldro, Mrs. J. J. Gest, Mrs. Davis L. James, Mrs. H. Thane Miller, Miss Mary Warner Moore, Miss Louise McLaughlin, Mrs. Frank Tullidge and others are strong and influential members of the club.



MRS. CORINNE MOORE-DAWSON.

Mrs. Corinne Moore-Lawson is the fitting representative of the musical element. Young, beautiful and of a most winning personality, her fine mezzo soprano voice is known in many cities of the country. The Lawsons have a beautiful home on the Madison pike, East Walnut Hills, and Mrs. Lawson is the most charming hostess in the world.

Art circles in Cincinnati are proud, and justly so, of Miss Pitman, one of the first woman wood carvers in the world; of Miss Mary Spencer, whose work in oil has given her a wide reputation; of Miss Laura Fry, whose work on china is exquisite. In educational circles Miss Celia Doerner, Miss Patrick and Miss Stickney of the high schools have won for themselves admirable reputations. Mrs. J. M. Woodward is a newspaper woman who has also done excellent work, as has Miss Lottie Miller. Mrs. Carrie Moerlein has won laurels for her energy in connection with the exhibit of the Cincinnati women's work at the Atlanta exposition.

This is but a mere glimpse at some of the more prominent women of Cincinnati. There are others. But that is another story.

MARY C. FRANCIS.

Interior Decoration.

Although in furnishing a drawing room or parlor nowadays variety and contrast run riot, it being essentially the hostess' room, it should reflect her individual taste and not be subject to the flimsy fashion of the hour. If you wish the keynote of color of a neat parlor to be red, subject your reds to a scale. Your furniture being upholstered in red—presumably a rich shade—and bearing in mind the woodwork is painted ivory white, use a modified red for the walls. For instance, a Japanese red or faded rose red, pronounced, but not too deep, relieved by a figure such as a chrysanthemum flower, in creamy yellow. Let the frieze be in a paler shade—plain, with white picture molding dividing. This might be enriched with some wreaths or panels in relief painted white, or with some china plaques or Japanese ornaments. The cornice being in white, let the same tint as in the frieze prevail in the ceiling, with a wide border in cream and white.

The floor, if of soft wood, should be stained and varnished a pale cherry or oak; if of hard wood, have it waxed and polished and covered with rugs in which are introduced some rich indigos, tans, old golds and grays. Have the door draperies in neutral grays with a slight figure in reds. Drape your mantel with some rich oriental textile.

For an east parlor drape the doorways in "old delft" blue and white stuff. Paper the walls in the same color, of delicate figure, with a little pale gray introduced. In the frieze let some pink or rosy tinted flower run, to give a touch of warmth. Carpet in pale grays, turquoise blues and rose tints. Drape your mantel with rose silk and cream lace. The ceiling may be white and pink.—Art Amateur.

I watched him I love going from me
(Ah, would to God I had died!),
And I prayed to the great all Father
To stay the turn of the tide.

To stay the ebb! And he harkened,
And ever the waves rolled on,
Till meadow and garden and hedgerows
I could see them never a one.

For I knew that my love was dying;
At the turn of the tide he must go.
The soul may not leave its dwelling
Till betwixt the ebb and the flow.

And the people who all flocked inland,
They called it a great springtide,
And I listened and joined in their sorrow,
But I knew in my heart that I lied.

And my love as he watched the waters
Sighed wearily for his rest.
Then I prayed once more to our Father,
For I saw that his will was best.

As the sea went slowly backward
The spirit of one who had died
Was borne on the waste of waters,
For the soul must go with the tide.

WILKES BOOTH'S DOUBLE.

A Richmond Preacher's Startling Likeness to the Assassin of Lincoln.

From a romantic point of view the most interesting object of all about the old Monumental church at Richmond, Va., is the photograph of Wilkes Booth's double. It hangs in a dark corner of the old fashioned vestry room, and represents a man in the prime of life standing beside a table, his long clerical garments giving him increased height and dignity. The long, straight hair is brushed straight back from the high, broad forehead, and the face—in every lineament—is said to be the image of Wilkes Booth as he would have appeared at that time. The resemblance is most remarkable—the deep, black eyes, the shape of chin, mouth, cheeks, forehead, eyebrows and nose—and, moreover, here is a subtle similarity to members of the Booth family that defies description.

This man was the Rev. John G. Armstrong, rector of the church from 1878 to 1881. But even to this day strange rumors of the final end of Wilkes Booth are to be heard in places where his friends and intimates lived and talked long after the assassination of President Lincoln had passed into history.

There are tales of a mysterious grave, of a body that tallied in some of its marks with those of Wilkes Booth and differed materially in others, and an intangible fabric of supposition built about a series of gossiped incidents. However valueless these may be historically, they show an undercurrent that found an outbreak in the romance of Mr. Armstrong of Monumental church.

The likeness of Mr. Armstrong to Wilkes Booth was so startling that some people who had seen both men found it hard to believe that they were not the same. The preacher's manner might be called dramatic. His movements and gestures had the repose and breadth that most actors acquire in following their art and living and working constantly before an audience. He was, moreover, slightly lame, as Wilkes Booth would probably have been in consequence of the injury to his leg sustained in jumping from President Lincoln's box. Aside from this fact, Mr. Armstrong's manner, voice and temperament led to the conviction that were he not a priest he would have been a great actor. It is said that his daughter did subsequently go upon the stage and met with great success.

No subject of discussion was more constant in Richmond than the possibility that Mr. Armstrong and Wilkes Booth were one and the same man. Mr. Armstrong strenuously denied the identity, but such denials could not silence the rumors. There seemed, moreover, to be a shadow over his antecedents. He came to Richmond a comparative stranger, and claimed that he was a priest ordained in Ireland. An investigation was quietly started to clear up the facts as to his past, but did not give entire satisfaction.

In the midst of the constantly reiterated declarations and denials the clergyman was accused of irregularities in his habits, and this again called forth the charge that he was not all he seemed to be. He finally resigned the rectorship of Monumental church and went to a city in the extreme south. Shortly after he left the ministry he sank out of sight and died in obscurity. But even to the end the doubt as to his identity hung like a shadow over his life, and when on his deathbed, his last words were a denial—a pathetic, heartbroken denial—that he was Wilkes Booth.—Philadelphia Times.

A Nook In the Woods.

While still not far in the woods, we came to a dear, hospitable nook under a protecting bank, where a tinkling spring, descending to meet a quiet stream, kept the mosses green, though it was so near frosty December. As we listened to the gentle music of the spring—"tinkle, tinkle"—the same notes came repeated from a distance to us. We had to think twice before we decided that what we heard was the sound of sheep bells in a pasture some fields away. Then we said that for those who listen well the various voices in nature—both living and unconscious voices—have much that is in common, and my sweet child comrade told me how she had once heard a sparrow singing like a running brook as he perched on a willow branch close by!—Edith M. Thomas in St. Nicholas.

The Greatest Mercy.

There was a good deal of sound human nature in the unexpected reply of the dying old woman to her minister's leading question, "Here at the end of a long life, which of the Lord's mercies are you most thankful for?" Her eyes brightened as she answered, "My victuals."

The Dear Girls.

THE AFRICAN.

He Has a Sense of Honor and Justice and Is Not Cruel.

No one is more convinced than I am that the African races are inferior to the English, French, German and Latin races. I do not place him below the other colored races; possibly because I have never lived among nor attempted to understand the eastern races, and possibly because I have lived among and attempted to understand the Africans. Certainly the so called Hamitic races have never produced an even fourteenth rate sculpture, picture, machine, tool, piece of cloth or pottery; neither have they ever risen to the level of picture writing, let alone a written character, and I am personally acquainted, to the point of exasperation, with their cryptic, complicated ways of communicating ideas with strings of cowries and pieces of leaf and stick. Only the other day I had to steer a course with a chart made of bits of plantain leaf of different breadths, denoting the size of the villages I was to pass through, and placed at intervals that denoted the distance between the villages.

I do not say I did well with that chart, but I have done quite as badly with the best admiralty one. But these ingenious devices do not equal the rock writing of the South Americans, the pictures the red Indian paints on a raw elk hide, and are infinitely below those spirited sporting sketches of mammoth hunts, etc., left us by the cave men.

In mental and moral affairs the African is by no means so strikingly inferior as he is in handicrafts. He has both a sense of justice and honor, not much worn by daily use, and very easily eliminated by a course of Christian teaching. But it is there, and if you know the way, you can rouse it and make it work. In rhetoric he excels, and for good temper and patience he compares favorably with any set of human beings. The worst of his personal sins is sloth. This chiefly arises from his not having anything to do in a definite up to time way, for he is happy and industrious when under good, white direction. No one who has been on the coast can fail to have noticed the Kroo boys singing and dancing and laughing over their often heavy work. The cooper and the carpenter and their fellow countryman from Accra, the cook, are far happier than the Africans in the bush—yea, even the cook, whose conscience should be a burden to him on account of the manslaughters he has committed with his abiding greasiness.

Of course you will point out their customs, but I must say, in spite of what I have heard and seen, that I do not consider the west African cruel. One must remember that in their culture there are no prisons or hospitals or workhouses, no regular police force, etc. In the matter of their sacrificial rites, I think one should try and understand the underlying ideas before one thinks harshly. The feeling, for example, regarding the importance of burial rites is quite Greek in its intensity. Given a duly educated native of the Niger delta, I am sure he would grasp the true inwardness of his Alcestis far and away better than any living European can.

To provide a proper burial for a dead relative means to them providing for that relative a happy after life, and so to do is the surviving negro's greatest duty. Its only rival in his mind is the desire to avoid having a funeral for himself, and even this passion goes under in the mind of a good negro, and he will risk his own life to carry out what he considers his duty to the dead, even when he is well aware that the killing of slaves will mean hanging for him when "them big consul" knows of it.

The greatest horrors on the coast arise out of the belief in witchcraft. Toleration means indifference with all men, I believe, and the negro and Bantu are not indifferent about their subjects.—Mary Kingsley in London Observer.

Man as an Individual.

Theories are automatic machines which allow for no vagaries, but humanity in its physical, mental and moral nature is ever a variable and uncertain quantity, and he will have greatest success either as physician, teacher or spiritual guide who treats the human material upon which he works as individual units and not as a grand whole, whose theories are the result of his experience, and who recognizes the truth that man as a sum is made up of men as many units, each differing in its exponent of power.—Womankind.

Prayer and Precept.

"Dear God," prayed a little Church street maiden last evening, "make a good little girl out of me, and if at first you don't succeed try, try again."—Bedford Banner Democrat.

A Brutal Suggestion.

It is, of course, a real mean man who asks: "Why not let women throw ballots if they want to? They'll never hit the box."—Boston Transcript.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

"THE WOODEN HEN."

We have heard of wooden horses and wooden ducks, but a wooden hen is something new under the sun—and its purposes are different from those of either of the other wooden animals mentioned. It is a not a toy, though it will please a boy. It is a hen, at least it will hatch chickens from hens' eggs.

It is 10x15x8 inches and will take care of twenty-eight eggs. It is an incubator and costs only $6.00.

This wooden hen is made by George H. Stahl, Quincy, Ill. If you want to find out more about it before you buy one write to Mr. Stahl for catalogue "W," which gives a full description, and mention this paper.

GROW RICH, EVERY FARMER.

The editor thinks it to be the wish of everybody to grow rich, not for the sake of the money, but for the good that can be done with the money. Now, there are three new cereals recently created that will make money for the farmer. One is Silver King Barley, the most wonderful creation of the age, yielding 90, 100 to 116 bu. per acre in 1895, and there are thousands of farmers who believe they can grow 150 bu. per acre therefrom in 1896.

Then there is Silver Mine Oats, yielding in 1895 209 bu. per acre. Every farmer who tested it, believes 250 bu. possible.

Then there is Golden Triumph Corn, which produced over 200 bu. per acre, and 250 bu. is surely possible.

And potatoes, there is Salzer's Earliest, which was fit for table in 28 days in 1895, yielding tremendously, while the Champion of the World, tested in a thousand different places in 1895, yielded from 8 to 1,600 bu. per acre.

Now, in Salzer's new catalogue there is a wonderful arrayal of new varieties of wheat, oats, barley, rye, potatoes, grasses, clovers and forage plants, and the editor believes that it would pay every farmer a thousand-fold to get this catalogue before buying seeds.

If you will cut this out and send it with 10 cents postage to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., you will receive, free, 10 grain and grass samples, including above and their mammoth catalogue. Catalogue alone, 5 cents postage. w.n.

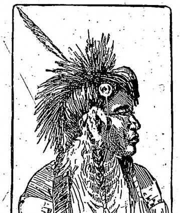
THUNDER CLOUD AT WASHINGTON

HEAD CHIEF OF THE KICKAPOOS SHOWN THE SIGHTS OF THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

The beauty of the Buildings entranced him; the height of the Monument surprised him; the mysterious Trolley Cars bewitched him; but what astonished and appalled him was the many sudden deaths in civilization. Impure blood, liver and kidney troubles responsible for many being so stricken.



THUNDER CLOUD.

Thunder Cloud when on a visit to Washington recently to see the Great White Chief, as the red men call the President, was paid many attentions and shown the sights at the Nation's Capital. When asked what surprised him most about civilization, the Head Chief of the Kickapoos startled his questioners by replying,—"The appalling number of sudden deaths among you 'pale faces.'"

The truth of Thunder Cloud's assertion cannot be denied. Statistics show that yearly thousands of people are suddenly stricken on the street, in public places, at their desks, and in their homes. Their deaths are attributed to "heart failure," but if the truth were known, impure blood, liver and kidney disorders are what sever so quickly the thread of life.

How unlike are the people of today from the Indians whose "one talent" was and is to keep well, strong and able to endure the most terrible hardships and privations. For years they kept the trail to health a secret. Now, thousands are being cured of disease by Indian remedies. The Kickapoos now and always led their race in medicine compounding. Sudden death from disease is unknown to them. Why? They always keep their blood—the oil in the lamp of life—pure and strength-giving by using their great blood purifier and tonic, Kickapoo Indian Sagwa.

If you are "off the books," lack the activity and ambition that you usually have, are irritable and nervous, have a poor appetite, suffer the terrors of sleeplessness, or get up in the morning feeling more tired than when you went to bed, or if your skin is dry and hard, and distressing eruptions break out over your body, your system is run-down and your blood needs toning-up and purifying, or your liver and kidneys demand attention. If you want to be well and strong again, do as the Indians did,—take Kickapoo Indian Sagwa. Don't delay, buy a bottle at once, you won't be well until you do. Stop on the crest of the steep hill of failing health while you can, once on a downward course means suffering despair—death.

Sagwa is for sale by all druggists, $1.00 a bottle. If you have any special trouble write to the Kickapoo Indian Remedy Co., New Haven, Conn., and one of their corps of skilled physicians will advise you free and treat your letter confidentially.

NONA.

Some years ago I passed several weeks at a fishing village on the coast of Brittany. What a hole it was. But how picturesque! A miserable anchorage, for ten boats at the most, single stony street, which I can compare to nothing better than a mountain torrent. On top of the hill a church, a veritable gothic toy, which stood in the middle of a cemetery from which a magnificent view of the ocean was obtained. Finding myself in the vein for work, I lingered in this out-of-the-way corner until the end of September, which, by a rare chance in rainy Finistere, was that year exceptionally mild and clear.

But one cannot always compose verses and write, and a walk was my hygiene and my distraction. My most frequent promenade was along the beach, having on my right the bleak and rocky cliffs and on my left the uncovered stretches of sand—an immense desert of sand left bare by the outgoing tide. Two or three times I had exchanged civilities with some custom house officer going his rounds, his gun slung over his shoulder. I was so regular and peaceful a promenader that the sea swallows were no longer afraid of me, and hopped in front of me, leaving the print of their star-shaped feet in the wet sand. I walked six or eight kilometers a day, and returned home with my pockets filled with those dainty shells which are found by burying the hand deep down in the damp pebbles.

This was my favorite excursion. However, on the days when a strong breeze was blowing and the tide was very high I abandoned the seashore, and, climbing the village street, I strolled along the sandy moor, or else I settled myself with a book on a bench in a corner of the cemetery, which was sheltered by the church tower from the west end.

It was a lovely spot, conducive to sadness and revery. The church tower stood out against the autumn sky, over which dark clouds were scurrying. Crows, whose nests were in the steeple, flew out with their hoarse cawing, and the shadow of their large wings glided over the scattered tombstones, almost hidden in the grass.

In the evening more than at any other time, the last rays of the setting sun bathing the sea as though with blood, the ragged branches of the skeleton of an old apple tree silhouetted against the crimson sky and the deep intense stillness of the wild home of the dead flooded my soul with melancholy.

It was on such an evening as I have just described that, wandering among the tombs, many of which bore under the sailor's name this mournful legend, "Died at sea," I read on a new cross the following words, which astonished and puzzled me: "Here reposes Nona Le Maguet. Died at sea, Oct. 26, 1878, at the age of 19."

Died at sea! A young girl! Women hardly ever go out in the fishing boats. How did this happen?

"Well, monsieur," said a gruff voice behind me suddenly, "you are looking at poor Nona's tomb?"

I turned around and recognized an old sailor, with a wooden leg, whose good graces I had acquired by the aid of a few glasses of brandy, which I had given him in the taproom at the inn.

"Yes," I replied. "But I thought you fishermen never permitted women to told that they you. I have even been

"And that is [illegible] you misfortune." the good man. "Besides, Nona never went into a boat. Would you like to know how the poor little one died? Well, I will tell you.

"First of all, I must tell you that Pierre, her father, was a topman, like myself, and an old comrade. At Bourget, when Admiral La Ronciere raised his golden helmet on the point of his saber, and we flung ourselves, hatchet in hand, on the embattled houses, we marched elbow to elbow, Pierre and I, and it was he who received me in his arms when those cursed Prussians put a ball in my thigh. That same evening in the ambulance at the fort, Pierre held my hand and gave me courage while the surgeon amputated my limb, and he was there at my bedside when the admiral brought me my medal. But those rascally Prussians got the best of us, and we were sent home. I, with my wooden leg, was practically helpless. But Pierre, who was uninjured, hired on board a fishing smack. Very soon afterward his wife died from an intermittent fever, leaving him the care of little Nona, who was going on ten years of age.

"Naturally, while the widower was at sea, it was I, his comrade, I, the old bachelor, who cared for the little one. She was a good and pretty child, monsieur; courageous and sweet-tempered. We very often went to the rocks at low tide to gather turtles, shrimps, prawn, and sometimes we were fortunate enough to find a lobster. Ah, but we were good friends!

"This went on for about two years. Nona had made her first communion, grown and shot up like a thistle in the sand. But one day the Amelia, Le Maguet's boat, was overtaken in a storm and wrecked. The skipper did not haul in his sail soon enough, and the boat struck on that reef you can see over there—just a little more to the starboard. There were four men in the crew—the skipper, two sailors and my poor Pierre. But the sea only gave up three of the drowned men, and retained my comrade. Nona became an orphan. It goes without saying that I did my best to replace her father. But the child, even after the first sorrow passed away, did not seem to console herself. And do you know why, monsieur? Because of an ideal all the women around here have. They believe that a soul must remain in pain unto the judgment day unless it reposes in consecrated ground. We men do not believe in all this nonsense when we know what happens when there is a death on board ship. But Nona could not be forced to believe other than the women had taught her, and continued to burn candles at all the pardons in the neighboring town for the repose of her father's soul.

"However, in spite of everything, time is a famous merchant of forgetfulness, and Nona, after a few years, appeared to me to become somewhat reconciled. Besides, her grief had not prevented her from growing handsomer, and taking a pride in herself, and it is not because I loved her as a father, but, upon my honor, she was the freshest and prettiest young girl in the parish. We lived so happily together. We were not rich, to be sure, but we lived, and we enjoyed ourselves all the same. I had my pension and my medal, and then we used to go together to hunt for lobsters in the rocks. The trade is a paying one, and there is only one danger—that of being overtaken by the tide. Ah, unfortunately, that was how she met her death, poor little one!

"One day, when my rheumatism confined me to the house, she went fishing alone. It was just such a day as today; the sky clear, the wind high. When the rock searchers gathered together with full baskets they perceived that Nona failed to respond to their calls. There was no possible doubt; Great God, she had been delayed and surrounded by the rising tide! She had been drowned! Ah, what a night I passed, monsieure. At my age, yes, a hard hearted man like me, I sobbed like a woman. And the remembrance came to me of the poor child's belief that to go to heaven she must be interred in consecrated ground. Therefore, as soon as the tide went down, I went to the shore, and, with the others, searched for the body.

"And we found poor Nona," continued the old sailor in a trembling voice. We found her on a rock covered with sea weed, where, knowing that she was going to die, the poor little one had prepared herself for death. Yes, monsieur, she had tied her skirts below the knees with her fichu, through modesty, and with her old idea uppermost had attached herself to the sea weed by her hair, her beautiful black hair, certain that she would thus be found and interred in consecrated ground. And I can say, I who know what bravery is, that there is perhaps not a man brave enough to do likewise."

The old man was silent. By the last gleam of the twilight I saw two great tears rolling down his weather-beaten cheeks. We descended to the village side by side in silence. I was profoundly touched by this simple girl's courage, who, even in the agonies of death, had retained the modesty of her sex and the piety of her race, and before me, in the distant immensity, in the solitudes of the heavens and the sea, gleamed out the beacon lights and the stars.

NO ONE IS OVERWORKED.

Those Who Knows Say That No Kind of Labor Is Injurious.

An eminent medical authority discredits the theory that men (or women, either) break down from overwork. He says the brain does its work with the minimum of effort, that with due nutriment and rest in sleep it can work continuously during waking hours, and that, instead of being injured by severe labor, it is improved by it, if the labor is done under normal conditions. "When a man says he is suffering from the effects of overwork," adds this authority, "the wise physician wants to know what his vices are. Worry may be one. The worries of life do infinitely more harm than the work of life, however onerous it may be."

The candid experience of almost every brain-worker will confirm this theory. A person who is suffering from that many-headed monster called nervous prostration will, if he carefully reviews the events of his life, find that it was brought on by irregular modes of life, and not by excessive brain work. To a certain extent, the same thing is true of physical labor. It is very seldom that a man is broken down by hard manual toil, but his health may fail because of his neglect of plain and ordinary precautions in regard to regularity of diet and rest, or because he toils in unhealthy surroundings. It is better in this life to wear out than to rust out. Labor of any kind, physical or mental, does not impair the faculties like sloth, indifference or dissipation. The human race was put on this earth to toil; labor is the decreed healthful condition, and it is very seldom that a person in a condition of freedom will be called upon to do enough work to paralyze any of his faculties. With a calm and contented mind a human being can do out [illegible] amount of work with mind is what exercise is to [illegible]—a strengthener and developer.—Minneapolis Tribune.

HIS FIRE ESCAPE WAS USELESS.

Had to Use the Stairs to Go From the Burning Building.

An amusing story comes from the Kennington road about a fire escape. It might very easily have been a serious story, all the same. It seems that a fire broke out yesterday morning in a dwelling house over a baker's shop, and blazed up gaily in the strong wind. Forthwith, their trots up Fireman A. J. Waller with his trusty fire escape. (It was not really trusty, but, no doubt, he thought it was trusty.) The occupants of the house were still in the burning building. So he pitched his machine, dashed up and forced his way into the upper rooms in hopes of a gallant rescue. He found the place deserted. He also found, when he returned to his fire escape, that there was plenty of fire but no escape. So, like the good people whom he had desired to rescue, he was compelled to use the stairs of the house—really a terrible come-down for him—and make his way out through the back premises. The obvious moral, of course: "All's well," etc. But there is another, and that is, that a fire escape should not be left deserted without anyone to shift it, should occasion arise.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Wilson and the Expert.

A good gold-dust story is told on George Wilson, who owned the famous Paris mine in Park county, Mon. Wilson was visited by some Englishmen one day, among whom was an expert of the English pattern—one who knew all about mines and a great deal about everything else, in his own opinion. They wanted to see some of Wilson's gold, and he panned out some very fine colors for their edification.

"But that isn't gold," pronounced the youthful expert, after a critical examination. "Me deah fellah, I am a graduate of the English School of Mines, and I know gold when I see it, you know. That is iron."

Wilson didn't say much. He just leaned over and took the alleged expert confidingly by the shoulder: "Mebbe it isn't," he said, "but don't go and give it away to those fellows down at the Denver mint, for I have been selling this stuff to them for gold al' along."—Butte Mountain.

Couldn't Do It Again.

The black-bearded pirate, with a knife between his teeth, boarded the passenger ship.

"Throw up your hands!" he shouted.

The passenger hanging over the rail smiled feebly.

"I think I did not less than an hour ago," he said, gaspingly.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

He Was Used to It.

Grandpa—Don't get scared, Willie. The tiger is about to be fed—that's what makes him jump and roar so."

Willie (easily)—Oh, I ain't afraid of him, grandpa. Papa's the same way when his meals ain't ready!

A Housewife's Trials.

MRS. MARSHALL TELLS HOW SHE SUFFERED.

Had Several Attacks of Rheumatism—Doctors Failed to Relieve Her—How the Disease Was Conquered.

From the Press, Appleton, Minn.

Of all the ordinary diseases to which humanity is heir, there is, perhaps, none more general or more painful than rheumatism. The Press having learned that Mrs. Mary A. Marshall, a well-known lady of Appleton, Minn., this city, had for some time past been a sufferer from this complaint, and that she had found a remedy which not only gave almost immediate relief, but which effected a complete cure, and believing that the dissemination of a few facts regarding it would perhaps be of interest and benefit to many of our readers, interviewed the lady upon the matter. The reporter found Mrs. Marshall at her pleasant home busily engaged in performing her household duties in a manner which did not in the least indicate rheumatism, and secured from her the following statement:

"It is about a year and a half ago that I first experienced these attacks of rheumatism. As they became more frequent they became more painful, and while I used the prescriptions of several doctors I failed to find relief. About a year ago I noticed in a paper a testimonial as to the effectiveness of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and was so impressed by the statements made therein that I determined to try them. My husband accordingly sent for a supply of six boxes, and I am free to say that before I had used two boxes of the pills I became aware of a change for the better. I continued to improve until today, I am as free from all traces of rheumatism as I was before these attacks. I can also truthfully say that aside from speedily and effectually curing the rheumatism the pills have done me a great deal of good in generally renovating the system, purifying the blood and relieving those numerous little ailments to which women are most commonly addicted."

Mr. Marshall was present during the interview, and was sincere in his praise of what the pills had done for his wife, believing them to have been the sole and direct cause of her relief.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are for sale by all druggists, or may be had by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., for 50c per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

HER CLOTHES HER BANK.

Cornelia Seibels Was Found in a London Workhouse With $15,800.

The American woman, Miss Cornelia Seibels, who was discovered in a London workhouse lately with $15,800 in United States bank notes sewed up in her clothes, is a character in the State of Mississippi, where she has lived for the past twenty years, says the New York World. Her family was a prominent one. She was a cousin of the late Supreme Court Justice L. C. Q. Lamar.

She has been thought insane by her neighbors in Brookhaven, Miss., but those who know her best say her only mania is money-getting.

Her presence in London was to establish her rights to participate in the distribution of the Temple estate, amounting to several million pounds. Since 1867 she has been trying to establish her claims. She also claims to have an interest in the Seibels estate in Germany. She has been working upon the two cases for almost thirty years, and a month ago she started for Europe to employ legal advisers.

Miss Seibels is about fifty years old. Her family went to Mississippi from Georgia in 1860. They owned a number of negroes and purchased a large plantation near Brookhaven. Some ten years ago she fell and dislocated one of her legs. Since then she has hobbled about from place to place on a crutch. She never wore sufficient clothing.

Notwithstanding her wealth, she slept either in the house of some charitable neighbor or in a deserted building or plantation outhouse.

Last November she sold a tract of 800 acres of timber land for $3,100 in cash. When the trade was consummated and the bank bills turned over, Miss Seibels drew out a needle and thread and requested every one present to leave the room, saying that she wished to sew up the money in her clothes. A few days later she left for London.

On Another Lay Now.

"Oh, did I?" asked Mr. Wickwire.

"Yes, you did. And now I have to nag at you for three days to get you to lay a carpet."—Washington Star.

PITH OF THE NEWS.

EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

A General Resume of the Most Important News of the Week, From all Parts of the Globe, Boiled Down and Arranged in Convenient Form for Rapid Perusal by Busy People.

Washington Talk.

Abner T. Longley, for thirty years connected with the agricultural department at Washington, recently as chief of the publication division, is dead. He was a native of Wisconsin, was a well known Mason and was 74 years old.

Lieut. Ross, formerly of the revenue cutter Corwin, has forwarded charges to the secretary of the treasury against Capt. Munger of a very serious nature. The charges assert that Munger was drunk during most of the time the fleet was in Behring sea last season.

People in Print.

Rear Admiral Fyffe, U. S. N., retired, died at Omaha.

Senor N. Lopez, Spanish consul at New Orleans, is dead.

Gen. Davidson, a prominent resident of New York, is dead. He captained a volunteer regiment of Highlanders during the late war.

John Waldron, an actor, forty-three years old, known in dramatic circles as "Paul Allen," died at Bellevue hospital, New York, in the alcohol ward.

Alanzan Weed, well connected and once wealthy, died suddenly in an Italian lodging house in Brooklyn, N. Y. He was a nephew of Thurlow Weed.

Gen. David Morrison is dead at his home in New York. He was born in Glasgow in 1823, but came to this country at the age of nineteen.

Mrs. W. A. Austin, wife of the principal of the Rockton, Ill., high school, died at the age of fifty-five years. She was a daughter of the late Dexter Drury of Beloit.

Portraits of the German emperor were shown in London shops after he had sent his cable dispatch to the Boers, marked, "Reduced to 6d from 20s."

Joseph Jefferson gave one of his characteristic talks in New Orleans on Washington's birthday, at an entertainment for the benefit of one of the city hospitals.

Rev. R. T. Parshall, well known all over the country as an evangelist, died in Chicago, from the effects of injuries received in a railroad accident some time ago.

Commandant Herbert Booth said that if the American Salvation army separated from the army in England he thought the Canadian army would remain faithful to Gen. Booth.

Pope Leo XIII. recently gave the following advice to a famous Italian preacher, Father Zocchi: "Write articles for the newspapers. People read them who never go to hear a sermon preached."

In his talk at the recent banquet of the New York Press club, Dr. Depew said that the modern newspaper was a thinking machine for the business man, and that a good reporter was a cathode ray.

Potter Palmer of Chicago has taken the H. Ruthven Pratt villa, at Parker and Bellevue avenues, Newport, for the coming summer season. It is presumed Mrs. Palmer will take a prominent part in the numerous society functions which take place in the course of the season.

Casualties.

The Bryce block at Port Huron, Mich., burned. Loss $100,000.

Thomas Coulton of Elwood, Ind., was probably fatally burned while sleeping. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Miss Ida Hedrick, living near Huntsville, Ill., was struck in the eye with a snowball, which pierced the eyeball, destroying the sight.

Arthur Droescher and Miss Anna Schultz, while coasting at Meadville, Pa., collided with an iron fence. Miss Schultz will die.

Elihu Rucker and his sixteen-year-old son were drowned at Clyffeside Park, Ky., while harvesting ice. The father was drowned while trying to rescue the boy.

The steamer Lamington, which went ashore off Long Hill life saving station on Long Island has been floated. The extent of the damage she has sustained cannot be ascertained until an examination in dry dock.

Fire broke out in the block occupied by the Binghamton (N. Y.) House Furnishing company and spread to the adjoining block, occupied by Babcock & Stowell, hardware dealers. Loss $250,000.

W. W. Wright, an undertaker of Sioux City, Iowa, is in danger of losing his right arm as a result of a scratch on his middle finger received while embalming the body of a woman. A serious case of blood poisoning ensued.

The Grace Presbyterian church in St. Louis was almost completely destroyed by fire recently because of a short water supply. Chief Swingley explains his reasons for not turning in a second alarm by stating that "there was hardly enough water to even supply the engines which responded to the first alarm. As it was a line of hose had to be stretched several blocks."

Evil Doings.

James McCauley, ex-city treasurer of Tacoma, Wash., has been convicted of using public money for private gain.

Nicholas Claussen, a baker of San Francisco, murdered his wife at the residence of a neighbor, where she had fled to avoid him. She was the mother of three children and very handsome.

SCRAP WITH SPAIN

THE UNITED STATES THOUGHT TO BE NEAR WAR.

A Mob at Barcelona Attacks the United States Consulate and Breaks the Windows—The Spanish Government Issues Orders for All Men-of-War to Prepare for Active Work.

Washington, March 1. — Beyond a question the United States is nearer war than it has been for many years. The temper of congress is strongly in favor of active intervention for the independence of Cuba and without doubt is prepared to commit this government to extreme measures in support of that position. Members of the senate and house of representatives have been overwhelmed with expressions of sympathy from every kind of organization and from hundreds of thousands of individuals, all indicative of eagerness for the liberation of Cuba, and not a man on the floor of either chamber has the slightest fear of offending his constituents in going to the extreme in this direction.

The American spirit has been so thoroughly aroused that congress and the president feel they have a practically unanimous indorsement in aiding the revolutionists, and it is only a question of a few hours when there will be an open declaration to the effect that Spain must either terminate hostilities on the island or admit the independence of the insurgents.

The first impulse was to put politics ahead of national patriotism and to confine the glory of the resolutions to congress. The tremendous enthusiasm with which the movement has been received by the country at large has very much broadened the views of the leaders of both branches of congress, and there is a manifest willingness to make the resolution joint in form so as to permit the president to participate in the performance.

(Copyright, 1896, by Associated Press.)

Madrid, March 3.—If one may judge by the things that have been said and some of the things that have been done to-day, the Spanish people are enthusiastically determined to go to war forthwith with the United States, and to speedily avenge the insult which, it is fancied, has been offered to the haughty pride of Spain by the United States senate in determining to recognize the Cuban provisional government as a belligerent power, and to ask the president to use his good offices with Spain to obtain recognition of Cuban independence.

Some of the organs of public opinion declare that the bankruptcy of the Spanish government would not prevent the Spanish people from taking up the quarrel on their own account and fitting out expeditions and maintaining themselves at their own expense while combatting the insolence of the assertions of the United States. The day has been characterized by many manifestations of public wrath and excitement, and in Barcelona 15,000 Spaniards went to the extreme of using violence upon the consulate of the United States and stoning it, breaking several windows in the building. No bodily harm was done to anybody except to certain members of the crowd, which was charged by the police and dispersed.

There seems to have been a notable increase of excitement and patriotic ardor among the people since yesterday, when the news of the senate's action was first made known. Such a stress of feeling as existed here to-day, if it continues for any length of time, cannot but afford a serious menace to the peaceful relations of the two countries.

The Spanish authorities seem to have felt apprehensions of the form the people's wrath might take, and provided special safeguards for the suppression of disorders and, especially for the protection of any official representative of the United States government.

Looks Like War.

The preparations of the government are not all of a peaceful character, however. It is significant that the minister of marine, Admiral Jose Maria Beranger, has issued orders for the training squadron to be prepared to sail. It is regarded as probable that this squadron will proceed shortly to Cuba.

It has also been ordered that all other warships available be forthwith armed and equipped and put into condition for active service. In addition to this, about fifty merchant steamers, available for the government service, will be provided with naval armament.

For the military branch of the service a fresh expedition of 20,000 infantry and 5,000 cavalry will be equipped and put on a war footing and will be kept in readiness to leave on the shortest notice. In view of the excited state of the public mind the United States legation in this city has been placed under the special surveillance of the police.

The student class seems to form a large proportion of the inflammatory element which is making so much noise. The students of this city are busily at work organizing a great demonstration of protest against the vote of the United States senate.

At Valencia yesterday all the students of the university paraded the streets and then gathered before the United States consulate, shouting: "Death to Uncle Sam," "Viva Spain," and "Long live the army." The excitement is intense throughout Spain.

Dying in Peru.

Lima, Peru, March 3. — It is announced that Archbishop Same and Gen. [illegible] are dying. President Pierola's daughter Victoria died last night.

Killed at a Crossing.

Marinette, Wis., March 3. — A carriage containing Ald. Louis Johnson of Menominee, Mich., his twelve-year-old son and five friends of Mr. Johnson, was struck by a Chicago & Northwestern train to-day at a grade crossing. The boy was killed and the five others were seriously injured.

[illegible] Dickinson says he has reliable information to the effect that the insurgents have won 90 per cent of all the battles fought during the present uprising.

CYCLONE IN CUBA.

Sounds of War Drowned by a Whirlwind.

Havana, March 3.—A terrible whirlwind passed through the towns of Rodas and Los Abreus at 7 o'clock in the evening, Feb. 28, doing an immense amount of damage. These towns are situated in the southwestern part of the province of Santa Clara. In Rodas the wind destroyed forty houses and injured a large number of persons, including the lieutenant of the detachment of civil guards. The wife of the military commander of the place was also wounded in the head so seriously that she has since died. The warehouse of Montalvo and the station platforms were destroyed. In Los Abreus the damage to life and property was even greater. A large number of houses were shattered and all traces of them obliterated. A white woman and a negro were killed and fifteen persons were seriously wounded, many having also disappeared. The families who had their houses destroyed took refuge at the fort. The money loss from the whirlwind has not been estimated, but it will be immense. The inhabitants are in a pitiable condition. Their loss on crops is very large.

A political prisoner was being sent from here to-day to Ceuta, the convict settlement in Africa, when he jumped overboard, and a guard killed him while he was swimming. The gunboat Mernan Cortes had a chase after a suspicious steamer off Matanzas. The steamer was running at full speed and she put out her lights when the gunboat appeared and disappeared in the darkness of the night. The gunboat first fired a blank cartridge and then a solid shot in an effort to stop the fugitive, but without effect.

Antonio Maceo is moving on the coast near Santa Cruz del Nort, in Havana province. The troops were in pursuit of him last night. Gunboats have left here to operate with the troops near Santa Cruz. Word has been received that 25,000 additional soldiers will sail soon from Spain for Cuba.

STATUE OF MARQUETTE.

Opposition to Having It Placed in the Capitol.

Washington, March 3.—The preparations for unveiling the statue of Father Marquette in statuary hall of the capitol have provoked an unexpected flurry in the house. Since the newspapers began printing notices of the forthcoming event a few days ago, members have been receiving many communications on the subject from their constituents, and to-day many called to make protests. Mr. Linton of Michigan, who is an advocate of A. P. A. doctrines, introduced a resolution to have the statue taken from the capitol, and the matter rivalled the Cuban question in the gossip of the floor. Threats to disfigure the statue have already been heard by the capitol police. An arrest has been made for such threats. It was that of a well dressed, well appearing man about fifty years old, who gave his name as Edward Jones of New York city, and who said he was here on a visit. He finally cooled down, however, and apologized to the captain for his words, and after being confined in the guard room for less than an hour he was permitted to go, which he did without demonstration. The man was escorted from the grounds by a member of the police force. The capitol authorities are exercising vigilance in seeing that no harm is done the statue, as threats of that kind have been made.

To avert any trouble over the unveiling of the statue the covering was removed to-day from the statue and will not be replaced. Judge J. W. Losey of Wisconsin and Sig. Trentanove, the sculptor, went to the capitol this morning and took the wrappings from the statue. No arrangements for a formal unveiling had been made, and Judge Losey, who represents the State of Wisconsin, which is the donor, concluded that the ceremony might be dispensed with. There will, however, be speeches in the senate this week by Senator Mitchell and others upon Father Marquette, and possibly some members of the Wisconsin delegation in the house will pay tribute to the eminent pioneer and missionary.

WHEAT ALL ABLAZE

BIG ELEVATOR IN MINNEAPOLIS DESTROYED BY FIRE.

Elevator A 2, Belonging to the Minneapolis Elevator Company, Is Burned, Together With 1,075,000 Bushels of Grain—The Loss Placed at $700,000—Insurance of $370,000 on the Grain.

Minneapolis, March 3.—By the burning of the Minneapolis terminal elevator A 2, a loss of $700,000 was entailed. The elevator cost $250,000 twelve years ago, but could be built to-day for about $100,000. It was owned by the Minneapolis Terminal Elevator company and contained 1,075,000 bushels of wheat, of which 207,000 bushels was owned by the Washburn-Crosby company, and the balance by the G. W. Van Dusen company. Insurance on the grain was $370,000.

The fire was discovered by the watchman at 7:15. When the department arrived on the scene flames were breaking through the roof. Nothing could be done by the department to arrest the progress of the flames in the interior of the building, and a successful effort was made to release the wheat from the bins in order to save the walls from bursting out. At this time the wind was blowing from the west, driving the fierce flames toward the other elevator, and suddenly a cry was heard that that elevator was also on fire. Chemicals were at once taken to the roof, and in a short time the incipient blaze was extinguished. One large stream was detailed to keep it thoroughly drenched with water. The wind in a short time changed to the northeast, and then very little fear was entertained for this structure. Sparks, however, were flying toward the residences on Hawthorne avenue, and the chemicals were kept busy constantly extinguishing roof fires.

The process of the fire was swift, and in a short time the corrugated iron sheeting began to fly through the air, endangering life and property, but, fortunately, through the vigilance of the firemen, every piece was watched. The south side wall first gave way and was soon followed by the west wall. The north wall stood out for a long time, but finally crumbled away before the fierce onslaught of the flames. The west wall stood out bravely, and, piece by piece, fell from the top. The wheat kept pouring out on the railroad tracks and was soon covered by a thin coating of ice.

REBELS ARE ROUTED.

Five Hundred Men Out of One Thousand Are Killed or Wounded.

Managua, Nic., March 3.—After six hours fighting at Mateare and Nagarola the government forces under Generals Paiz and Estrada have completely routed the rebels under Gen. Ortiz, and have captured a portion of the rebel artillery. These towns were recently captured by the government forces and occupied, pending the advance of the main body of the president's army. The enemy's force consisted of about 1,000 men, and the two towns mentioned were held by about an equal number of government troops. The fire of the government troops was so directed that 500 rebels were killed or wounded. The loss of the government was considerably less.

Enthusiastic Cubans.

Philadelphia, March 3.—The anniversary of the uprising of the Cuban patriots was made the occasion last night of a large and enthusiastic mass meeting of native Cubans and Americans in Warner hall. The enthusiasm was further intensified by the action of the house of representatives in according the insurgents belligerent rights. On the stage were pictures of George Washington and Jose Marti, while the American flag and the flag of Cuba were lovingly interwoven. The meeting was presided over by Dr. Guiteras, president of the United Cuban clubs of this city. The speeches were for the most part given in Spanish, in which Spain was denounced, the American government commended, and the early independence of Cuba prophecied.

Compete With the Combine.

St. Louis, March 3.—At a conference held to-day between representatives of tobacco firms not members of the American Tobacco company, it was decided to follow in the footsteps of the Drummond Tobacco company and Liggett & Meyers Tobacco company, of this city and manufacture cigarettes in competition with the big Eastern combine. There were present P. Lorillard Jr. for Lorillard & Co., Jersey City, N. J.; E. H. Ray, Middleton, Ohio; P. J. Sorg, of Middleton, Ohio; Col. W. C. Wetmore, of the Liggett & Meyers company, and John Drummond, of the Drummond company.

THE HUDSON ICE GORGE.

It Interferes With Railroad Travel Through the East.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., March 3. — A great ice gorge has been formed on the New York Central & Hudson River railroad tracks between Hudson and Albany, and no trains are running on the Hudson river division between these points. The road is covered with ice. In some places it is ten feet high and the tracks and telegraph poles for a distance of 700 feet have been washed out. A large force of laborers are at work clearing away the ice and repairing the damage, but it will probably be three days before trains can be run between Hudson and Albany. The railroad company is sending most of its through trains to and from the west over the Harlem division, and the Boston & Albany road via Chatham. The Empire State express went up on the Hudson division this morning, taking the Hudson branch of the Boston & Albany to Chatham and thence to Albany. All the ice in the river is on the move. Navigation between there and New York will be opened to-night. The ferries at Kingston, Newburgh and Poughkeepsie are running with difficulty.

Cattleman Killed.

Perry, Okla., March 3.—Near Pony postoffice, on the Cimmeron river, Claude Powell, twenty-two years old, knocked James Myers, a well known cattleman, in the head with a [illegible] of wood, killing him. Powell had eloped with Myers' daughter and married her. Myers overtook the couple just after the ceremony had been performed and proceeded to thrash Powell, resulting in his own death. Powell is under arrest.

SCRAP WITH SPAIN

THE UNITED STATES THOUGHT TO BE NEAR WAR.

A Mob at Barcelona Attacks the United States Consulate and Breaks the Windows—The Spanish Government Issues Orders for All Men-of-War to Prepare for Active Work.

Washington, March 1. — Beyond a question the United States is nearer war than it has been for many years. The temper of congress is strongly in favor of active intervention for the independence of Cuba and without doubt is prepared to commit this government to extreme measures in support of that position. Members of the senate and house of representatives have been overwhelmed with expressions of sympathy from every kind of organization and from hundreds of thousands of individuals, all indicative of eagerness for the liberation of Cuba, and not a man on the floor of either chamber has the slightest fear of offending his constituents in going to the extreme in this direction.

The American spirit has been so thoroughly aroused that congress and the president feel they have a practically unanimous indorsement in aiding the revolutionists, and it is only a question of a few hours when there will be an open declaration to the effect that Spain must either terminate hostilities on the island or admit the independence of the insurgents.

The first impulse was to put politics ahead of national patriotism and to confine the glory of the resolutions to congress. The tremendous enthusiasm with which the movement has been received by the country at large has very much broadened the views of the leaders of both branches of congress, and there is a manifest willingness to make the resolution joint in form so as to permit the president to participate in the performance.

(Copyright, 1896, by Associated Press.)

Madrid, March 3.—If one may judge by the things that have been said and some of the things that have been done to-day, the Spanish people are enthusiastically determined to go to war forthwith with the United States, and to speedily avenge the insult which, it is fancied, has been offered to the haughty pride of Spain by the United States senate in determining to recognize the Cuban provisional government as a belligerent power, and to ask the president to use his good offices with Spain to obtain recognition of Cuban independence.

Some of the organs of public opinion declare that the bankruptcy of the Spanish government would not prevent the Spanish people from taking up the quarrel on their own account and fitting out expeditions and maintaining themselves at their own expense while combatting the insolence of the assertions of the United States. The day has been characterized by many manifestations of public wrath and excitement, and in Barcelona 15,000 Spaniards went to the extreme of using violence upon the consulate of the United States and stoning it, breaking several windows in the building. No bodily harm was done to anybody except to certain members of the crowd, which was charged by the police and dispersed.

There seems to have been a notable increase of excitement and patriotic ardor among the people since yesterday, when the news of the senate's action was first made known. Such a stress of feeling as existed here today, if it continues for any length of time, cannot but afford a serious menace to the peaceful relations of the two countries.

The Spanish authorities seem to have felt apprehensions of the form the people's wrath might take, and provided special safeguards for the suppression of disorders and, especially for the protection of any official representative of the United States government.

Looks Like War.

The preparations of the government are not all of a peaceful character, however. It is significant that the minister of marine, Admiral Jose Maria Beranger, has issued orders for the training squadron to be prepared to sail. It is regarded as probable that this squadron will proceed shortly to Cuba.

It has also been ordered that all other warships available be forthwith armed and equipped and put into condition for active service. In addition to this, about fifty merchant steamers, available for the government service, will be provided with naval armament.

For the military branch of the service a fresh expedition of 20,000 infantry and 5,000 cavalry will be equipped and put on a war footing and will be kept in readiness to leave on the shortest notice. In view of the excited state of the public mind the United States legation in this city has been placed under the special surveillance of the police.

The student class seems to form a large proportion of the inflammatory element which is making so much noise. The students of this city are busily at work organizing a great demonstration of protest against the vote of the United States senate.

At Valencia yesterday all the students of the university paraded the streets and then gathered before the United States consulate, shouting: "Death to Uncle Sam," "Viva Spain," and "Long live the army." The excitement is intense throughout Spain.

Lima, Peru, March 3. — It is announced that Archbishop Samo and Gen. Canal are dying. President Pierola's daughter Victoria died last night.

Killed at a Crossing.

Marinette, Wis., March 3. — A carriage containing Ald. Louis Johnson of Menominee, Mich., his twelve-year-old son and five friends of Mr. Johnson, was struck by a Chicago & Northwestern train to-day at a grade crossing. The boy was killed and the five men were seriously injured.

Don M. Dickinson says he has reliable information to the effect that the insurgents have won 90 per cent of all the battles fought during the present uprising in Cuba.

CYCLONE IN CUBA.

Sounds of War Drowned by a Whirlwind.

Havana, March 3.—A terrible whirlwind passed through the towns of Rodas and Los Abreus at 7 o'clock in the evening, Feb. 28, doing an immense amount of damage. These towns are situated in the southwestern part of the province of Santa Clara. In Rodas the wind destroyed forty houses and injured a large number of persons, including the lieutenant of the detachment of civil guards. The wife of the military commander of the place was also wounded in the head so seriously that she has since died. The warehouse of Montalvo and the station platforms were destroyed. In Los Abreus the damage to life and property was even greater. A large number of houses were shattered and all traces of them obliterated. A white woman and a negro were killed and fifteen persons were seriously wounded, many having also disappeared. The families who had their homes destroyed took refuge at the fort. The money loss from the whirlwind has not been estimated, but it will be immense. The inhabitants are in a pitiable condition. Their loss on crops is very large.

A political prisoner was being sent from here to-day to Ceuta, the convict settlement in Africa, when he jumped overboard and a guard killed him while he was swimming. The gunboat Mernan Cortes had a chase after a suspicious steamer off Matanzas. The steamer was running at full speed and she put out her lights when the gunboat appeared and disappeared in the darkness of the night. The gunboat first fired a blank cartridge and then a solid shot in an effort to stop the fugitive, but without effect.

Antonio Maceo is moving on the coast near Santa Cruz del Nort, in Havana province. The troops were in pursuit of him last night. Gunboats have left here to operate with the troops near Santa Cruz. Word has been received that 25,000 additional soldiers will sail soon from Spain for Cuba.

STATUE OF MARQUETTE.

Opposition to Having It Placed in the Capitol.

Washington, March 3.—The preparations for unveiling the statue of Father Marquette in statuary hall of the capitol have provoked an unexpected flurry in the house. Since the newspapers began printing notices of the forthcoming event a few days ago members have been receiving many communications on the subject from their constituents, and to-day many called to make protests. Mr. Linton of Michigan, who is an advocate of A. P. A. doctrines, introduced a resolution to have the statue taken from the capitol, and the matter rivalled the Cuban question in the gossip of the floor. Threats to disfigure the statue have already been heard by the capitol police. An arrest has been made for such threats. It was that of a well dressed, well appearing man about fifty years old, who gave his name as Edward Jones of New York city, and who said he was here on a visit. He finally cooled down, however, and apologized to the captain for his words, and after being confined in the guard room for less than an hour he was permitted to go, which he did without demonstration. The man was escorted from the grounds by a member of the police force. The capitol authorities are exercising vigilance in seeing that no harm is done the statue, as threats of that kind have been made.

To avert any trouble over the unveiling of the statue the covering was removed to-day from the statue and will not be replaced. Judge J. W. Losey of Wisconsin and Sig. Trentanove, the sculptor, went to the capitol this morning and took the wrappings from the statue. No arrangements for a formal unveiling had been made, and Judge Losey, who represents the State of Wisconsin, which is the donor, concluded that the ceremony might be dispensed with. There will, however, be speeches in the senate this week by Senator Mitchell and others upon Father Marquette, and possibly some members of the Wisconsin delegation in the house will pay tribute to the eminent pioneer and missionary.

WHEAT ALL ABLAZE

BIG ELEVATOR IN MINNEAPOLIS DESTROYED BY FIRE.

Elevator A 2, Belonging to the Minneapolis Elevator Company, Is Burned, Together With 1,075,000 Bushels of Grain—The Loss Placed at $700,000—Insurance of $370,000 on the Grain.

Minneapolis, March 3.—By the burning of the Minneapolis terminal elevator, A 2, a loss of $700,000 was entailed. The elevator cost $250,000 twelve years ago, but could be built to-day for about $100,000. It was owned by the Minneapolis Terminal Elevator company and contained 1,075,000 bushels of wheat, of which 207,000 bushels was owned by the Washburn-Crosby company, and the balance by the G. W. Van Dusen company. Insurance on the grain was $370,000.

The fire was discovered by the watchman at 7:15. When the department arrived on the scene flames were breaking through the roof. Nothing could be done by the department to arrest the progress of the flames in the interior of the building and a successful effort was made to release the wheat from the bins in order to save the walls from bursting out. At this time the wind was blowing from the west, driving the fierce flames toward the other elevator, and suddenly a cry was heard that that elevator was also on fire. Chemicals were at once taken to the roof, and in a short time the incipient blaze was extinguished. One large stream was detailed to keep it thoroughly drenched with water. The wind in a short time changed to the northeast, and then very little fear was entertained for this structure. Sparks, however, were flying toward the residences on Hawthorne avenue, and the chemicals were kept busy constantly extinguishing roof fires.

The process of the fire was swift, and in a short time the corrugated iron sheeting began to fly through the air, endangering life and property, but, fortunately, through the vigilance of the firemen, every piece was watched. The south side wall first gave way and was soon followed by the west wall. The north wall stood out for a long time, but finally crumbled away before the fierce onslaught of the flames. The west wall stood out bravely, and, piece by piece, fell from the top. The wheat kept pouring out on the railroad tracks and was soon covered by a thin coating of ice.

REBELS ARE ROUTED.

Five Hundred Men Out of One Thousand Are Killed or Wounded.

Managua, Nic., March 3.—After six hours' fighting at Matearis and Nagarolo the government forces under Generals Paiz and Estrada have completely routed the rebels under Gen. Ortiz, and have captured a portion of the rebel artillery. These towns were recently captured by the government forces and occupied, pending the advance of the main body of the president's army. The enemy's force consisted of about 1,000 men, and the two towns mentioned were held by about an equal number of government troops. The fire of the government troops was so directed that 500 rebels were killed or wounded. The loss of the government was considerably less.

Enthusiastic Cubans.

Philadelphia, March 3.—The anniversary of the uprising of the Cuban patriots was made the occasion last night of a large and enthusiastic mass meeting of native Cubans and Americans in Warner hall. The enthusiasm was further intensified by the action of the house of representatives in according the insurgents belligerent rights. On the stage were pictures of George Washington and Jose Marti, while the American flag and the flag of Cuba were lovingly interwoven. The meeting was presided over by Dr. Guiterns, president of the United Cuban clubs of this city. The speeches were for the most part given in Spanish, in which Spain was denounced, the American government commended and the early independence of Cuba prophecied.

Compete With the Combine.

St. Louis, March 3.—At a conference held to-day between representatives of tobacco firms not members of the American Tobacco company, it was decided to follow in the footsteps of the Drummond Tobacco company and Liggett & Meyers Tobacco company of this city and manufacture cigarettes in competition with the big Eastern combine. There were present P. Lorillard, Jr., of Lorillard & Co., Jersey City, N. J.; F. H. Ray, Middleton, Ohio; P. J. Sorg, of Middleton, Ohio; Col. W. C. Wetmore, of the Liggett & Meyers company, and John Drummond, of the Drummond company.

A Voluntary Liquidation.

Baraboo, Wis., March 3.—The Baraboo Savings bank, which was first organized here by P. T. Brewster in 1880, has gone into voluntary liquidation, and has notified all its depositors to draw their money before April 15. The bank closed its doors during the panic of 1893. A few weeks later it was again opened under a new management, but the bank has not done a profitable business, and it was decided by the principal stockholder, J. M. Jenks of Minneapolis, to wind up its affairs.

THE HUDSON ICE GORGE.

It Interferes With Railroad Travel Through the East.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., March 3. — A great ice gorge has been formed on the New York Central & Hudson River railroad tracks between Hudson and Albany, and no trains are running on the Hudson river division between these points. The road is covered with ice. In some places it is ten feet high and the tracks and telegraph poles for a distance of 700 feet have been washed out. A large force of laborers are at work clearing away the ice and repairing the damage, but it will probably be three days before trains can be run between Hudson and Albany. The railroad company is sending most of its through trains to and from the west over the Harlem division and the Boston & Albany road via Chatham. The Empire State express went up on the Hudson division this morning, taking the Hudson branch of the Boston & Albany to Chatham and thence to Albany. All the ice in the river is on the move. Navigation between here and New York will be opened to night. The ferries at Kingston, Newburgh and Poughkeepsie are running with difficulty.

Cattleman Killed.

Perry, Okla., March 3.—Near Pony postoffice, on the Cimmeron river, Claude Powell, twenty-two years old, knocked James Myers, a well known cattleman, in the head with a billet of wood, killing him. Powell had eloped with Myers' daughter and married her. Myers overtook the couple just after the ceremony had been performed and proceeded to thrash Powell, resulting in his own death. Powell is under arrest.

Resort to Arbitration.

Paris, March 3.—M. Berthelot, the minister for foreign affairs, gave an audience to-day to the Brazilian minister, who is armed with power to arrange for arbitration of the matters in dispute regarding the possession of the Amapa territory. The Brazilian minister submitted a project for a mixed commission to control the disputed territory pending a definite settlement of the dispute.

Independence of Corea.

New York, March 3. — A dispatch from St. Petersburg says: The Novosti in an editorial says that Russia will maintain the independence of Corea, and that if Japan continues intriguing Russia may be forced to occupy the peninsula. Japan must consider that if she wishes to acquire Corea this means war with Russia.

The result of the municipal election in the second division of Vienna has been the return of thirty-two anti-Semites and fourteen Liberals.

The question of bonding the city of Rochester for $15,000 to build a new bridge across the Zumbro river at Fifth street was submitted to the voters at a special election, and resulted as follows: Five hundred and seventy-four against and ninety-seven for.

David Vaugh was found insensible on the street at Duluth and was taken up as a drunk. He spent the night in jail, and in the morning it was discovered that he had been sandbagged and was likely to die. The police are looking for his assailant.

Winona is soon to be given an insurance rerating. The last time this was done was in the summer of 1892, but on account of the large amount of building since then it is found necessary to do this again. The rate is high and the citizens are clamoring for lower rates.

An extra train, pulling logs on the Brainerd & Northern railway, collided with a team and load of logs on a crossing twelve miles from Brainerd. Fireman Alvan Falconer jumped and, falling on the logs, sustained serious injuries about the head and limbs. He was taken to the Lumbermen's hospital, and will recover.

It is stated positively at the interior department today that the opening of agricultural lands in the Red Lake Indian reservation will not be delayed by the states claim to the swamp land Neither will there be any delay over the boundary question, It is proposed to reserve all lands involved in these disputes If no settlement is reached before the time they are advertised The area of the land opened will be about the same as origanaly proposed as late returns have added about 200,000 acres to that origanally schedulded for opening.—Minneapolis Journal.

The New York chamber of commerce invites all commercial bodies to join in a petition to congress not to disturb the present standard of values Then it must be that congress can disturb the standard of values. The New York chamber of commerce has no objection to congress disturbing the standard of values so long as the disturbance tends to make money dearer and property cheaper, Those who own property and pay interest naturally are interested the other way. The entire Northwest being so heavily burdened with bonds and mortgages that it cannot produce enough to meet maturing interest, our property is fast passing into the hands of Eastern capitalist that is why they dont want the standard of values disturbed, so that this process may go on, —Midway News.

The populist are very sore over the action of Senator Cronkhite, and he will probably be asked to resign as senator from Marshall county by the populists Whether he will do this or not remains to be seen, but is is likely he will not.

The republicans are not hugging themselves over the accession to their ranks of the Marshall county senator and if he expects them to send him to senate, he is liable to be disappointed, They think that a man who is elected by any political party should at least serve out the term for which he was elected, and be true to the best interest of his constituents. Traitors are not welcomed by any party, and if a man will desert one party without any apparent warning he will desert another such a man is dangerous in any party and especially in a political position.—Crookston Tribune.

The Thief River Falls Cornet Band will give a grand ball on the evening of St. Patrick's Day, and are arranging to make it a grand success, socially. Everybody is invited to come and have a good time. Tickets 75 cents. Supper ou extra.

President D. W. Hines of the Farmers Railroad, is meeting with unexpected success in the East in the sale of bonds for the purpose of purchasing iron and rolling stock for the new railroad, He has visited many of the Eastern cities, but principally New York and Washington and Chicago on the way. According to message sent by him the bonds are selling like hot cakes at $6,000 per mile and drawing five per cent interest, President Hines estimates the cost of the road at $4,000—much less than was origanlly supposed President Hines will visit West Superior for a couple of days on his return and the Commercial club committee of that city is making the effort to have the $10,000 stock subscription raised at once.—Crookston Tribune.

Here We Are

The annual village election occurs next Tuesday and rumors have been lively the past week. A caucus has been called to meet at the village hall tomorrow, thursday night, there are candidates galore and at this writing it is certain that there will be men enough to fill every office and some to spare. The following as near as can be learned are in the hands of their friends. If we have overlooked any one we hope the mistake will be over looked.

For President S. m Dainard, C. G Rapp, E. M Hoff Dan Patterson M. Z Epperson.

Recorder J. L. Johnson E. M Hoff

Council men Freeman, Brink Berg Bjerk Dahl Hall Arthur Jones Dainard Sorsoleil.

Treasurer L. Holmes L. K Kolstad J. C Dahl

Assessor E. S Burkee M Jackson

Street Commissioners S. Harris P. S Stranahan

Constable D. Patterson C. A Brink August Patterson,

Justice of the Peace O. H. Peters J. L. Johnson.

The Tidende published in this city has laid out the work for the populists this year, It says that from all signs there will be a general change in the personnel of the court house attaches, with the exception of John Gleeson and John Vig. The latter being elected for four years. Treasurer Beaudry will hardly be elected again as he has already had the office three terms.

Judge Benson is said to be in disgrace already. County Attorney Gossman was taken up because there was nobody better. County Supt. McGrillis had all he could do to win last time and his friends are fewer than ever, while he has the French and Swedes on his side The Norwegian and Americans are against him, Reg. of Deeds Wickstrom they say is in doubt about. The Tidendes surprise was great when one of the populist leaders proposed Oppegaard for Sheriff Steenersons shoes; and they suggest that since the commissioner is such an honest man as he is said to be he should be made probate Judge, as there is need of honesty in that position. And so the pot begins to boil.—Crookston Times.

Inspite of the oft repeated assertion of the gold bugs of the country that the silver craze is dying out the New York Chamber of Commerce finds it necessary to pass resolutions in favor of what it is pleased to call sound money and to enter upon an aggressive campaign in favor of such money. If this silver money be dead—or be fast reaching its final end, as these gentlemen have the public understand why do they find it necessary to organize a campaign against it? The conduct of the gold bugs of the country is decidely inconsistent with their oft repeated and announced theory, It is not surprising however, that a paradox should be found in all they do When a body of men band themselves together under the dominion of foreign powers to destroy one of the primary moneys of this country there can be no doubt of the greatest possible necessity for inconsistency of talk and action.—Penny Press.

AT
WINONA, MANKATO, ST. CLOUD
AND MOORHEAD.

These schools are organized for the training of teachers for the public schools of the state.

ORGANIZATION.—Each school comprises two departments—the Normal Department and the Training Department or Model School.

The Normal Department embraces:

(a) An elementary course of two years for teachers of rural district, and elementary grades.

(b) An advanced course of five years for teachers of advanced grades.

(c) A professional course of two years for graduates of high schools,

(d) A kindergarden training course, (at Winona, St. Cloud and Mankato.)

ADMISSION.—Graduates of high schools and colleges and teachers holding county superintendents' first and second grade certificates are admitted without examination. All others are required to pass an entrance examination.

EXPENSES.—Tuition is free to all who pledge themselves to teach in Minnesota. Text books are furnished at a rental of $3 per year. Provision is made in each school for economical living. The average cost of furnished rooms with board is about $3 per week. The Ladies' Home at St. Cloud offers board, furnished room heat and light at $3 per week. The new dormitory at Moorhead, and the ladies' Home at Winona furnish similar accommodation at a slightly higher rate. Winona accommodation $3.50 per week

The next school year opens at Winona September 2nd; at Mankato, September 2nd; at St Cloud September 3rd; at Moorhead September 3rd.

SECOND STORY ADVERTISING.

Value of Upper Windows For Catching the Eyes of the Passing Crowds.

There is a man in this town who has probably devised more advertising schemes than any other New Yorker who is not a theatrical press agent, and he has never been known to use another man's idea but once. The one scheme that was not his own is the second story show window, but when he went into that sort of advertising he did it on such a scale that, although he is out of it now, the results of his short experience are seen all over the town.

The second story window as a means of advertising is used in a variety of ways, the most common being for some sort of exhibition of athletic or sporting goods. It is the outgrowth, without doubt, of the custom of putting cigar and cigarette makers, candy pullers and pancake bakers in the front windows of ground floor shops to attract the attention of passersby.

If such schemes worked well for the side of the street nearest the shop, the second story ought to attract the notice of those across the street. If you have ever seen such a show, you must have noticed how well it worked. The crowd is never jammed up against the window, obstructing the street in front of the store.

The sporting goods men are able to make more of the second story show window than men in other business because their advertising arrangements are not studies in still life. A man or boy working a chest weight or a rowing machine or punching a bag will attract attention much quicker and hold it much longer than a stream of water passing over a water wheel and running through a filter. A good many men use the second story window for display of their goods, particularly along the lines of the elevated roads, but such displays cannot compare in success with the schemes of advertisers who employ men in their shows. It is the action which catches the eye and attracts attention. In lower Fifth avenue there is a very elaborate display of old furniture and antiques in a second story window, but you may stand in front of that store all day and not see a dozen persons stop to look at the exhibition. Put a man in that window, however, and set him to punching a bag, and there will be a crowd across the street which will require the attention of the police.

In Broadway, a few blocks below Thirtieth street, there is one of these exhibitions of athletic goods in the second story. A muscular, well built man in a gymnasium suit punches a bag, works chest weights and tries a rowing machine. The result is that the afternoon promenade is seriously interrupted. A sporting goods house in Broadway, opposite where the Hale statue now stands in City Hall park, used to have a man stand in the window and punch a bag just at the time when the crowds were passing through the park going home.

It always kept a park policeman busy moving on those who stopped to see the show. The master advertiser's show was located in Broadway, opposite an up town hotel. He employed two girls, who used to climb up on a platform just the height of the window, and exercise with chest weights. They wore short skirts and jerseys. They took turns at the work, alternating with a very fat little boy and a very athletic looking young man. This show always collected a crowd in front of the hotel, but when there were added to the exhibition a piano player and a man who sat in the window and caught tin fishes out of a pail, the crowds got to be such a nuisance that the hotel men invoked the city ordinances which prescribe that such shows are nuisances. Then there was a compromise, and the show was toned down.—New York Sun.

Where Total Eclipses Are Rare.

It is a fact well known to astronomers that the average number of total and partial eclipses in any one year is four; that the maximum is seven and the minimum two. Where only two occur they are always both of the sun. There are a great many more eclipses of the sun in the course of a year or 100 years than there are of the moon; this fact notwithstanding, however, London, the metropolis of the world, seems to be a place where such obstructions of the sun's light seldom occur.—St. Louis Republic.

"Do you understand," asked the sabbath school teacher, "what is meant when we say that time shall be no more?"

"Yes'm," answered Tommy. "It means when the clock stops."—Indianapolis Journal.

WOMEN'S "LITTLE WAYS."

This Writer Thinks Them Among the Most Important Things.

Here is something an observing person writing in the London Queen says:

"How many people depend almost entirely upon little ways in their progress through life! They have no special talents to witch the world with, no great intellectuality, no curious gift, but they have a brilliant sense of self consciousness that enables them to invent and to judge of their inventions, appraise them, reject those which are worthless, retain those which are of value. And the inventions which they retain are called their little ways. How many women, for instance, have been successful in life simply because 'they have such a way with them!' They are not pretty. Their sister women regard them with undisguised amazement, marveling what any man can see in them. And the men themselves could hardly tell you why they are attracted. They say of a certain little lady, 'Oh, she's awfully taking,' but cannot explain why. But the aforesaid little lady can, you may depend upon it.

"Probably in early life, looking forth upon the future, after long glances into her mirror, she resolved what should be her armor for the fray into which she was entering. There were many weapons which she might take up. She selected two or three out of the heap, and henceforth they became her little ways. One is a smile perhaps, an odd, original, innocent smile, that makes her look like a child or a baby, although, heaven knows, she must be well over 30; another is a turn of the head that causes the neck to fall into a lovely line from chin to bosom; a third is a pensive expression of wistful appeal that floats into her eyes and softens her mouth and suggests infinite possibilities and a longing for sympathy. That longing for sympathy! How it knocks a man over! He has it, too, or thinks he has, which is almost the same thing. And so he responds to the artificial with the real and worships at the shrine of little ways. Perhaps one would not wander far from the truth in saying that the world is ruled by little ways. Depend upon it, Helen had some, and the siege of Troy would never have been necessary but for a woman's graceful wiles. Cleopatra probably brought Antony to her feet by some tiny trick of quivering an eyelid that no other woman ever had.

"There is no special reason for believing that Mary, queen of Scots, was a very exceptional beauty, and many people are inclined to believe rather that she was a plain female, who owed her undoubted fascination to her little ways. Men have their little ways too. The beau sabreur has a manner of mustache lifting that suggests chivalry and is quite irresistible. The young fashionable actor knows how to assume a graceful melancholy, a vague ethereal despair that draws the crowd. At home, over a steak and a bottle of stout, he is jolly enough. He has discarded his little ways. After all, little ways may smack of insincerity, but they make life full of variety. We could scarcely do without them. And so let us be thankful for them, nor condemn the artfulness that sometimes rises to high art."

An English Johnnie.

Mr. George Grossmith, Jr., has been explaining the ways and manners of the English Johnnie. "I am a Johnnie myself," he said, "and can speak authoritatively about the character. When Johnnie rises in the morning, he does not take breakfast. He takes a brandy and soda. Then he goes on to his tailor and pays a friendly call. From the tailor Johnnie strolls on to Piccadilly and walks that thoroughfare till 1. Then he lunches at his club, the Wellington or the Isthmian. After luncheon he hurries home to change his clothes. He goes out again and walks Burlington Arcade till dinner time. In the evening he goes to the Gaiety or the Empire, the only places of amusement in London that he honors with his presence. There is no restaurant for him but the Savoy. There is no wine for him but champagne. There are no women in the world for him but Letty Lind and May Yohe. I was a Johnnie myself. I couldn't marry Letty Lind, so I married her sister."

Up to Date.

"I will thank you not to use that quotation again, Miss Philler," coldly observed the editor of The New Woman, pointing out a sentence in an editorial article that had been submitted for her approval.

Miss Philler understood. She took the manuscript back to her own room and changed "No man is a hero to his valet" to "No woman is a heroine to her maid."—Chicago Tribune.

The Millionaire's Offense.

"That millionaire yonder has cheated me out of a fortune."

"How? Wouldn't he let you marry his daughter?"

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of nine hundred and thirty-two dollars, which is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Ole P. Stokke and Tehue Stokke his wife mortgagors, to Dakota Investment Company, mortgagee, bearing date the 3rd day of August 1889, and, with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota, on the 7th day of August 1889, at 2:30 o'clock p. m. in Book 43 of mortgages on page 54 and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

Scrofula

Infests the blood of humanity. It appears in varied forms, but is forced to yield to Hood's Sarsaparilla, which purifies and vitalizes the blood and cures all such diseases. Read this:

"In September, 1894, I made a misstep and injured my ankle. Very soon afterwards,

A Sore

two inches across formed and in walking to favor it I sprained my ankle. The sore became worse; I could not put my boot on and I thought I should have to give up at every step. I could not get any relief and had to stop work. I read of a cure of a similar case by Hood's Sarsaparilla and concluded to try it. Before I had taken all of two bottles the sore had healed and the swelling had gone down. My is now well and I have been greatly benefited otherwise. I have increased in weight and am in better health. I cannot say enough in praise of Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. H. BLAKE, So. Berwick, Me.

A Wealthy Tramp.

John Swim, a miser, well known over the Central Western states, through which he has roamed as a tramp for the last fifty years, died on his farm, near Alton, Ohio, the other day, aged 104 years. Stories of his wealth have been published from time to time, but his miserly instincts kept even John J. Chester, a local attorney, his guardian, from knowing the extent of his possessions. He owned a farm on which he was living, consisting of seventy-eight acres, and is supposed to have a large amount of money hidden.

Ten years ago Swim was robbed of $10,000 while on a tramp, and as he recognized his assailants, he had them arrested. At the trial they made fun of the old man, saying that he had never seen so much money. To convince the jury that he might have had the sum he took from the belts about his body at the time $78,000 and counted it before their eyes. Swim told his attorney afterward that he had buried this near Indianapolis.—New York Sun.

Romance of a Grown-Up Baby.

A romantic marriage occurred in Atlanta on Sunday afternoon, the parties to it being Mr. H. P. Bailey of Jackson, Mich., and Miss Hodges of Virginia. Mr. Bailey is somewhat past fifty years of age and the bride about thirty. The couple first met during the war, when Miss Hodges was a baby. It happened when the Northern soldiers approached Jackson, Miss. The parents of Miss Hodges resided there at that time, and when the grand rush to avoid the Yankees was made, Mr. Bailey, then a Confederate soldier, secured a wagon and removed the Hodges family. In the hurry and excitement the little girl was forgotten, and she was not missed until the family had gone several miles. Mr. Bailey volunteered to go back and find her, which he did. The child was found in the road, near her home, crying. Mr. Bailey carried her to her parents. Soon after that Mr. Hodges moved with his family to Virginia, and Mr. Bailey saw them no more for thirty years. Last year his wife died, and it occurred to him to look up his old friends and see what had become of the little girl whom he had saved from the invaders in the long ago. He went to Virginia and found her teaching school. They corresponded and agreed to meet at Atlanta during the fair and be married.—Baltimore Sun.

THE CLASS OF HORSES.

Profit in Breeding Horses Depends on the Breed.

It is all in breeding the right kind of horses whether they pay or not. If we breed the proverbial all-purpose horse for our own use, he does not sell for enough to pay for his feed. Out of the thousands of horses pouring into the Chicago market there are but few of any special class suited to the markets, and most of them are sold as rubbish for $50 or $75, and they cannot be raised for that. The foreign buyers are surprised that they cannot find more good, big draft horses and fine, stylish coachers among so many thousand horses; nor can they find good large military horses, now so much in demand in all the European countries; and our own army officers are eagerly looking through the Chicago and other markets for remounts for our cavalry, but thus far have not been able to find horses of the regulation requirements. City merchants, manufacturers and teamsters are wanting more good, heavy draft horses, and the Chicago exchange reports a good demand for high-class carriage, coach and business horses, express and good draft horses. The Eastern buyers are looking for good draft and coach horses more than ever before, but have to be content with such horses as are offered at less price. Farmers should look to the market and breed horses to suit the markets, rather than to suit their own individual tastes, especially when these high-class draft and coach horses are quite as good for the farm work as the little, cheap horses, and once we use them on the farm we will never give them up. Breed for size and quality to suit the markets.—Western Agriculturist.

Weighing Stock.

Here is my plan to have fair dealings with stock buyers, and no room to complain without reason: Take some strong, light material 2x2 inches and make two frames 4½x4½ feet. Cover one frame with pine boards ½-inch thick, boards running across. In each side piece bore small holes 6 inches apart. Now take small wire and thread from one hole to another until you have a wire cage (about 3½ feet high) with the exception of the ends. Make two light swinging doors from ½-inch pine, attach to the upper frame, then place two strong wires to the upper frame to meet together in the swivel of the main scales, which every farmer possesses, and your hog, calf or sheep rack is ready. If made according to directions the weight need not exceed 30 or 40 pounds. Set the cage by a high fence post, then set another post of the same height on the opposite side; suspend the scales from a cross-piece, then fix a chute by nailing two 10-foot planks in an angling manner from the fence, close your forward door, run the hog in, shut the rear door and weigh him. Then open forward door to let him out and you are ready for another. By putting both weights on the scales a 400-pound animal can be weighed. This has saved me many dollars I am sure.—J. S. Morrison in Practical Farmer.

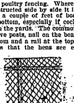
Proper Way to Construct a Poultry Fence.

Poultry netting is now so cheap that it has come to supersede all other kinds of poultry fencing. Where yards are constructed side by side it is well to have a couple of feet of boarding at the bottom, especially if cocks are to run in the yards. The common plan is to drive posts, nail on the boards at the bottom and a rail at the top. The result is that the hens see exactly where the top of the fence is, and will thus give trouble by flying over it. If the rail is placed a foot below the top, as shown in the sketch, this trouble will be obviated, as the hens will be greatly deceived as to the position of the top—a hen not having the most remarkable of discriminating powers. The rail in the position shown will properly brace the fence and give all needful rigidity to it.—Orange Judd Farmer.



Improved Wire Fence.

Are Hogs Scarce?

No one can travel through the hog belt and have any doubt left on his mind with respect to whether hogs are scarce or not. There is no question about the short condition of the entire swine-growing region. The "bear" side at the live-stock markets, however, still keeps a stiff upper lip and goes whistling through a very dark forest to keep its courage up, maintaining that the farmer is holding his hogs in order to feed his cheap corn to them. Those of us in closer touch with the hog-growers of the country know a great deal better than this. One farmer writes us that the cholera has carried off nearly a thousand hogs in his school district, by actual count, and it has attacked every herd in the district except four; that all hogs that could be shipped in time were shipped, and that there are now remaining in the district less than four hundred hogs by actual count, including all ages and sizes. Our "bear" friends would be surprised if they knew in how many districts this actual enumeration could be duplicated. Those who have been trading largely on the theory that hogs were still plenty in the country, will, without any doubt, be a good deal wiser before they are richer from their deals. In this connection we note that the Breeders' Gazette mentions that the average weight of hogs received at the Chicago market is growing appreciably lighter, the decrease in average weight being about five pounds a week, and it very properly adds that this "does not hint very strongly that farmers are holding back their hogs on the cheap corn."

Care of Angora Goats in Winter.

Except in some favored districts, goats should have in this country some extra [illegible] winter season, and they should be kept entirely under roof in cold, wet spells. The quantity of food necessary to keep them in good condition varies according to the climate, but one-fourth of a pound of corn, or its equivalent in other grain, and one-half to three-fourths of a pound of hay at a ration once a day (in the evening) is sufficient; if the pasture is scant they ought to have it both morning and evening; and on wet, cold days, when they are kept in the stable all day, feed them three times. They should be taught early to eat their hay chopped, moistened and sprinkled with bran, oil meal or corn meal, which, as it digests easier if given in that way, will save about 20 per cent of the feed.

Goats do not require much water, and rarely drink more than one and a half pints at a time, and in winter considerably less. Avoid watering early in the morning, but rather do so during the warm part of the day, and when stabled never immediately after a meal. Cold alone does not hurt goats after they are three or four weeks old, and I have seen goats frolicking in the snow on a sunny day, with the mercury about zero, and sleeping at night, in an open shed.—Secretary Hoerle, American Mohair Growers' Association.

Foolish Sheep.

The rape plant furnishes an excellent food for sheep. It is not only possessed of great fattening properties but sheep grow very fond of it when they become accustomed to it. In fact, there is then danger that they will consume too much of it. But when sheep have never before eaten rape they will oftentimes not touch it at all until compelled to do so by hunger. Instances have come to the notice of the writer in which sheep have run in a pasture, a part of which consisted of rape, and yet they did not eat the rape at all, but confined themselves to other pasture. Nevertheless, as soon as they begin to eat it their fondness for it grows. They get to like it so well in a short time that they will first pick it all out when growing along with other food. When, therefore, a farmer sows rape for the first time, and he finds that his sheep will not eat it, he should not in anywise be discouraged. If the sheep can be confined to the rape they will soon take kindly to it, and there will be no more trouble on that score. The sheep which refuse to eat rape are certainly foolish; but they will soon learn wisdom. The rape plant is more and more coming into favor, and those who have never sown it should not be deterred from doing so because of any statements which they may have heard to the effect that sheep do not like it.—Northwestern Farmer.

The Age to Turn off Brood Sows.

No age can be fixed upon that will be found equally applicable to all conditions. As a rule, good brood sows are turned off too young. A sow is usually considered at her best for producing when she is about full-grown. This period will vary in pigs of different breeds. One sow may not be fully grown until say four years old. Another, of a smaller breed, may be matured at three. Good, quiet sows that have proved good breeders and good nurses should be kept as long as they will produce good litters and nurse them well. Oftentimes, however, when they get large and heavy, they will destroy some of their young by lying down upon them. In other instances, they get particularly apt in opening gates and doors, and in working a free passage into a grain field. When they become so wise and so expert they should, of course, be promoted to the fattening pens. But, where everything is right, think many times before turning off a good sow in the full prime of vigor. William Bernhardt of Pipestone, Minn., once kept a brood sow until she was twelve years old. She produced two litters a year during all this time after the first year. Such an animal is possessed of great value.—Northwestern Farmer.

Clean Sleeping Places for Hogs.

Everyone who has tried it knows how difficult it is to keep the bedding clean and comfortable in a hog house in the winter season. And yet it should be so kept if the swine are to do as well as they ought to. J. A. Dobbin, in the Ohio Farmer, submits the following plan, the value of which he has proved in his own experience: He divides the sleeping apartment by placing a board on edge about six inches high, and on one side he puts the bedding, on the other side the pigs deposit their droppings. The bedding is changed as often as necessary. The old bedding is strewn over the part where the droppings are deposited, and this part is cleaned out as often as the old bedding is changed. The old litter is used as an absorbent of the liquid voidings. By this system the beds are kept clean and dry. The absorbent thus used goes far to prevent waste in the fertilizer, and the results generally are satisfactory. When the bedding is thus protected it is surprising how careful the pigs will be not to foul it with their voidings.—Northwestern Farmer.

Pigeon Roost Fifty Years Ago.

Pigeon Roost, Scott county, Indiana, received its name from being the nightly rendezvous of the passenger, or wild pigeons. These pigeons usually selected some heavily-wooded or elevated locality for their roosting, bordering on their feeding grounds, which might be several hundred miles in extent. The pigeons usually commenced to arrive before sunset and continued in increasing numbers until after midnight. At daybreak the birds would begin to leave the roost, and on swift wing depart for their feeding grounds, miles away, returning at night, as stated. It may safely be said that these birds ranged the forests of Indiana from the Wabash to the Ohio, and extended far into Kentucky. So large were their roosts that they became localities of great interest. None was more famous than the one in Finley township, Scott county, Indiana; hence the name of the settlement early established there—Pigeon Roost.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

The Kind Word society, having for its object the finding of country homes for girls and women who are tired of the life of the city and who are willing to enter domestic service, has in the few years of its existence, already placed between 2,000 and 3,000 girls. These girls are usually unfamiliar with the duties they will be called upon to perform, having passed their previous existence in trying to earn livelihoods as clerks, in sewing, or in various other occupations that left them cold, hungry and ill. They go to homes where the mistress who receives them is willing to teach them all the useful and helpful things she knows. One of Lincoln's Jokes.

This is a brand-new Lincoln story, and true, like all of this series:

President Lincoln reached Meade Station, near Petersburg, soon after a serious battle, in which about 2,000 Confederates were made prisoners. Gen. Meade was on the president's left and Col. George D. Ruggles on his right. On their way to headquarters they rode to a point where they could see the large assemblage of prisoners. With the prisoners were many colored servants and laborers.

"Mr. Lincoln," said Gen. Meade, "I guess Ruggles did not overestimate the number of men captured."

Mr. Lincoln checked his horse, deliberately surveyed the field full of Gordon's disarmed men and the contrabands, and said: "Yes, general, the number is there in black and white."—Chicago Times-Herald.

GRASS IS KING! HURRAH!!

Shout for joy. The green grass rules. It's more valuable than oats, wheat and corn together. Luxuriant meadows are the farmer's delight. A positive way to get them and a very sure one we know is to sow Salzer's Extra Grass Mixtures. No need of waiting a life time either. Salzer has a mixture, sown in April, producing hay in June. Many farmers report yields of six tons of magnificent hay per acre. Over one hundred different kinds of grasses, clovers, Teosinte, Sand Vetch, Giant Spurry and Fodder plants! 35 packages earliest vegetables for $1.00.

If you will cut this out and send with 10c. postage to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., you will receive free ten grass and grain samples and their mammoth seed catalogue. Catalogue alone 5c. for mailing. w.n.

Newest Mourning Bonnets.

The widow's bonnet in mourning continues to be either the Mary Stuart or the capote shape, simply covered with English crape, having the white ruching in front and with dull black ties. The veil of course hides all but the extreme edge of the bonnet. For lighter mourning, where no veil is worn, the small poke shapes are seen having their edges defined with dull jet and decorated with high loops of dull black ribbon. The silk bonnets, no matter how light the mourning may be, are no longer counted good form. The French milliners are using quantities of dull jet and much silk crape upon crape bonnets, but this rather elaborated style of trimming for mourning is not counted good form by either the English or American milliners. One rule always stands—a mourning bonnet should always have ties of the dull shade of black ribbon.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Lax Social Customs.

Don't let us say that we wouldn't trust our daughters and our sons anywhere; let us keep our faith whole and unbounded in them, but do let us revise our ideas a little as to what is right and proper in our social customs. If our social customs were not so lax; if young girls were not left alone with young men so often and for so long a time, there would be few daughters of respectable homes go astray. Mothers cannot longer close their eyes to this question; the souls of their daughters are in their hands, and they owe it to themselves, to their daughters, and to society to throw every possible protection around them.—Womankind.

A Wealthy Tramp.

John Swim, a miser, well known over the Central Western states, through which he has roamed as a tramp for the last fifty years, died on his farm, near Alton, Ohio, the other day, aged 104 years. Stories of his wealth have been published from time to time, but his miserly instincts kept even John J. Chester, a local attorney, his guardian, from knowing the extent of his possessions. He owned a farm on which he was living, consisting of seventy-eight acres, and is supposed to have a large amount of money hidden.

Ten years ago Swim was robbed of $10,000 while on a tramp, and as he recognized his assailants, he had them arrested. At the trial they made fun of the old man, saying that he had never seen so much money. To convince the jury that he might have had the sum he took from the belts about his body at the time $78,000 and counted it before their eyes. Swim told his attorney afterward that he had buried this near Indianapolis.—New York Sun.

Romance of a Grown-Up Baby.

A romantic marriage occurred in Atlanta on Sunday afternoon, the parties to it being Mr. H. P. Bailey of Jackson, Mich., and Miss Hodges of Virginia. Mr. Bailey is somewhat past fifty years of age and the bride about thirty. The couple first met during the war, when Miss Hodges was a baby. It happened when the Northern soldiers approached Jackson, Miss. The parents of Miss Hodges resided there at that time, and when the grand rush to avoid the Yankees was made, Mr. Bailey, then a Confederate soldier, secured a wagon and removed the Hodges family. In the hurry and excitement the little girl was forgotten, and she was not missed until the family had gone several miles. Mr. Bailey volunteered to go back and find her, which he did. The child was found in the road, near her home, crying. Mr. Bailey carried her to her parents. Soon after that Mr. Hodges moved with his family to Virginia, and Mr. Bailey saw them no more for thirty years. Last year his wife died, and it occurred to him to look up his old friends and see what had become of the little girl whom he had saved from the invaders in the long ago. He went to Virginia and found her teaching school. They corresponded and agreed to meet at Atlanta during the fair and be married.—Baltimore Sun.

LIVE STOCK

THE CLASS OF HORSES.

Profit in Breeding Horses Depends on the Breed.

It is all in breeding the right kind of horses whether they pay or not. If we breed the proverbial all-purpose horse for our own use, he does not sell for enough to pay for his feed. Out of the thousands of horses pouring into the Chicago market there are but few of any special class suited to the markets, and most of them are sold as rubbish for $50 or $75, and they cannot be raised for that. The foreign buyers are surprised that they cannot find more good, big draft horses and fine, stylish coachers among so many thousand horses; nor can they find good, large military horses, now so much in demand in all the European countries; and our own army officers are eagerly looking through the Chicago and other markets for remounts for our cavalry, but thus far have not been able to find horses of the regulation requirements. City merchants, manufacturers and teamsters are wanting more good, heavy draft horses, and the Chicago exchange reports a good demand for high-class carriage, coach and business horses, express and good draft horses. The Eastern buyers are looking for good draft and coach horses more than ever before, but have to be content with such horses as are offered at less price. Farmers should look to the market and breed horses to suit the markets, rather than to suit their own individual tastes, especially when these high-class draft and coach horses are quite as good for the farm work as the little, cheap horses, and once we use them on the farm we will never give them up. Breed for size and quality to suit the markets.—Western Agriculturist.

Weighing Stock.

Here is my plan to have fair dealings with stock buyers, and no room to complain without reason: Take some strong, light material 2x2 inches and make two frames 4½x4½ feet. Cover one frame with pine boards ¾-inch thick, boards running across. In each side piece bore small holes 6 inches apart. Now take small wire and thread from one hole to another until you have a wire cage (about 3½ feet high) with the exception of the ends. Make two light swinging doors from ½-inch pine, attach to the upper frame, then place two strong wires to the upper frame to meet together in the swivel of the main scales, which every farmer possesses, and your hog, calf or sheep rack is ready. If made according to directions the weight need not exceed 30 or 40 pounds. Set the cage by a high fence-post, then set another post of the same height on the opposite side; suspend the scales from a crosspiece, then fix a chute by nailing two 10-foot planks in an angling manner from the fence, close your forward door, run the hog in, shut the rear door and weigh him. Then open forward door to let him out and you are ready for another. By putting both weights on the scales a 400-pound animal can be weighed. This has saved me many dollars I am sure.—J. S. Morrison in Practical Farmer.

Proper Way to Construct a Poultry Fence.

Poultry netting is now so cheap that it has come to supersede all other kinds of poultry fencing. Where yards are constructed side by side it is well to have a couple of feet of boarding at the bottom, especially if cocks are to run in the yards. The common plan is to drive posts, nail on the boards at the bottom and a rail at the top. The result is that the hens see exactly where the top of the fence is, and will thus give trouble by flying over it. If the rail is placed a foot below the top, as shown in the sketch, this trouble will be obviated, as the hens will be greatly deceived as to the position of the top—a hen not having the most remarkable of discriminating powers. The rail in the position shown will properly brace the fence and give all needful rigidity to it.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Are Hogs Scarce?

No one can travel through the hog belt and have any doubt left on his mind with respect to whether hogs are scarce or not. There is no question about the short condition of the entire swine-growing region. The "bear" side at the live-stock markets, however, still keeps a stiff upper lip and goes whistling through a very dark forest to keep its courage up, maintaining that the farmer is holding his hogs in order to feed his cheap corn to them. Those of us in closer touch with the hog-growers of the country know a great deal better than this. One farmer writes us that the cholera has carried off nearly a thousand hogs in his school district, by actual count; and it has attacked every herd in the district except four; that all hogs that could be shipped in time were shipped, and that there are now remaining in the district less than four hundred hogs by actual count, including all ages and sizes. Our "bear" friends would be surprised if they knew in how many districts this actual enumeration could be duplicated. Those who have been trading largely on the theory that hogs were still plenty in the country, will, without any doubt, be a good deal wiser before they are richer from their deals. In this connection we note that the Breeders' Gazette mentions that the average weight of hogs received at the Chicago market is growing appreciably lighter, the decrease in average weight being about five pounds a week, and it very properly adds that this "does not hint very strongly that farmers are holding back their hogs on the cheap corn."

Care of Angora Goats in Winter.

Except in some favored districts, goats should have in this country some extra rations and shelter during the winter season, and they should be kept entirely under roof in cold, wet spells. The quantity of food necessary to keep them in good condition varies according to the climate, but one-fourth of a pound of corn, or its equivalent in other grain, and one-half to three-fourths of a pound of hay at a ration once a day (in the evening) is sufficient; if the pasture is scant they ought to have it both morning and evening; and on wet, cold days, when they are kept in the stable all day, feed them three times. They should be taught early to eat their hay chopped, moistened and sprinkled with bran, oil meal or corn meal, which, as it digests easier if given in that way, will save about 20 per cent of the feed.

Goats do not require much water, and rarely drink more than one and a half pints at a time, and in winter considerably less. Avoid watering early in the morning, but rather do so during the warm part of the day, and when stabled never immediately after a meal. Cold alone does not hurt goats after they are three or four weeks old, and I have seen goats frolicking in the snow on a sunny day, with the mercury about zero, and sleeping at night in an open shed.—Secretary Hoerle, American Mohair Growers' Association.

Foolish Sheep.

The rape plant furnishes an excellent food for sheep. It is not only possessed of great fattening properties but sheep grow very fond of it when they become accustomed to it. In fact, there is then danger that they will consume too much of it. But when sheep have never before eaten rape they will oftentimes not touch it at all until compelled to do so by hunger. Instances have come to the notice of the writer in which sheep have run in a pasture, a part of which consisted of rape, and yet they did not eat the rape at all, but confined themselves to other pasture. Nevertheless, as soon as they begin to eat it their fondness for it grows. They get to like it so well in a short time that they will first pick it all out when growing along with other food. When, therefore, a farmer sows rape for the first time, and he finds that his sheep will not eat it, he should not in anywise be discouraged. If the sheep can be confined to the rape they will soon take kindly to it, and there will be no more trouble on that score. The sheep which refuse to eat rape are certainly foolish; but they will soon learn wisdom. The rape plant is more and more coming into favor, and those who have never sown it should not be deterred from doing so because of any statements which they may have heard to the effect that sheep do not like it.—Northwestern Farmer.

The Age to Turn off Brood Sows.

No age can be fixed upon that will be found equally applicable to all conditions. As a rule, good brood sows are turned off too young. A sow is usually considered at her best for producing when she is about full-grown. This period will vary in pigs of different breeds. One sow may not be fully grown until say four years old. Another, of a smaller breed, may be matured at three. Good, quiet sows that have proved good breeders and good nurses should be kept as long as they will produce good litters and nurse them well. Oftentimes, however, when they get large and heavy, they will destroy some of their young by lying down upon them. In other instances, they get particularly apt in opening gates and doors, and in working a free passage into a grain field. When they become so wise and so expert they should, of course, be promoted to the fattening pens. But, where everything is right, think many times before turning off a good sow in the full prime of vigor. William Bernhardt of Pipestone, Minn., once kept a brood sow until she was twelve years old. She produced two litters a year during all this time after the first year. Such an animal is possessed of great value.—Northwestern Farmer.

Clean Sleeping Places for Hogs.

Everyone who has tried it knows how difficult it is to keep the bedding clean and comfortable in a hog house in the winter season. And yet it should be so kept if the swine are to do as well as they ought to. J. A. Dobbin, in the Ohio Farmer, submits the following plan, the value of which he has proved in his own experience: He divides the sleeping apartment by placing a board on edge about six inches high, and on one side he puts the bedding, on the other side the pigs deposit their droppings. The bedding is changed as often as necessary. The old bedding is strewn over the part where the droppings are deposited, and this part is cleaned out as often as the old bedding is changed. The old litter is used as an absorbent of the liquid voidings. By this system the beds are kept clean and dry. The absorbent thus used goes far to prevent waste in the fertilizer, and the results generally are satisfactory. When the bedding is thus protected it is surprising how careful the pigs will be not to foul it with their voidings.—Northwestern Farmer.

Pigeon Roosts Fifty Years Ago.

Pigeon Roost, Scott county, Indiana, received its name from being the nightly rendezvous of the passenger, or wild pigeons. These pigeons usually selected some heavily-wooded or elevated locality for their roosting, bordering on their feeding grounds, which might be several hundred miles in extent. The pigeons usually commenced to arrive before sunset and continued in increasing numbers until after midnight. At daybreak the birds would begin to leave the roost, and on swift wing depart for their feeding grounds, miles away, returning at night, as stated. It may safely be said that these birds ranged the forests of Indiana from the Wabash to the Ohio, and extended far into Kentucky. So large were their roosts that they became localities of great interest. None was more famous than the one in Finley township, Scott county, Indiana; hence the name of the settlement early established there—Pigeon Roost.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

Stock Notes.

To feed straw profitably it should be mixed with more concentrated foods.

No matter how low prices of feed may be it will pay better to feed it to stock of good quality than to scrubs.

The sheep is an animal that needs petting, as a rule, to produce the best results.

Such a winter as the one about closing, there is danger of having the quarters too warm for the sheep.

Somewhere in the Southwest there are thousands of hogs that are as wild as the old razor backs, the descendants of a herd of Berkshires turned loose.

It helps sales of swine to some extent to have uniformity. Many think there is nothing that sells so well as a batch of 225 pound pigs all exactly alike.

The Kind Word society, having for its object the finding of country homes for girls and women who are tired of the life of the city and who are willing to enter domestic service, has in the few years of its existence, already placed between 2,000 and 3,000 girls. These girls are usually unfamiliar with the duties they will be called upon to perform, having passed their previous existence in trying to earn livelihoods as clerks, in sewing, or in various other occupations that left them cold, hungry and ill. They go to homes where the mistress who receives them is willing to teach them all the useful and helpful things she knows. One of Lincoln's Jokes.

This is a brand-new Lincoln story, and true, like all of this series:

President Lincoln reached Meade Station, near Petersburg, soon after a serious battle, in which about 2,000 Confederates were made prisoners. Gen. Meade was on the president's left and Col. George D. Ruggles on his right. On their way to headquarters they rode to a point where they could see the large assemblage of prisoners. With the prisoners were many colored servants and laborers.

"Mr. Lincoln," said Gen. Meade, "I guess Ruggles did not overestimate the number of men captured."

Mr. Lincoln checked his horse, deliberately surveyed the field full of Gordon's disarmed men and the contrabands, and said: "Yes, general, the number is there in black and white."—Chicago Times-Herald.

GRASS IS KING! HURRAH!!

Shout for joy: The green grass rules. It's more valuable than oats, wheat and corn together. Luxuriant meadows are the farmer's delight. A positive way to get them and a very sure one we know is to sow Salzer's Extra Grass Mixtures. No need of waiting a life time either. Salzer has a mixture, sown in April, producing hay in June. Many farmers report yields of six tons of magnificent hay per acre. Over one hundred different kinds of grasses, clovers, Teosinto, Sand Vetch, Giant Spurry and Fodder plants! 35 packages earliest vegetables for $1.00.

If you will cut this out and send with 10c. postage to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., you will receive free ten grass and grain samples and their mammoth seed catalogue. Catalogue alone 5c. for mailing. w.n.

Newest Mourning Bonnets.

The widow's bonnet in mourning continues to be either the Mary Stuart or the capote shape, simply covered with English crape, having the white ruching in front and with dull black ties. The veil of course hides all but the extreme edge of the bonnet. For lighter mourning, where no veil is worn, the small poke shapes are seen having their edges defined with dull jet and decorated with high loops of dull black ribbon. The silk bonnets, no matter how light the mourning may be, are no longer counted good form. The French milliners are using quantities of dull jet and much silk crape upon crape bonnets, but this rather elaborated style of trimming for mourning is not counted good form by either the English or American milliners. One rule always stands—a mourning bonnet should always have ties of the dull shade of black ribbon.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Lax Social Customs.

Don't let us say that we wouldn't trust our daughters and our sons anywhere; let us keep our faith whole and unbounded in them, but do let us revise our ideas a little as to what is right and proper in our social customs. If our social customs were not so lax; if young girls were not left alone with young men so often and for so long a time, there would be few daughters of respectable homes go astray. Mothers cannot longer close their eyes to this question; the souls of their daughters are in their hands, and they owe it to themselves, to their daughters, and to society to throw every possible protection around them.—Womankind.

MR. BURLEIGH DEAD

PARALYSIS CAUSES THE EX-CONGRESSMAN'S DEATH.

He Represented Dakota in Congress Twenty-Five Years Ago—He Was the Father of Receiver Burleigh of the Northern Pacific—Rear Admiral Henry Walke Passes Away in Brooklyn.

Yankton, S. D., March 10—Ex-Congressman W. A. Burleigh, father of Receiver Burleigh, of the Northern Pacific, died here last night of paralysis. Mr. Burleigh was well known throughout the Northwest. Twenty-five years ago he represented Dakota in congress. Since then he had been engaged as Indian agent, government contractor, railroad contractor and steamboat operator. In 1872 he graded and ironed the Northern Pacific from Fargo to Bismarck.

New York, March 10.—Rear Admiral Henry Walke died at his home in Brooklyn to-day. Henry Walke was born in Virginia eighty-eight years ago. His father, Anthony Walke, was a college student at Yale with John C. Calhoun. When quite young the deceased was taken to Ohio, receiving his education at the Chillicothe academy. In 1827 he became a midshipman in the navy, being assigned to the frigate Alert, under command of Lieut. Farragut. He was executive officer of the brig Vesuvius, being present at the surrender of Vera Cruz, during the Mexican war. During the rebellion he commanded the gunboats Taylor and Lexington and protected Grant's army while it was making its retreat on the transports. He was also at the battle of Fort Henry in charge of the gunboat Carondelet. He was successful in getting this boat past Island No. 10 on April 4, 1862, while the enemy's shots fell on it like hail. For this piece of work the commander was honorably mentioned. In 1862, for his bravery, he was made a captain; in 1866, commodore, and a rear admiral in 1870. One year later he retired, having the proud distinction of being the first officer to do so voluntarily to give the younger men a chance.

Butte, Mont., March 10.—Matt Maguire and Jacob Henke, miners, were instantly killed last night by an explosion of powder in their cabin at the Madison mine, near Sheridan. The cause of the explosion is unknown.

CHICAGO MYSTERY.

Chicago, March 10.—Carefully concealed in a barrel and covered with a mass of old rags and cotton the dead bodies of a gray-haired man and a new born babe were found in an alley in Hyde Park. In consequence the police are working on what they consider a double murder. Only one clew is in their possession, and on the discovery of the identity of a woman, as yet unknown to the police, depends the possible solution of the mystery.

Early this morning the office in Rolston's Hyde Park morgue was rung up on the telephone, and a woman who declined to give either her name or address, asked if the body of a man had been found in Hyde Park. The office attendant replied in the negative and then questioned the woman, but his best efforts failed to get any information of a decided character, although she told the clerk she was looking for a man who was missing. She was finally prevailed upon to give his description, which she did in minute detail. She astonished the morgue attendant by saying in conclusion that he would certainly learn more about the case later on. Four hours later the barrel with its ghastly contents was discovered in the rear of the house at 4820 Indiana avenue. The body of the man tallied in almost every respect with the description furnished by the mysterious woman over the telephone wire, and the police unhesitatingly connected her with the case. In the barrel also was the body of a boy not over ten days old.

J. A. Nurse, residing in Prairie avenue, in the alley at the rear of his home, discovered a barrel which aroused his curiosity. Breaking open the head of the receptacle he was horrified upon seeing the hacked body of an old man inside. It was entirely nude and was frightfully mutilated. Covering the corpse was a thick layer of cotton. The police were at once notified and the barrel was removed to the morgue.

The head and trunk gave every evidence of foul play, the skull showing several deep wounds. On the left forearm were tattooed five spots close together. There was nothing else to give any clue to the man's identity. After the several pieces of the body had been lifted from the barrel the body of the baby was found. It was nude, save for a thin flannel shirt, and there were two marks on the side of the head, apparently made with a blunt instrument. The body of the elder male was that of a man between sixty-five and seventy years old.

The police laugh at the theory that it was the work of medical students, and are positive in their statements that the man and child were murdered.

Spaniards Win, of Course.

Havana, March 10.—An important is officially reported to have taken place in the central portion of Matanzas province. Col. Vicuna reports that he met a force of insurgents numbering 7,000 and led by Maximo Gomez, Antonio Maceo, Lacret and others at the plantation of Diana and Alabrus, in the district of Corral Falso. They were dislodged from their position by the troops and made a precipitate flight toward San Miguel de Los Ranos. The insurgent loss is reported to be 71 killed and 42 wounded left on the field, as well as numerous others carried off. The insurgents also lost 200 horses. The loss of the troops was 3 killed and 17 wounded.

Miraculous Escape.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 10.—The south-bound Sunset limited, the Southern Pacific transcontinental flyer, was wrecked last night near Puente. The train was running at a high rate of speed on the down grade, when it struck a horse. The engine was derailed and five of the six cars followed suit. The dining car, which was in the rear, was the only one that remained upon the rails. Strange to say no one was hurt. The passengers were transferred to a local train and arrived in this city three and a half hours late.

Cabinet Formed.

Rome, March 10—It was announced last night that the Marquis di Rudini had succeeded in forming a cabinet with himself as premier and minister of the interior, and Gen. Ricotti, minister of war. It developed later that the formation of the cabinet had been undertaken by Gen. Ricotti. King Humbert conferred with Gen. Ricotti and charged him with the formation of a cabinet. The result was a cabinet made up, as already cabled, Gen. Ricotti yielding to the Marquis di Rudini the premiership, and himself assuming the portfolio of war, as indicated above.

Released on Bail.

San Francisco, March 10.—Mrs. Mary A. Davidson, now awaiting trial in the superior court charged with extorting $500 from Rev. C. O. Brown, was released on bail to-day. Her bail was reduced to $3,000 two weeks ago.

ASSAULTED BY THREE.

Irate Contractors Attack the Superintendent of a Court House.

St. James, Minn., March 11.—While Mr. Burge, superintendent of construction of Watonwan county's new court house here, was attending to his duties in the court house he was assaulted, it is alleged, by the contractors, Conrad & Kleinschmidt, and Frank Witmouth, one of their employes. The three men, it is stated, attacked the superintendent in the basement among a lot of barrels and old rubbish, where there was no avenue of escape, one of the men holding his hands while another pounded him about the head and face with his fists, and Witmouth striking him with a piece of flooring. The county commissioners, as well as all the citizens here, are very indignant over this attack upon the superintendent, and this trouble may be disastrous to the contractors in the end. Mr. Burke is considered by the commissioners a first-class superintendent, and the contractors took offense at the superintendent condemning portions of their work. No action has yet been taken by the superintendent.

"PLANTED" HER AT HUDSON.

A Missing Witness Located Who May Help Indict a Doctor.

Minneapolis, March 8.—Inspector Stavlo returned from a mysterious trip last evening with Eliza Erickson, of 1011 Fifth street south, whom the inspector took into custody at Hudson, Wis. She makes criminal charges against a well known doctor of this city and a slaughter house foreman, both of whom will be known as soon as the evidence is developed. Early in February Miss Erickson was taken ill, and Dr. Barber, of Franklin and Fifteenth avenues south, and Dr. Rome, of Riverside and Cedar avenues found that a criminal operation had been performed. The woman was questioned closely, and, according to the statement of Inspector Stavlo, implicated a well known doctor on Washington avenue. The facts in the case were laid before the grand jury on Feb. 21, and while that body was discussing them Miss Erickson was spirited away by the man who was responsible for her condition.

Spring Medicine

Your blood in Spring is almost certain to be full of impurities—the accumulation of the winter months. Bad ventilation of sleeping rooms, impure air in dwellings, factories and shops, overeating, heavy, improper foods, failure of the kidneys and liver properly to do extra work thus thrust upon them, are the prime causes of this condition. It is of the utmost importance that you

Purify Your Blood

Now, as when warmer weather comes and the tonic effect of cold bracing air is gone, your weak, thin, impure blood will not furnish necessary strength. That tired feeling, loss of appetite, will open the way for serious disease, ruined health, or breaking out of humors and impurities. To make pure, rich, red blood Hood's Sarsaparilla stands unequalled. Thousands testify to its merits. Millions take it as their Spring Medicine. Get Hood's, because

Syrup of Figs

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

Commissioner Lamoreux of the general land office has affixed his signature to a decision denying the right of the state of Minnesota to the swamp lands shown by the surveyors of the ceded portions of the Red Lake and White Earth reservations The commissioner discusses exhaustively all the law point raised by the state and dismisses them all as having no effect In passing from the first point made by the state he holds that the swamp grant to Minnesota was not a present grant that the title of the state must first be confirmed; That the determination of the character of the lands was a necessary preliminary to the confirmation of the title of the state and this could not come until after the surveys. In the oral argument in which the states claim 40 acres on section 30 was recently presented it was reiterated over and over again that the grant was a grant in praesenti and that the state must present evidence to show the character of the land in 1860 the date of the grant.—Minneapolis Journal.

Washington D. C. Feb. 18, 1896. I. O Brandt.

Dear Sir:—In reply to yours of the 12th I beg leave to say that a prior settlement if followed up with an entry at the land office within thirty days, will take precedence over an entry made by another party subsequent to the initiation of the settlement. The man who makes the first settlement and improvement on the land if the same is made before anyone else has made a filing or entry at the land office and if followed up with a proper filing or entry at the land office will hold the land. The first and subsequent annual installment will not have to be paid until the end of each year. Under ruling of the Department when a person has had a preemption claim and has proved up on it he is not entitled to take a homestead under the law. As the law was originally framed by me in the House of Representatives and as it passed that body it provided that anyone could take a homestead under this act who had not exhausted both his homestead and preemption rights. But the senate modified it and in order to get the bill passed, the House had to concur in the amendment.

Yours truly Knute Nelson

HOOSIER DIALECT.

James Whitcomb Riley, the Poet, Understands It Thoroughly.

Hoosier dialect has become a feature in polite literature. James Whitcomb Riley has constructed a ladder out of it, climbing as he built, till, at last, he has written his name upon the skies. Before his advent in letters no attempt had been made to systematically study it and reduce its printed use to a science. A lowly dialect had been evolved out of the necessities of humorous squibbists, but it was spurious and illegitimate. This bastard dialect is still used by the average newspaper man and by ambitious writers who think that dialect is dialect and that there is nearly no right or wrong about it. To one familiar with legitimate dialect this Volapuk variety is very trying. It falls as harshly upon his taste as the unintentional bad grammar of a literary pretender does upon that of a scholar. It shocks and disgusts.

There are only half a dozen persons in the world, besides Riley, who can correctly write western dialect. Perhaps Richard Lew Dawson ranks next to him. Eugene Field, brilliant and fascinating as he is, is not always perfect in his dialect. His very best dialect work, in the writer's judgment, is "Jim's Kids." The conceit is original and noble, the development of it naturally dramatic and the climax tragically pathetic. Its dialect is flawless. His boy dialect is a little faulty, as seen in "Jes' Before Christmas." Still the poem is a magnificent piece of verbal art.

If it is true that not more than one editor in 20 knows what true poetry is, it is truer that not one in 100 knows what legitimate dialect poetry is. Our magazines are rejecting better poetry than they publish half the time. It is no little bit of a task to learn Hoosier dialect. It is an impossible one to most easterners and nearly so to any one who has not been much in the social substratum of the west.

Only those whose pursuits or habits have thrown them much into the society of the humbler classes are capable of reproducing their method of speech. Even then, unless they are close observers and are peculiarly endowed, they can never succeed in dialect writing. If you want to write dialect tolerably, study Riley. He is the supreme authority in this literary branch. Study his use of words, his phraseological method, his spelling. Learn first to avoid the commoner errors of the bastardists, such as writing ter for to, nater for naicher, jest for jes', thet for that, etc. Spell correctly, not as the rustic himself would. Don't write it tuff, but tough. Write it so that the reader must pronounce it as the illiterate westerner speaks it. Study Riley, too, if you would correctly write child dialect. This, of course, varies according to the age of the child supposed to be represented.

There is a place in literature for dialect. Some of the ultra literary question its right in the legitimate domain of letters, regarding it as intellectually cheapening and as being concessionary to ignorance. The fact is there are emotional shades and spiritual sensations, intrinsic to the essence of dialect, which are found nowhere else, and they possess all the highborn value of feelings grammatically evolved. What light in scholarly purism, what attic possibility in verbal jewelry (under grammatical control), could reproduce the peculiar flavor left in your consciousness after reading Riley's "When the Frost Is on the Punkin and the Fodder In the Shock?"—New Bohemian.

Glass Wool and Its Uses.

Glass wool is one of the best filtering materials. It is quite equal in many respects to filters made of asbestus. As a packing for conduit pipes for hot acidified vapors or liquids, as well as nonconductors of heat, glass wool, worked into thread weaves or felt, serves excellently for packing rings, washers and so forth around high pressure boilers in candle factories. In fact, it is used for almost any purpose where packing is required which will resist the chemical action of acid liquids or vapors, as well as heat. It is made either in straight or curled wool and can be felted or woven. Its chemical constituents can be varied to meet almost any requirement in chemical science.—Philadelphia Record.

She Was Posted.

"Strange," remarked Mrs. Brown. "I have rung at Mrs. Smith's door three times this week, and I didn't succeed in arousing any one. I suppose the family is out of town."

"Possibly," replied Mrs. Jones, "but Mrs. Smith was telling me just now that she could tell your ring among a thousand."—Spare Moments

CLOSE TO A FORTUNE.

The Man Who Might Have Traded a Pair of Mules For Chicago's Site.

Major Abe Austin is a type of the old school westerner who retains all the elements peculiar to that school. He has spent more than 30 years beyond the Mississippi, and during that period he has met everything peculiar to a pioneer's life. A reporter for the New York Mercury met him recently at one of the Broadway hotels. The tall, bronzed major leaned back in his chair, blew a cloud of smoke from a fragrant cigar and queried:

"Did you ever hear that Chicago at one period of its existence very narrowly escaped being 'swapped' for a pair of mules? It's worth telling, I think, if you never heard about it. The story sounds like fiction, but it's a fact, I assure you. It all came about in this way: My father pulled up at Chicago along in the forties, toting along with him everything he possessed on earth, and it wasn't much of a load, I can assure you—just an old carpetsack and a chunk of a boy. That boy was myself. Well, as I say, he landed there in Chicago, but at that time a few scattered log cabins was all there was to it. It was only a pioneer settlement, and a shaky one at that. I was a small, bandy legged lad, just big enough to stand guard over our scant worldly possessions when we had pitched our tent, while my father skirmished around for an outfit. He was making grim preparations to begin life over again, this time in the overland freight business.

"He had bought a wagon from a Connecticut Yankee, who had barely landed on the shore of Lake Michigan, a swampy wilderness, when the 'tall Yankee timber' got the ague, and it mighty soon had the western fever shaken out of him. Our outfit was completed when my father traded a small tract of Ohio land for a blocky little team of mules. Well, preparations were at once made to leave with the next overland wagon train.

"I think it was on the very morning that we were breaking camp preparatory to leaving on our first trip over the long trail to the continental divide that a tall, bronzed woodsman came into camp. I well remember that his long, frowsy hair, grizzled beard and formidable display of revolvers gave me a decidedly uncomfortable feeling. I fully expected to be perforated or flayed alive by this rough looking specimen of the woods. He seated himself on a stump and greeted us with:

"'I reckon, stranger, ye must be goin ter take a trip overland?'

"'Yes,' replied my father, and he went on harnessing the mules.

"'Waal, pa'dner, I own this patch of timber land hereabouts and had calc'lated ter stay hyar, but now I've got er notion ter go furder west an try my luck at minin. Now, how would yer like ter 'swamp' that pair o' mules fer this quarter section o' timber?'

"My father considered the proposition for a few minutes and then declined to make the 'swap.' It was the mistake of his life, for that quarter section of timber lies in what is now the hub of the city of Chicago. The land for which my father refused to swap a pair of flea bitten mules is now worth untold millions."

Exit Tomkins.

Tomkins is one of those gentlemen of kind disposition who are ever on the outlook for a chance to improve their neighbors' minds. Seeing a man, apparently a country fellow, sitting on the fence, regarding the telegraph wires carefully, Tomkins approached.

"Watching the wires, eh?"

"Yes, sir."

"Waiting to see a message go by, eh?"

The man smiled, and "Yes, sir," he replied. Then Tomkins spoke kindly to him and explained the mystery of the electric current, and that the messages were invisible, and finished up, "Now you know something about it." Then, as he was going away, he said, by the way, "What do you work at?"

"Me and my mate over yonder are telegraph workers, and we're just putting up a new wire."—Pearson's Weekly.

Pronunciation.

"You know there are some people of high intelligence who seem never to learn how to spell," said Mr. Glimmerton, "and then there are some that are just as far off in pronunciation. I think I might enter this last class myself and not be last in it, but I never could hope to get ahead of the man that I heard the other day pronouncing Ceres, Sears."—New York Sun.

Convinced.

A hunter, while roaming in the woods of Cromwell, Conn., recently, came upon an excavation in a bank. Turning over an iron vessel which was imbedded in the sand, he found a note in an envelope, the contents of which were, "We are satisfied that Captain Kidd's treasure is not buried here."

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of five hundred and eighty-seven dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice, upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Mary A. Holovik and Hans M. Holovik her husband mortgagors, to Security Trust Company of Nashua N. H. mortgagee, bearing date the 17th day of December 1890 and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota, on the 10th day of December 189[illegible] at 2:30 o'clock p. m. in book 5[illegible] of mortgages, on page 112 Which said mortgage together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Security Trust Co. of Nashua N. H. mortgagee to Mrs. Sarah D Cooper by written assignment dated on the 7th day of January 1891 and recorded in the office of the Register of deeds on the 24th day of January 1891 at 8:45 o clock a. m., in Book 56 of mortgages, on page 81 and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof

Now therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said Mortgage, viz:

The [illegible] quarter of Section 18, in Township One hundred and Forty-seven in Range Forty-five in Polk County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Polk County at the front door of the court House in the city of Crookston in said County and state on the 8th day of June 1895 at 10 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises and fifty dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said Mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated March 1st A. D. 1895.

Perfumed Butter.

Perfumed butter is becoming very fashionable at some American breakfast and tea tables in the large eastern cities. The butter is made into pats and stamped with a floral design, and is then wrapped in thin cheese cloth and placed on a bed of roses, violets or carnations arranged in a flat-bottomed dish. Over these is placed a layer of flowers, so that the butter pattles are imbedded in flowers. They are then placed on ice, where they are allowed to remain for several hours. This butter is eaten with crisp Vienna rolls, accompanied only by a cup of chocolate or delicious Mocha. Fads and fadlets—what in the name of Caesar are we coming to?

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS ANNUALLY.

And more could be made by the farmers if they would plant Salzer's big cropping seeds, because Salzer's seeds sprout, grow and produce, giving you from 4 to 6 tons of hay per acre, over 200 bu. of corn, 116 bu. of barley, 1,200 bu. of potatoes, 209 bu. Silver Mine Oats and the like per acre. These are positive facts, all of which can be substantiated by oath. Now, the editor asks why sow poor seeds and get poor yields, when such big, bountiful yields are possible? Salzer's catalogue tells you all about it.

If you will cut this out and send it with 10 cents postage to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., you will receive their mammoth catalogue and 10 samples of grain and grass seeds, worth $10 to anybody to get a start from. Catalogue alone, 5 cents postage. w.n.

WAR AGAINST EVIL.

The Indian Kills Only That Which is a Menace to his Life, or What is Necessary for the Preservation of his Health.

His Activity and Foresight has Proved a Blessing to Civilization.

Thousands Living To-day, who but for him Would Long Since Have Been in Their Graves.

EVILS of Nature do exist. Why, man has never been able to determine. Nature, however, stands ready to make amends for her faults, by giving us a remedy for every evil of her making.

Where the deadly rattlesnake flourishes there grows a weed whose juice when applied to the wound caused by its bite acts as an antidote. So it is with other poisons and disease; there exists somewhere in Nature's garden a cure.

To the "red man," obliged to avail himself of Nature's remedies in times of sickness, does the civilized world owe thanks for the most wonderful panacea ever discovered, Kickapoo Indian Sagwa, the great blood purifier. An infallible cure for Dyspepsia, Gastritis, Nervousness, Biliousness, Scrofula, Bright's Disease, Catarrh and all Blood Diseases, General Debility, Chronic Diarrhœa and hundreds of other terrible infirmities, resulting from a deranged condition of the great life-maintaining organs:—the kidneys, liver, stomach and blood.

Remember, Sagwa not only cures by aiding Nature to dispel poisonous secretions from the system through the natural channels, but, if taken at the first premonition of troubles, acts as a tonic, and by its curative, blood purifying, cleansing, and invigorating qualities will ward off disease, and just this is what every man should bear in mind, if you have such symptoms as sleeplessness, loss of appetite, irritability, coated tongue, bad breath, blotched skin, etc. Some internal poison is at work; a break-down is sure to come. Better spend a few dollars now and get health, than see your family suffer for the want of the money you will miss earning during a long sickness.

Sagwa contains no mineral or other poisonous ingredients. It is endorsed by the highest medical authorities of the day. Sold by all druggists; $1.00 per bottle; six bottles for $5.00. If you wish advice as to your symptoms, write us, and same will be given you free by one of our staff of physicians.—Kickapoo Indian Medicine Co., New Haven, Conn.

HE CURES CONSUMPTION.

Two Free Bottles of His Newly Discovered Remedy will be Sent to You to be Used Faithfully Upon its Merits.

SUNSHINE AND HOPE FOR STRICKEN FAMILIES.

In one of the richest and greatest countries on earth 700 persons die every day of the year because they cannot get air to breathe.

A monster seizes them, and slowly, mercilessly crushes out their lives.

The country is the United States of America, and the monster is Consumption.

Selecting the bravest and fairest, he has them in his clutches before they know that he is near.

Consumption causes more desolation than war.

Coughs and lung troubles lead to consumption, loss of flesh and wasting conditions.

Of all the diseases which afflict the human race, it is the most fatal.

Its ravages are by no means confined to the lungs alone.

It attacks, in fact, almost every part of the body.

It casts a blacker shadow than intemperance.

To check its ravages, science for many years labored in vain.

Is it possible even to-day to cure every case of consumption?

Let us look the melancholy truth straight in the face.

It is not possible.

But, out of the 700 lives sacrificed every day, over 500 may be saved, and T. A. Slocum, the distinguished manufacturing chemist, has discovered a way to do it.

It is with a solemn sense of responsibility for his words, that the great chemist announces, through the medium of the public press, that he has found an absolute cure for consumption in any case where the patient is not actually dying.

Thousands of witnesses could be brought forward—whose testimony is incontrovertible—to prove not only that the newly discovered Slocum System of Scientific Treatment is wonderfully efficacious in the cure of lung affections, pulmonary disorders—and conditions of wasting—but that it does cure in cases of well-defined and unmistakable consumption.

In order to show his deep rooted belief in the crowning work of his life, he offers to send free two bottles of his newly discovered remedy to anybody suffering from chronic coughs, lung troubles, consumption, loss of flesh, and all conditions of wasting.

Nothing could be fairer or more philanthropic.

The renowned chemist recognizes it as a moral duty to spread far and wide the knowledge of his cure for consumption.

This generous proposition speaks eloquently, indeed, of the "good faith" of the great chemist.

Beside victims of consumption, this offer interests all who work in bad air, all who are exposed to cold and dampness, all who feel the irritation in the throat, sore lungs or soreness under the breast bone, and the steady loss of strength and flesh that are the first signs of serious lung affection.

Slocum's System is the only one whose results have been practically successful.

Is not your life worth a cent? Then our advice is to buy a postal card and send your name, postoffice and express address to T. A. Slocum, M. C., 183 Pearl St., New York City.

When writing the Doctor, please tell him that you saw this article in this paper and greatly oblige.

LIVE STOCK

HOG HOUSES AND PENS.

Some Useful Information About Their Construction.

Hogs are the most difficult of farm animals to provide winter shelter for. They pile up and get the mange, sore throat, quinsy, thumps, etc., to say nothing of swine plague and cholera. It is always something to give satisfaction when the pigs can go out into the pastures in spring time, to get fresh air, sunlight and exercise, and enjoy fresh sleeping quarters. The owner always expects them to do much better then. Nevertheless, winter quarters are a necessity, and in their construction we must have respect to the natural requirements of his pigship.

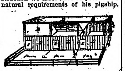

Fig. 1.—Convenient Cheap Pig Shed.

While he should have protection from the inclemencies of the weather at the same time he should have fresh air, and as much of the winter sunshine as possible.

The value of sunshine in the development of young stock is by few appreciated fully. In fact, the value of sunshine is no longer a mooted question, so that in the construction of hog houses its admission must be provided for if we desire healthy quarters.

A cheap and convenient pig shed may be made after the style in use by Brown & Luce, Shelbina, Mo. These pens may be either single and movable or built more cheaply, two or more together. The usual size of a farrowing pen is six by seven feet. The walls, which are double, face the south. In the accompanying Fig. 1, the front walls, D D D, are three feet high and the openings above three feet by six feet. Each opening may be closed with a swing door, B, as shown in pen 1. To open this door for ventilation and light or other purposes swing it back as shown at C in pen adjoining, and the same wooden bolt that fastens the door when closed may by a very simple arrangement be made to secure the door to the rafters out of the way. The openings E E E let the pigs out to be fed on the floor in front, which may, if required, be divided by portable panels at a a.

When a more expensive hog house is wanted, a double row of pens may be constructed, that will admit sunshine to all the pens through glass. I have noticed several built after the style shown in the annexed drawing, which was made from one just put up by William Breedlove of La Belle, Mo. The size for eight pens is twenty-four feet long by twenty feet wide, which makes the pens six by eight feet, with a four-foot hall running between their two rows. The main elevation, see A A A in Fig. 2, is six feet, there being one window in the same for each pen. The second elevation at B B B is four feet, the windows placed in it admitting plenty of sunlight into the back row of pens.

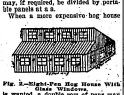

Fig. 2.—Eight-Pen Hog House With Glass Windows.

Fig. 3 is an end view of the same building. The rafters, A to D, are eleven feet eight inches long, and joined with the sixteen-foot rafters B E at eleven feet eight inches from eave. The short piece B C is attached to point of long rafter, and to short rafter at C. The space along the rafters from C to A is not sheathed, so there is very little to obstruct the sunbeams. The gates to the several pens are placed along the hallway and should be just four feet wide, so that when opened they will reach across and close the hallway, which will be found a great convenience in handling pigs, as it enables one person unaided to sort out and separate a number and arrange them as he may wish.

As to floors for pig pens, there are divergent opinions. That the dirt floor is the healthier I have no doubt, but it is far more troublesome to keep in good order. If board floors are used they should be nailed down, but so put in that they may be taken out. Great care also should be had that a crack in the floor does not admit a draft of air.

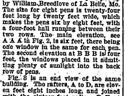

Fig. 3.—End View of Eight-Pen Hog House.

Again serious objections are raised against building a lot of pens under one roof, some breeders favoring individual pens that can be moved from place to place. For brood sows at farrowing time a single pen is far preferable. For wintering a lot of hogs the larger one is better. As many as sixty to one hundred pigs can be arranged in the eight-pen shed above described and still there need be no trouble. Use disinfectants freely. Sprinkle with carbolic acid. Use mercurial ointment to keep pens free from lice. Change the bedding frequently. Give the pigs the run of the pastures on pleasant days. With this kind of care your cluster of pig pens will be all right.—G. W. Waters in Journal of Agriculture.

Raising Early Broilers.

Those who have incubators and brooding houses should have both under full swing now. The most important thing to the thrift and growth of the chicks in the brooding house, and the hardest to secure, is exercise. The food is an important matter to look after carefully, but, on the same food, one lot which is induced to take liberal exercise and plenty of fresh air will do well and make satisfactory growth, while another lot which does not take the exercise will suffer from indigestion, bowel troubles, take cold easily and many die, and those which live will make poor growth and never make prime broilers or roasters. February and March chicks will be ready to turn off at the time broilers are at the top notch in price, and chickens of one and one half to two pounds each at $1 to $1.50 a pair, pay well if the conditions of feed and care have been such as to bring them to that weight quickly.

But, as the majority of farmers have no incubators and brooding houses, they are compelled to depend upon the "old hen" for incubation. It is rather early to have many hens broody, but some of the older ones which begun to lay reasonably early in the fall will have laid out by this time and want to raise a family. If one has a shed open to the south, with a reasonably tight side and roof to protect the mother and chicks, the coops for them can be placed under this and the chicks given the run of the ground. Do not overstock the place; two or three clutches, not crowded, will be worth more money than four or five, if the space is only large enough for the two or three. The hens may set in the cellar, or in a warm corner of the barn; don't put more than nine eggs under a large hen or six or seven under a small one, as the outside eggs will get chilled and not hatch. Put a generous sprinkling of some good insect powder in the material when making the nest for the sitter. The moisture question will take care of itself a this time of the year. Note daily the condition of the eggs, and if they get soiled wash them in warm water.—B. Holmes in Orange Judd Farmer.

Feed for Ewes With Early Lambs.

One of the most successful raisers of early lambs in Connecticut, Charles E. Lyman, writes: "I think a mixture of corn, peas and wheat middlings, equal parts by weight, will produce the best results of anything I know of for ewes suckling lambs. Care should be taken in not overfeeding the ewes with this mixture while the lamb is quite young, for the combination will produce very rich milk." C. B. Lyman, of Massachusetts, thinks corn and oats with linseed meal as good as anything.

Much attention has been given to the whole question of rasing early lambs at Cornell experiment station, and the director, I. P. Roberts, writes: "Mix equal parts by weight of cottonseed meal, corn meal (or whole corn if the sheep are young), oats and bran; the oats and bran may be left out if it is not convenient to procure both, as it will make little difference which one is fed, but if both are handy, put them in. Also, give as much good clover hay as will be eaten up clean, and as many pounds of mangolds and turnips per day per sheep as it eats of clover hay. The drinking water must be abundant, clean and always accessible. On the side of the pen, slat up a small place so that the lambs can retire to a separate trough, where some corn meal and bran should be placed every morning. If any remains uneaten, the trough should be cleaned and fresh material put in. It will often pay to buy some sugar and sprinkle over this lamb ration. This will induce them to go to eating early and it will tend to make them eat more of it, thereby making up for any lack of nourishment from their mothers. This is all written with the supposition that these are early lambs which it is desired to force as rapidly as possible for the early lamb market. Lambs for the fall market are injured by being forced rapidly when but a few weeks old."—Orange Judd Farmer.

Carrots and Beets for Horses.

Carrots and beets are a most excellent succulent food for horses, but deficient in certain of the nutriments. Proper proportions of grain must also be fed. Fed along with the grain these roots are most healthful for horses. But horses at work should not be fed so frequently on roots as those at rest. Work horses require more nutritious foods, though an occasional feed of carrots or beets is found excellent and healthful. Every farmer should grow some carrots or beets for his horses. Like other domestic animals they need a succulent ration occasionally to keep them in good digestion and health. With such feeding they are found to have fine, glossy, slick coats in the spring, an unerring indication of good condition. This kind of feeding obviates the necessity of giving condition powders, which frequently has to be done after a winter's constant feeding on corn, hay and other dry concentrated foods. A half acre devoted to growing carrots and beets is very profitably employed. Other domestic animals will eat with equal profit all the horses leave.—Indiana Farmer.

How About This Stable.

A reader who thinks that the cows of the country are getting too good stabling and are going to "go to the dogs" if they do not get more fresh air and exercise, thinks that the stable of the future will be a large, covered barn yard, made high, light and warm; and the cows will be dehorned and turned loose in this enclosure. In this place will be a water tank and hay and straw racks, and the cows will eat and drink and sleep when they choose and parade the arena for promotion of muscle and vigor. It is not stated whether these cows will be provided bars, hurdles and vaulting rings or not, to take athletic exercise. It's no telling what the cow of the future will do, or what she will demand of her owner. One thing is certain, in all kindness to the animals, and that is that the old plank floor and rigid stanchion will have to go, and why they have been retained as long as they have passes all comprehension. What do our readers say to the big covered barn yard above depicted?—Practical Farmer.

Stock Notes.

The right kind of feed and good care is better for stock than medicine.

In feeding cattle and hogs it is best to assort and grade them, as the strong will get more than their share of the feed.

The manure from pigs is of the very richest sort, being made from grain, and too often it is allowed to go to waste. Save every shovelful carefully.

When sulphur is given animals in winter it is liable to cause them to take cold, as it opens the pores of the skin. It is said to also cause rheumatism if given in damp weather.

If you start in this season to breed better horses than the common breeder is producing there is no doubt but you will meet a good market by the time you have animals old enough to sell.

When the farmer can't afford a mill to grind the grain he feeds it will pay to soak it. This swells the grain so that it will be eaten readily, and is not likely to create any sort of stomach trouble.

Silage is all right for horses if fed judiciously. It is not best to feed it as an exclusive roughness. A little clover hay is best to feed along with it, giving variety as well as balancing the ration.

As cheap as common horses are now, the farmer should not be short of teams the coming season. Look around now and increase your team force to the desirable point while it can be done so cheaply.

LUMBAGO.

A Condition Due to Strain or Rheumatism, Marked by Pain and Stiffness in the Lower Back.

From the Sentinel, Milwaukee, Wis.

Mr. M. J. Eagan, the well-known insurance man, for some time past had occupied commodious quarters in the Mack block, Milwaukee, Wis. Nearly a year and a half ago Mr. Eagan was stricken down with an aggravated case of lumbago, the pain caused by which was almost intolerable. Naturally enough ordinary local treatments were first used, but so rapidly worse did the patient become that the best professional aid was quickly secured and the strongest and most potent medicines known to the profession applied, but only to fail.

At this most critical moment a trial of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills was suggested, and eagerly accepted. Then, to use Mr. Eagan's exact language: "the fight went on, although for two days there was certainly little, if any, change for the better. After that there was never a moment of doubt, returning health came rapidly, and since that time—it is over a year now—there has never been a return of the complaint or the slightest indication of a pain. I stand ready to endorse Pink Pills as an invaluable remedy, through a personal knowledge of their ability to cure. It only took two boxes to do the work for me."

Another and still more remarkable cure which has recently come to our notice, is that of Mr. W. H. Hanson, of 1601 Clybourne Street. Mr. Hanson is an engineer by profession, and has been connected in that capacity, with the Milwaukee Casket Company for the past twenty years.

An interview with this gentleman elicited the fact that he has been a sufferer from sciatic rheumatism for over fourteen years; the attacks at times being so severe as to preclude the possibility of work. The last of these occurred somewhat over a year ago, at which time, for a period of six months, he was unable to perform any kind of manual labor, even when not absolutely confined to the house, about which he made slow and laborious passage by means of crutches. As in many other instances several different remedies were applied under the immediate supervision of local physicians, but without obtaining lasting, even momentarily noticeable results. Then it was that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were called into service, the result being almost immediate relief, a discontinuance of crutches, a return to work, and better physical condition generally than has obtained for the past three years of four years.

"The facts of this remarkable cure, as well as my general improvement in health," remarked Mr. Hanson, "has been the wonder and talk of a number of my fellow workmen, who could not but remark so marked and seemingly permanent a change."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or exercise of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. FATTENING HOGS COSTS ONE CENT

The editor recently heard of a farmer fattening hogs at less than one cent a pound. This was made possible through the sowing of Salzer's King Barley, yielding over 100 bu. per acre, Golden Triumph Corn, yielding 200 bu. per acre, and the feeding on Sand Vetch, Teosinte, Hundredfold Peas, etc. Now, with such yields, the growing of hogs is more profitable than a silver mine.

Salzer's catalogue is full of rare things for the farmer, gardener and citizen, and the editor believes that it would pay everybody a hundred-fold to get Salzer's catalogue before purchasing seeds.

If you will cut this out and send it with 10 cents postage to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., they will mail you their mammoth seed catalogue and 10 samples of grasses and grains, including above corn and barley. Catalogue alone, 5c postage. W. n.

WILD ANIMALS ARE LEFT-HANDED

Odd Discovery Made by an Observant Keeper of Beasts.

Supt. Sol Stephan of the Zoo has made all sorts of curious discoveries in the habits and characteristics of animals, the latest of which is that wild creatures are mostly left-handed. Mr. Stephan has been endeavoring to verify this observation on two parrots lately brought from Mexico. He found that in grasping a finger offered as a perch the parrots almost always put the left foot forward.

Usually the finger thus offered is that of the right hand. But when the left finger is offered to the parrots they put forward the right foot. There is, however, apparently a small residum of preference for the left foot. This seems to be due to the fact that men are usually right-handed and offer the right hand to the parrot.

The left foot is the one naturally put forward by the parrot in this case, and through repetition of this action a species of left-footedness is induced. Mr. Stephan's general conclusion is that there is no evidence that the parrot is naturally left-footed.

The appearance of that left-footedness is due entirely to the fact that those who offer the finger or food to parrots do so, as a rule, with the right hand. Repetition of this process makes the parrot more or less left-handed in time.

Women as Hair-Cut Experts.

Green—There's one mystery that has never as yet been solved.

Fleen—What is it?

Green—Why is it that every woman objects to the way that her husband has had his hair cut?

In the United States circuit court of appeals at New York, Judge Wallace reaffirmed the decision of Judge Townsend in the suit brought some time ago to test the section of the tariff law which imposes a duty on diamonds. About $1,250,000 is directly involved in the decision, as, had the government been defeated, it would have been necessary to refund duties to the amount indicated.

AN AWFUL CRIME

A PENNSYLVANIAN CHARGED WITH KILLING HIS FATHER.

He Is Said to Have Committed the Murder for the Money Which His Father Was Known to Have Carried and Then Burned a Large Manufacturing Plant in Order to Cover Up His Crime.

Lancaster, Pa., March 17.—The citizens of this town were startled today by the arrest of William Miller, aged twenty-eight years, for the murder of his father, seventy years old, on Jan. 25, when the Champion Forge and Blower works were destroyed by fire and the aged man's remains were found in the ruins. Charles Tinker was arrested as an accomplice. The arrests were made by Detective S. A. Ellwell of New York, who has been working on the case since the beginning of February. Previous to the date of the alleged crimes of arson and murder the town had been terrorized by numerous incendiary fires, and no trace of the guilty ones could be found. The fire at the Champion works caused a loss of $60,000. At the time the old watchman, Miller's father, could not be found. Three days later his charred body was found among the debris of the burned building. The position of the body gave rise to suspicions of foul play, and an investigation was begun by the local police, who offered a reward of $500 for the capture of the perpetrator of the double crime. This was doubled by the owners of the works. There seemed to be a general absence of clues, and the police apparently had accomplished but little when the surprise came to-day in the arrest of Miller and Tinker.

Detective Ellwell, who has been quietly working up the case, says he has conclusive evidence against Miller. It is said the accused son bears a bad reputation and has been involved in previous scrapes of a most serious character. It is alleged that he was seen in the vicinity of the fire ten minutes before an alarm was sounded, without any money, while a short time later he had plenty of money and spent it freely. It is further alleged that a few nights before the tragedy he was heard to say that if his "old man" did not give him money he would knock him in the head. The old watchman is known to have carried considerable money on his person all the time, and his accused son is said to have carried $1,000 insurance on his father's life. Two weeks ago he is alleged to have started for the home of H. B. Keiper, one of the officers of the works, with the avowed intention of "doing him up," but was intercepted on the way and kept from carrying out his design. He was in the United States navy at one time but deserted. He was preparing to leave town when arrested.

A Bad Mistake.

Havana, March 17.—Capt. Gen. Weyler has ordered a thorough investigation to be made into the disaster at Cano, seven miles from here, by which twelve soldiers belonging to the San Quentin battalion were killed, and a captain, four lieutenants and twenty-seven soldiers belonging to the same corps were wounded by the Spanish garrison of that town, who mistook the Spaniards for a band of insurgents that had previously attacked that place and been repulsed.

Claiming a Cannon.

Madison, Wis., March 17.—Gen. Runkel of Ohio has made a formal demand on the war department on behalf of the Thirteenth Ohio volunteers for the cannon in Capitol park captured by the Fourteenth Wisconsin volunteers at the battle of Shiloh. Gen. Runkle claims the possession of the gun was originally gained by his regiment. As the cannon is rich in historic memories the Wisconsin officials will contest to the last Ohio's claim for the cannon.

Confesses to Arson.

Grafton, N. D., March 17.—On the night of Nov. 21 William Coulter's barn, containing thirteen horses and other stock to the number of thirty-three, hay and grain valued at $3,000, was totally consumed by fire, with no insurance. Mr. Coulter suspected his hired man, William Tubbs, with whom he had trouble, and to-day the young man confessed the crime to Sheriff Jacobson.

Texas Loses.

Washington, March 17.—The case of the United States vs. the State of Texas, involving the ownership of Greer county, was decided in the supreme court to-day in favor of the United States, Justice Harlan handed down the opinion. The case involves 1,500,000 acres.

For McKinley.

Milwaukee, March 17.—The Fourth congressional district elected William Geuders and Julius E. Roher as delegates to St. Louis, and E. J. Lindsay and William Graf as alternates, and adopted a resolution in favor of Maj. William McKinley for president.

Herbert Booth to Leave.

Toronto, March 17.—A special from Winnipeg says that Herbert Booth, the head of the Salvation Army in Canada, will give up his command and leave the country June 1.

Gov. Upham Ill.

Madison, Wis., March 17.—Gov. Upham is seriously ill and unable to be at the capitol. He is threatened with an attack of erysipelas.

Remande.

Cincinnati, March 17.—The circuit judge remanded Jackson and Walling to the sheriff of Campbell county, Ky.

Pin Company Assigns.

Toledo, Ohio, March 17.—The Great Western Pin company assigned to-day and named Fred B. Dodge as assignee. The schedule of assets and liabilities was filed and shows the former to be $75,000 and the latter $40,000.

Stuckey's Trial Begins.

Duluth, Minn., March 17.—The trial of Charles H. Stuckey for grand larceny in the first degree from the State bank, of which he was cashier, opened before Judge Moer in the district court this morning.

MARCH TO DONGOLA.

One Thousand Fresh Troops Levied for Egypt.

Cairo, March 17—The Egyptian council yesterday stated that Lord Cromer, the British agent, had announced that 1,000 British troops drafted at European stations, were coming here directly to take part in the advance upon Dongola.

It is reported that France, as a guaranteeing power to the Egyptian bondholders, will refuse her consent to the cost of the campaign, which is estimated at £2,000,000, being charged with the Egyptian budget. In support of this decision it is alleged from French sources that no movement exists in the Soudan warranting such a campaign, and that, on the contrary, the Khalifa Abdullah has lost all his authority and has withdrawn his loyal adherents from the Cassala district, himself fearing assassination.

The first troops to leave for the Dongola expedition will go to-morrow if the transport vessels are ready. The Third, Fourth, Seventh, Eighth, Eleventh, Twelfth and Thirteenth battalions are already at Assouan, Wady-Halfa, or Korisko. The Fifth and Sixth battalions go from Cairo and also the newly formed Fourteenth battalion, composed of picked Soudanese troops.

HOTEL IN FLAMES.

Some of the Inmates Have Narrow Escapes.

Fort Scott, Kan., March 17. — The Star hotel, a large two-story frame building, was burned to the ground at 6 o'clock this morning. The flames enveloped the building with lightning rapidity, and thirty occupants barely escaped with their lives. Most of them fled in their night clothes through the icy streets. Some of the waiter girls and lady guests jumped from rear windows, receiving slight injuries. J. C. Depew of Ohio was badly burned about the face and neck. M. L. Waltermire, the proprietor, and his wife, were singed by the flames. Practically all the guests lost all their personal belongings. The hotel and adjoining buildings were consumed. Loss on building about $2,500; uninsured.

Colored Bishop Arrested.

Cleveland, March 17.—Bishop W. B. Campbell of Toledo, Ohio, the head of the African Evangelical mission, a colored denomination, is in jail here on the charge of embezzling $500. A few weeks ago Campbell deposed, during a conference in this city, that Rev. R. H. Morsell, Rev. J. H. Brown, Rev. R. Moseley and Rev. J. W. Stewart had collected money for the church and had not turned it into the treasury. To-day Messrs. Moseley and Stewart of this city swore out a warrant for Campbell's arrest, accusing him, of embezzling $500 of the church's money.

McAlpin Writes.

Chicago, March 17.—President McAlpine, of the National Republican League, has issued a circular to all officers of the league reminding them that it is against the constitution of the league for it to interfere in the action of any county, state or national convention. He declares that all clubs affiliated with the league must not, before the national convention, announce any preference for any candidate. The object of the league, President McAlpine declares, is to work for the nominee and not for candidates.

Depreciation of Silver.

London, March 17.—The Times dispatch from Brussels says: In the chamber of deputies Deputy Berchgrave made a minute and searching statement of the evils of the depreciation of silver. M. Desmet Denaeyere, minister of finance, in replying, recognized the gravity of the evils, though he thought it was not incumbent on Belgium to call a monetary conference, but the government would cooperate in any measure in this direction of fixing a ratio between gold and silver.

Walcott Whips Collins.

New York, March 17.—The Eureka Athletic club at Long Island City threw open its doors last night for its initial boxing contests. The card contained three bouts, two of ten rounds each and the other of thirty-five rounds. The principal go on the programme was that between Joe Walcott, the colored wonder, and Scott Collins, better known as "Bright Eyes," of Texas. These men were to have fought at El Paso last month. Walcott knocked out Collins in the seventh round.

No Delay for Pryde.

Brainerd, Minn., March 17.—Leon E. Lum made a motion before Judge Holland this morning in behalf of John Pryde, on whom the death sentence has been passed, for the allowance of a bill of exceptions to go to the supreme court on the question as to whether previous good character and a plea of guilty can be taken into consideration as exceptional circumstances. The motion was denied.

Masons at Yankton.

Yankton, S. D., March 17.—The annual reunion of Scottish Rite Masons of South Dakota is in session here today. About 200 are present. The session will occupy four days, during which degrees will be conferred upon nearly 100 aspirants from other portions of the state. Masons from Washington, Minneapolis, Fargo, St. Paul, Omaha and Chicago are in attendance.

Took Rough on Rats.

Minneapolis, March 17. — Clarisse Girard, aged fifty-three years, died yesterday at her home, 1523 Winter street, from the effects of a dose of rough on rats. The deceased had been ill for some time, and it is stated that she was temporarily insane when she took the poison last Friday. She suffered intense pain and everything was done to relieve her suffering, but she died in great agony.

Bankers Assign.

Cameron, Tex., March 17.—Crawford & Crawford, bankers, assigned to-day. Assets about $230,000; liabilities, $80,000 less. There are very few creditors and it is not thought that it will cause any embarrassment among business men. The firm will pay up in full.

Both Will Die.

Elkhorn, Wis., March 17.—Mrs. F. D. Lofe, who was terribly burned in a fire a few days ago, died this morning. Her babe, who was also burned, cannot live.

MISS BARTON SAYS

TURKS PLACE NO OBSTRUCTIONS IN HER WAY.

Permits, Signed by the Sultan, Are Granted Her Party to Carry Succor to the Suffering Armenians—Many Kinds of Food Will Be Purchased in the Interior, While Other Supplies Are Taken From Constantinople.

New York, March 17.—The following are extracts from a report by mail from Miss Clara Barton to the American National Red Cross here. Miss Barton says:

"Immediately on our arrival here, Judge Terrell lost no time in notifying the Turkish government and asking an audience for me with the foreign minister. This was granted and held on the 18th. We were informed that the permit was granted for my party to enter into the interior to afford relief to the suffering people there, and that no obstructions would be put in our way. Mr. Terrell at once cabled that information to Mr. Olney, but the permit or papers are to be signed by the sultan. This is the time of the great fast of Ramazan, during which no work but the ordinary labor is supposed to be done, and the papers have thus waited until now. Minister Terrell yesterday demanded, through the Russian ambassador, that the papers be attended to, and he waits in much certainty for favorable action immediately."

Since the date of this letter cable dispatches have announced the signing of the papers by the sultan and the issuance of the necessary permits and passports. The report continues: "Meanwhile, we are not losing a moment's time. Dreadful news comes in from the battlefield of Zeitoun. It has not failed to reach you, for it went to the press. Sir Philip Currie has asked that I send relief to Zeitoun, and we are getting our supplies ready for shipment via Alexandretta. At the first moment the papers are issued they will start. Our agents are to-day purchasing supplies to be taken by caravan from Alexandretta. There are always delays of boats, only about one a week going over, and the voyage across occupies a week. Our dragomen are ready. The Turks' guard will be provided, and Dr. Hubbell will lead the first detachment up into the snows and mountains to hunger, nakedness, smallpox and typhus.

Supplies Are Cheap.

"We find supplies as cheap here as at home, some even cheaper. It is said that food, such as grain, flour, etc., can be found all through the interior, therefore we shall not have to transport that. Dr. Hubbell will see what need there is for seed and other materials for helping the destitute people to raise something for themselves. We shall employ our customary methods in our endeavor to assist the people to provide for themselves as soon as circumstances will permit."

A recent letter from the Rev. Dr. Judson Smith, secretary of the American board of commissioners for foreign missions, Boston, addressed to the representatives of the Red Cross here, says: "I have been delighted to learn of Miss Barton's entry into Constantinople, of the success of her interview and of the freedom which has been extended to the Red Cross for its gracious work of relief in every part of the empire. It is exactly the issue that I expected. All the funds which have come into our hands have been forwarded directly to our Mr. Peet. We shall continue to send whatever comes to us to Mr. Peet as heretofore, in the expectation, however, that such sums will be combined with the sums which Brown Bros & Co. remit and constitute the one fund which now, under Red Cross auspices, will be distributed everywhere in the Turkish empire. Of the perfect understanding between Miss Barton and the Red Cross and our missionaries, both at Constantinople and everywhere in the interior, I have not the faintest doubt. Our missionaries will give the warmest possible welcome to the Red Cross agents, will at once aid their efforts to the effective prosecution of relief in this new form, and will account themselves abundantly rewarded for all services if they shall see the suffering somewhat reduced. There can be but one proper motive on the part of any one now, and that is to send forward as promptly as possible the largest sums of money possible for this gracious work. Anything that I can do or that the board can do, more than it has already done, you may be sure we shall most readily undertake, and I, for one, shall be grateful for any suggestions that may occur to you."

LINTON NOT A DUELIST.

The Congressman Pays No Attention to Challenges.

Washington, March 17.—Representative Linton of Michigan, the leader of the A. P. A. sentiment in the house, received some days ago a letter from Capt. Thomas Phelan of Kansas City, the well known Irish agitator, in which Capt. Phelan challenged him to fight a duel at Blandensburg, the challenge being preceded by a long denunciation of Mr. Linton's course in opposing the church school appropriations and the placing of the statue of Father Marquette in the capitol. Mr. Linton paid no attention to the communication, and from some other source it found its way into the newspapers.

Asphyxiated.

Toledo, March 17.—Nicholas Mandel, an employe of the Buckeye Brewing company, was found dead in his room to-day. He retired late last evening and threw his necktie over the gas jet and in some manner turned on the gas and death resulted from asphyxiation. He was forty years of age and unmarried.

Shipping Wheat by Rail.

Winnipeg, March 17.—The Canadian Pacific sent 150 cars of wheat East via the all-rail route to-day. Nearly 1,000,000 bushels of grain have been delivered at Canadian Pacific stations west of Winnipeg this week. Deliveries will continue large as long as country roads remain firm.

Prepared for a Scrap.

Frankfort, Ky., March 17. — Gov. Bradley has ordered out all three of the regiments of the Kentucky state guards. The McCreary Guards have taken possession of the state house. The capitol will be very strongly guarded when the legislature meets to-morrow.

The Bermuda Sails.

New York, March 17.—The steamship Bermuda, recently seized by the federal government while attempting to leave this harbor on a supposed filibustering expedition in Cuba and afterward released, left her anchorage in the upper bay and proceeded to sea this morning. She cleared yesterday for Vera Cruz.

Ex-Gov. Ireland Dead.

San Antonio, Tex., March 17.—Ex-Gov. John Ireland of Seguin died here to-day.

PREVENTED BY FISH.

Cuban Belligerency During the Grant Administration.

Albany, N. Y., March 17. — During the debate on the Cuban question in the United States senate many allusions were made by both Senator Sherman and Senator Hill as to the attitude of President Grant and the then secretary of state, Hamilton Fish. Senator Sherman declared that there was a conflict of opinion over Cuban affairs between the president and his secretary of state.

The speaker of the assembly, Hamilton Fish, son of the late secretary, is in possession of information upon this subject, contained in the diaries kept by his father, that is of great importance in the controversy. On the authority of these diaries, it is shown that President Grant had at one time, under the circumstances of a pending negotiation at Madrid, been inclined to recognize the belligerency of Cuba; but on June 13, 1870, the opinion of the president and the cabinet was unanimous that there were no facts to justify the declaration of belligerency, and that the satisfaction of the president with the Cuban policy of his administration, and its effects upon the country and the Republican party, found expression a few weeks later in thanks to the secretary of state for whatever share in it may have been due to his wisdom and judgment. He signed a proclamation recognizing Cuban belligerency, but never issued it.

During his eight years' service in the state department Mr. Fish kept, chiefly as a reference record for his own eyes, a diary in his own handwriting, containing a minute of important transactions; of his conversations with the president, members of the cabinet, senators and other leading public men in regard to the more prominent of the foreign questions with which he had to deal. From May 31 to June 13, 1870, the date of President Grant's special message to congress on Cuban belligerency, the entries in the diary are many and very full in regard to the origin, preparation, discussions in cabinet and final completion of the special message.

MADE TROUBLE FOR HIMSELF.

Black River Falls School Trustee Stirs Up a Hornet's Nest.

Black River Falls, Wis., March 17.—One of the members of the city school board has struck a full-grown hornet's nest, and the probabilities are that he can hear the buzzing yet, and will for some time to come, if people keep their word. It all came about over choosing a successor to Miss Myrtle Warren, deceased, to have charge of the kindergarten department of the high school. There were more or less applicants for the position, and it has been a policy of the school board to work in the local graduates as they showed their desire and competency. Miss Warren, a sister of the deceased, who held a lucrative position in the Rib Lake school, was given the position over the local applicants, one at least of which was a graduate of this city's school. The real cause of the breeze brought down on the devoted head of the school officer here was the fact that the position was given to one who already held a good paying position, instead of to one in the city who sadly needs the money for the bare necessaries of life for the fatherless little sisters and brother. The aunt of this applicant took the matter up and the roast she gave to one of the board, and through him to the rest of the board, would make some of our congressmen who think they are roasting the president conclude that they were not "in it" at all with her.

The present appointee is a graduate of this school some years ago, and no one questions her ability as a teacher, and the returning of one daughter to the home so sadly bereft by the death of the other was considered a very kindly act, but does not ease the pangs of hunger of others who need bread and butter.

POOL ROOMS ROBBED.

Thousands Lost by a Fake Report of a New Orleans Winner.

New Orleans, March 17. — The officials of the telegraph company here are reticent concerning the false report sent out by the racing department from the race track that Royal Nettie had won the last race instead of Plug, but from best obtainable information the trick was turned by an operator in the telegraph office at the race track. It was about an hour after the false report had been sent to all the pool rooms in the country that the change made in the result was discovered. The pool room reporter states that his message giving the result of the race, the last one of the day, was correct, as filed with the telegraph company, and he was greatly surprised to find that his message had not been correctly sent. The pool rooms throughout the country probably lost $150,000 by the fake report.

Chicago, March 17.—The local rooms lost about $28,000 on the Royal Nettie race. The heaviest loser was O'Leary's room at the stock yards, where $8,000 was dropped. Besides there were a number of smaller rooms which lost small amounts.

R. L. Belknap Is No More.

New York, March 17.—Robert Lenox Belknap died at his home in this city last night of acute Bright's disease. Mr. Belknap was born in this city on July 23, 1848. After graduating at Columbia college in 1869, Mr. Belknap connected himself with the firm of Fuller, Lord & Co., and in 1871 he was elected vice president of the Mercantile Loan and Warehouse company. He became treasurer of the Northern Pacific railroad in 1879, and retained that position until 1888. In business he was associated with William P. Stevenson and was, besides, president of the Northern Trust Company of West Superior, Wis., and a trustee of the Real Estate Trust company of this city.

Files a Large Claim.

Stevens Point, Wis., March 17.—The receiver of the Commercial bank today filed a claim for $87,000 against the estate of the late Benjamin Burr, of whom Emmons Burr, president of the bank when it failed, is sole legatee.

A Victim of Green Goods Men.

Stevens Point, Wis., March 17.—In court to-day George J. Leonard, a groceryman who failed recently, testified that he lost $1,350 in a green goods game at Oshkosh. Leonard's liabilities greatly exceed his assets.

Spring

Is the season for purifying, cleansing, and renewing. The accumulations of waste everywhere are being removed. Winter's icy grasp is broken and on all sides are indications of nature's returning life, renewed force, and awakening power.

Spring

Is the time for purifying the blood, cleansing the system and renewing the physical powers. Owing to close confinement, diminished perspiration and other causes, in the winter, impurities have not passed out of the system as they should but have accumulated in the blood.

Spring

Is therefore the best time to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, because the system is now most in need of medicine. That Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best blood purifier and Spring medicine is proved by its wonderful cures. A course of Hood's Sarsaparilla now may prevent great suffering later on.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the One True Blood Purifier. All druggists. $1. Prepared only by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Hood's Pills cure Liver Ills; easy to take, easy to operate. 25c.

An Economical Oat Clipper.

The high price which clipped oats bring in comparison with unclipped has led to the construction of a simple and light running clipper of great capacity. The machine is dustless, as all impurities are removed the instant they become loosened from the grain. Four distinct separations are made first by screening or sieving, and afterward by successive strong air currents at different stages, the last occurring as the finished material leaves the machine. This improved clipper is built in nine sizes, from 50 to 100 bushels guaranteed hourly capacity.

THE WORLD'S EARLIEST POTATO.

That's Salzer's Earliest, fit for use in 28 days. Salzer's new late tomato, Champion of the World, is pronounced the heaviest yielder in the world, and we challenge you to produce its equal! 10 acres to Salzer's Earliest Potatoes yield 4000 bushels, sold in June at $1.00 a bushel—$4000. That pays. A word to the wise, etc.

Now if you will cut this out and send it with 10c postage you will get, free, 10 packages grains and grasses, including Teosinte, Lathyrus, Sand Vetch, Giant Spurry, Giant Clover, etc., and our mammoth seed catalogue. w.n.

Give the Other Fellows a Chance.

No girl should allow a young man to call on her oftener than three times a week, even if they are engaged. Men get tired of the same kind of pie if they have it too often. A man's heart is cut out on the same plan as his stomach, only on a smaller scale.—Atchison (Kan.) Globe.

Young doctors get out of patience waiting for patients.

"Just as Good"

or better is what you hear now-a-days for almost everything you want to buy, until you must be tired of being told that you don't know what you want when you go into a store. The big department shops help the substitution evil by advertising standard articles at reduced prices, just for the sake of the advertising—just to get people to go to the store. Some haven't the things to sell at all; they have something "just as good" which in six cases in ten is next to no good; something "cheap" in every way, in place of standard goods.

In any merchandise this is wrong—in medicine it is a crime. When you want you know just what you want; you know it has benefited your friends or family, and you don't want for the sake of a few cents, some obscure unknown preparation with no record of results back of it. The proprietors of a standard remedy must keep up the quality or it won't long remain the standard. In emulsions, Scott's is the standard the world over, and has been for more than twenty years.

All druggists sell Scott's Emulsion. Two sizes—50 cents and $1.00.

Sam Dainard "though dressed for the occasion" made an elegant speech at the Farmers railroad meeting last Thursday. Mr Dainard is well acquainted with the proposed route of this road and everything he said was right to the point.

Commissioner Lamoreaux is preparing a list of pine lands which will be offered at the sale under the provisions of the Town-Eddie bill, which is now a law. About 60,000 acres will be offered in the first tract. As soon as the list of estimates is made, and approved by Secretary Smith, advertisements will be inserted in the St. Paul Minneapolis Stillwater Taylors Falls Crookston and Fosston papers.

It is no wonder the United States government is being insulted on every hand. With the president groveling in the dust at the feet of European bondholders a majority of our senators mere pack mules for corporations, and the ordinary congressmen completely engrossed trying to catch a little pap for his personal political backers at home. Brother Jonathan cuts a sorry figure.—Midway News.

ST. HILAIRE CAMP NO. 3650.

The Modern Woodmen of America is coming to the front as one of the fraternal orders of the Northwest and when anything promoting its welfare and social bands of mankind is in order St. Hilaire is always willing to help along the good cause.

Friday evening March 13th W. A. Case, Head Consul, assisted in organizing a camp with 15 members. All the work could not be done in one evening so the meeting was continued until the next evening (Saturday) when the officers were installed. Immediately after the installation an application, as a social member, was read and accepted. The goat was hurridly groomed and the applicant admitted. Later in the evening a member volunteered to go through the ——— for the pleasure of getting astride of his goatship. He has since complained of the ride having after effect. A special meeting was held Monday evening at which another application was read. Regular meeting every first and last Friday of each month.

There is every indication that St. Hilaire camp No 3650 will keep in equal footing with her sister neighbors of the county, and if we don't miss our guess will stand second to none in number of members in good standing at no remote period as several aspirants have already expressed a desire to be numbered among the Woodmen.

Reports from Thief River Falls would indicate that during and since election day—last Tuesday—the Meehans have been running the village with a high hand.

On election day Pat Meehan went to to the polling place and getting into an altercation with P. S. Ware who was acting as judge of election he applied some vile epithets to that gentleman in the presence of a large number of people. Yesterday Mr. Ware swore out a warrant before Judge McLean for the arrest of Pat Meehan and Deputy Sheriff Johnson went to Thief River Falls this morning to serve the warrant and Patrick may have to pay a good sized fine for using his tongue so freely.

On the night of election day Marshal Mikkelson went into a saloon where there was rather more hilairity going on than was necessary and on asking those present to keep quiet Pat and John Meehan who were present threw the marshall down took his gun away from him punched him a little and let him go.

Now that the Meehans have won the election they practically run the village and threats are made daily against one business man or another who is to be "fixed" or "done up" and this is likely to be quite a lively year for the residents of Thief River Falls.—Crookston Tribune.

The criminal case against Patrick Meehan of Thief River Falls was dismissed this morning by Judge McLean upon the non-appearance of the complaining witnesses. Mr. Meehan and his witnesses were on hand. This will probably be the end of the matter.—Crookston Tribune.

The populist state central committee has decided to have no state convention to select delegates at large to their national convention but to let each congressional district select enough delegates to represent it in the convention. The apportionment in each district will be one delegate at large, and one delegate for every 2000 votes cast for S. M. Owen at the 1894 election. The Seventh district will have 10 delegates. A resolution was adopted recommending to the several congressional committees that no conventions be held making nominations for congress until after the Peoples party national convention at St. Louis. This rule will also apply to the state convention of that party the purpose being to put the congressional and state nominees on the same national platform.

It is more fun says an exchange to see a man read a puff of himself in a paper than to see a fat man slip on a banana peel. The narrow minded man reads it seven or eight times and then goes around and appropriates what copies he can. The kind hearted man goes home and tells his wife then pays up his dues to the paper. The successful business man who advertises regularly and makes money of it starts out and find the editor and the two walk down the street. The business man takes sugar in his they eat a clove or two life is sweeter and peace settles down on their hearts for the moment. Such is the experience of seeds that fall on different soil.

The first number of "Den fierde Juli" (the Fourth of July) published at Grand Forks, has come to hand. It is the old Red River Dalen revived, and although the name is patriotic enough, it seems rather inappropriate. Otherwise the paper looks all right—as far as the Tribune can see.—Crookston Tribune.

Dan Patterson and wife came down from St. Hilaire last night to attend the ball. This morning they received a telegram stating that their little daughter was taken suddenly ill with lung fever and Mrs Patterson immediately started for home by team.—Crookston Tribune.

Large and Enthusiastic Farmer's Railroad Meeting.

President Hines of the Farmers railroad appeared promptly at 2 o'clock p. m. Thursday last (as advertised) at Brink's hall where a large representative audiance greeted him. H. E. Ives was chosen chairman, and after a few brief remarks introduced the President of the Farmers railroad.

Mr. D. W. Hines opened the meeting with prayer and then proceeded with the aid of a skeleton map showing the proposed route of the road which no doubt will be carried out on this end of the line judging from the amount of enthusiasm shown at the meeting. Prominent farmers and businessmen made short speeches which encouraged Mr. Hines and it is safe to say if other towns and communities are as enthusiastic and ready to give aid in this movement as St. Hilaire, the Farmer's road will haul out the crop of '96.

The Moorhead News in commenting on Senator Cronkhite's flop from the Populist party to that of the Republican says:

"The Republicans are welcome, thrice welcome to Cronkhite The Populists could not if so minded, expect to compete with the corruption fund of the Republican party, amounting in 1894 it is said to $86,000 of which $29,000 was railroad money."

SOCIABLE.

The young ladies of the village will give an Easter supper at the M. E. Church next Friday evening. A program consisting of speeches vocal and instrumental music has been prepared after which the refreshments will be served. All are cordially invited.

She Paid the Groschen.

A lovely story is told of the brothers Grimm, the famous fairy tale writers. One day a wee girl rang the bell and asked to see Mr. Grimm When ushered into his presence, she asked:

"You are the Mr. Grimm who writes the pretty tales?"

"Yes, I and my brother."

"And that of the clever little tailor who married the princess?"

"Yes, certainly."

"Well," said the child, producing the book, "it is said there that every one who doesn't believe it must pay the thaler. Now, I don't believe that a princess ever married a tailor. I haven't so much as a thaler, but here is a groschen, and please say I hope to pay the rest by degrees."

Just then Jacob came in and they tried together to convince the little dame that it was only a tale, but she had the courage of her convictions and nothing could induce her to receive the money back. The two brothers let her go, much amused by the interview.

Unconscious Humor.

A simple peasant woman, having come to town on a market day, saw the newsman coming along the street and hailed him as he passed "Are those Tribunes you are selling there, friend?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Then let me have ten copies; they are for my son; he won't be able to get to town for ten days, and he must have something to read anyhow."

A fact.—Tribune de Geneve.

Impetuous People

Seeing Them Burn

Close competition breeds impetuosity, and in our earnest pushing for trade it often happens that we mark goods away down just for the fun of

Seeing Them Sell

Somebody has exclaimed: "Oh, the impetuosity of the idiocy of the tumultuous idiot!" This remark will never apply to you if in your rush for bargains you get into the right store, which of course is ours.

Its little finger is very large: and so are our bargains. The paradox of a little finger being big may be likened to the paradoxical inducements we offer you.

NOW, WHAT IS LOVE?

Now, what is love I pray thee tell?
It is that fountain and that well
Where pleasure and repentance dwell?
It is, perhaps, the sauncing bell
That tolls all into heaven or hell,
And this is love, as I hear tell.

Yet what is love, good shepherd, sain?
It is a sunshine mixed with rain,
It is a toothache or like pain,
It is a game where none hath gain;
The lass saith no, yet would full fain,
And this is love, as I hear sain.

Yet, shepherd, what is love, I pray?
It is a yes, it is a nay,
A pretty king of sporting fay,
It is a thing will soon away.
Then, nymphs, take advantage while ye may,
And this is love, as I hear say.

Yet what is love, good shepherd, show?
A thing that creeps, it cannot go,
A prize that passeth to and fro,
A thing for one, a thing for more,
And he that proves shall find it so,
And, shepherd, this is love, I trow.

—Sir Walter Raleigh.

A Kangaroo on Shipboard.

He was presented by a lady in Hobart to one of our lieutenants. He never became quite at home on board, and in a few months took a passage overboard, when nobody was looking, through a gun port, and was seen and heard of no more. He was addicted to keeping late and irregular hours. He would hide himself away and sleep all day, and then wake up and become aggressively active at about 11 p. m., when everybody had turned in. Kangaroos are extensively hunted in the country parts of Australia and give excellent sport. Our friend did so to the sentry and quartermaster of the watch at night.

He had a particular fancy for the navigating officer's cabin, which is on the upper deck. For various reasons the owner of the cabin did not appreciate this flattering preference, and he left strict orders with the men on night duty in the neighborhood not to allow his highness to disturb him in his rest. The kangaroo used to "lay off" very quietly behind the bits at the other end of the quarter deck and wait his opportunity. When he thought he had a good chance, he would make a rush, and in nine cases out of ten he succeeded in breaking through his enemies' lines and reaching his favorite corner, only, however, to be at once captured and ignominiously evicted. His hop, hop, hop on deck was curious to watch, but the sound of it overhead at night was ridiculously irritating, and no one mourned very much when he took his voluntary departure. — Chambers' Journal.

Horseflesh.

It seems that, independent of the now much mooted question of horseflesh for human food, there can be no doubt as to the value of that animal's bones for industrial and chemical purposes. An investigator of this subject states that the leg bones are so very hard and white as to be specially valuable for handles of pocket and table cutlery, and the ribs and head are burned to make boneblack after they have been treated for the glue that is in them. In the calcining of these bones the vapors arising are condensed and form the chief source of carbonate of ammonia, which constitutes the base of nearly all ammoniacal salts. To make glue the bones are softened in muriatic acid, dissolved in boiling water, cast into squares and dried on nets. The phosphate of lime, acted upon by sulphuric acid and calcined with carbon, produces phosphorus for matches. The hoofs are boiled to extract the oil; the horny substance is shipped to the manufactories of combs and a variety of special articles.—New York Sun.

Damages Assessed.

"You advertise to pull teeth without pain for 50 cents," growled the victim, "and here you not only half pull my head off, but want me to give up a dollar. What do you mean by it?"

"I charged you that extra 50 cents for yelling so," said the dentist. "I bet you drove away all the possible customers within four blocks."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Curious.

One of the things we can't understand is why a man will go to the theater and laugh and applaud when the imitation locomotive crosses the stage with its deafening whistle, and when he hears a genuine whistle five blocks away from his own house he'll rave and swear.—Yonkers Statesman.

An old speech of Henry Clay's has come to light in which, in his own handwriting, the "applause" and "laughter" marks are shown at frequent intervals, the speech having evidently been prepared for publication.

The family or surname of Queen Victoria is Wettin. Your books may say that it is Guelph, but such can be proved to be a mistake.

After being cut, steel pens are annealed and tempered with oil to insure great springiness to the pens.

In 1892 the manufacture of iron rails had almost ceased, while nearly 1,500,000 steel rails were made.

The cost of a West Point outfit complete is about $90.

FONDLING A TARANTULA.

It Is Best to Be Sure That the Tarantula Knows You.

"The tarantulas pine in confinement," remarked an amateur spider collector, "refuse to spin or eat and seldom live long. A centiped or scorpion, on the other hand, commits suicide when it sees no chance of getting free."

"Commits suicide?" I asked. "Why, how?"

"By inoculating its body with its own poison. I have seen it do it time and time again. The centiped carries poison in two little teeth, besides the sac in each of his many feet. He bites his body savagely when he wants to kill himself, just as a man would plunge a dagger in his heart."

"And how does the scorpion kill himself?"

"His poison lies in the end of his tail. He turns his tail up over his back and jabs it in sharply; in a few seconds he is dead."

"Which do you think the most interesting, tarantulas or centipeds?" I inquired of this practical student of natural history.

"Tarantulas," he replied. "They have better dispositions and are much more intelligent than their cousins, the centipeds."

"Do you think they learn to know people?"

"Do I? Well, I'll show you. Look here, Browney."

The little slide down to Browney's hatch was pulled back, and the fuzzy, round bodied king of spiders crawled out on to the promenade ground of hard board in front of his dwelling.

"Here's a piece of pear for you, Browney," said the master.

"Does he like pears?"

"Only the juice. He sucks the juice of raw beef occasionally, too, but he vastly prefers a good, fat grasshopper if he can get him."

Browney examined the piece of pear critically with his feeler and pressed it as if to extract the juice, but he did not seem hungry. The master then took up the star shaped creature in his fingers and felt separately every one of the fatal little legs.

"You see, he is not hostile to me. Now let my brother attempt to play with him."

A curly headed young man of 20 or thereabout drew near and called to the tarantula coaxingly.

Browney instantly bunched himself up and retracted in a pet, showing plainly his dislike.

"When he was free and very busy one day, I watched him unwind yards and yards of spun thread and float down on a veritable ladder of it to a cranny half way down the rocky surface of a steep bluff. There he captured a juicy beetle. He drags his prey after him by folding it in his threads and hitching it to those pegs on his back. His eyes are in the top of his head."

"But tarantulas are deadly poison?"

"Yes, but they use their poison as a defense. They have enemies to guard against just as other creatures. Their poison is carried in a little sac in the last section of each foot and in the little sharp claw at the extremity, that is also hollow. They also have two teeth that are venomous.

"I have observed that they tend their young until they are 4 weeks old. After that they deliberately run away from them and leave them to look after themselves. This plan teaches them self reliance."—St. Louis Star.

Nothing but Habit.

"Everything in the world depends upon habit, my boy," said the old gentleman in his oracular way. "We're all creatures of habit."

"I know it," responded the boy.

"Habit makes us what we are," continued the old man. "For instance, I got up early in the morning and walked to my work for so many years that I still do it, although I am now able to sleep late and ride."

"Same principle with me," returned the boy.

"With you!" exclaimed the old gentleman. "Why you lazy, good for nothing"—

"Habit, merely habit," interrupted the boy. "It bears out all that you say. I've slept late and ridden in your carriage so long that I can't give it up, and, with your knowledge of the hold that a habit gets upon a fellow, you ought not to kick."—Chicago Post.

Not One of His Faults.

"Ha, ha!" laughed the murderer as he raised his gleaming dagger aloft. "Ha, ha!"

It did not escape him that his victim shuddered.

"Ha, ha!" he proceeded. "You will observe that I am merry. Most people take life too seriously."—Detroit Tribune.

It Was Paste.

"I can overlook his past," sighed the grieved and mortified young woman after a careful inspection of the ring she had just received, "but I own I am bitterly disappointed with his present."—Chicago Tribune.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of nine hundred and thirty-two dollars, which is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Ole P. Stokke and Tehue Stokke his wife mortgagors, to Dakota Investment Company, mortgagee, bearing date the 3rd day of August 1892, and, with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota, on the 7th day of August 1892, at 2:30 o'clock p. m. in Book 43 of mortgages on page 54 and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The south west quarter of Section twenty in Township one hundred and forty-nine of Range forty-seven in Polk county and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk county at the front door of the court house, in the city of Crookston in said county and state, on the 9th day of June 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt, and interest, and taxes if any on said premises, and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

IMPURE BLOOD.

The Ills That Accompany It are Legion. The Sufferer Eventually Becomes a Loathsome Sight, with Death the Only Escape From Pain.

Let a diseased condition of the blood once exist, and unless it is stopped it will from day to day grow and spread. The disease germs in the blood multiply rapidly and impregnate the tissues throughout the entire body, creating ulcers and other horrible sores. The patient grows weaker and weaker. Every one of the great vital organs of the body become affected, and death is looked upon as a blessing. Do not let such troubles go too far; before it is too late take that most famous of blood purifiers, Kickapoo Indian Sagwa. It quickly enriches and purifies this great vital principle of the body, and at the same time acting directly on the stomach, liver and kidneys, dispelling all lurking poisons. Thousands have been cured, and to-day sing its praise.

One of the many who have experienced relief is Amos Lord, of Conway, Iowa. He says, "I suffered from a chronic blood affection for 20 years. In September, '90, had an operation performed on my foot, but the poison still remained and went through my entire system, and placed me in such a condition I could not sleep nights on account of the hot, burning flushes all over me. I lost the use of my limb. My liver and kidneys became badly affected, and my general health so reduced that I gave up trying to live. Took over twenty bottles of certain Sarsaparillas with no relief. At last I concluded to give Kickapoo Indian Sagwa a trial, and am happy to state that after using it I experienced a great improvement. My liver and kidneys became normal, my limbs began to gain strength, so that now I can walk without crutches, and my health is good for a man of my age, being over 70 years old. I cheerfully recommend Sagwa to anyone afflicted with kidney and liver troubles. I think it is the greatest blood purifier I ever used."

Remember it is purely vegetable, and contains no poisonous ingredients whatever, being made entirely of roots, barks, herbs and gums. All druggists sell it. $1.00 a bottle; 6 bottles for $5.00.

Does Business Degenerate Women?

The fact cannot be disputed that no single factor in modern life is doing so much to degenerate our young womanhood as this mad race on the part of girls, impelled by necessity or not, to go into the business world, says the Ladies' Home Journal. These may sound like strong words to the ears of some, but to those who are really cognizant of the immensity of the evil results that are being wrought they will simply fit the case and not go beyond it. In altogether too many of our commercial and industrial establishments, stores and factories, the men into whose hands is given the power to employ and control girls are not fit, from a moral standpoint, to herd swine.

And yet thousands of our young women are allowed to go from their homes to work under the influence of these men and in the atmosphere vitiated by them. And why? Simply because it is considered more "respectable" to be employed in an office, store or factory, than to be engaged in domestic service. The very word "servant" has a taint about it that a majority of young women dislike and from which they flee. But what else are they in business establishments than servants, pure and simple? There can be no difference but an imaginary one. That is all. Far less leniency is shown in our business houses to women employes than is shown, as a rule, in our homes, to domestic help—infinitely less.

Leather-Covered Pianos.

A decided novelty in the way of piano casing—the invention of a Milwaukee music dealer—is on exhibition in the University building, Broadway. After several years of study and experiment the inventor hit upon leather as the most attractive as well as the most durable article for encasing pianos. The instrument was built in Buffalo. The color of the leather selected was a rich black, handsomely embossed, giving the impression of exquisite carving. Not only does the instrument thus encased present a most attractive and dignified appearance, but it has the advantage of being something in finish that cannot be marred or spotted.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

CARE OF SHEEP.

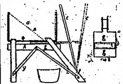
The Critical Time for Sheep the Early Spring Months.

If there is one time more critical than another for sheep, that time is the last of winter and through the early spring months, before getting out to pasture. While in winter quarters, one of the most essential things in successful management is a clean, light, airy and dry place for the sheep to lie down in, with room proportionate to the number. No animal kept on the farm—if we except poultry—is so susceptible to the effects of foul air caused by poor ventilation, or no ventilation at all, the foulness arising from the accumulations of filth, waste straw and hay heating and decomposing in the housing departments.

Variety of food is an all-important thing to be considered in the management of sheep during the winter. This is necessary to the health of the animals, as well as to the best bodily development, the growth of wool, and the well-being of the progeny. The breeding ewes, in order to produce strong, vigorous lambs, must be kept in a healthy condition during the days of pregnancy. The sheep, more than the horse and cow, is subject to constipation when kept on dry feed. This condition should be guarded against by careful attention to feeding. Constipation is the bane of all pregnant animals, and a cause of the death of more young lambs than any other one disease. The remedy lies in a variety of foods—succulent foods, as supplied in roots or ensilage. Foods abounding in protein elements should take the place of highly carbonaceous foods for sheep at the barn. This is found in clover hay and the mixed grasses, rather than in timothy fed wholly or largely. Corn ensilage—siloed with the ears about mature—abounds in carbonaceous material, but its succulence when feeding it in connection with clover hay, a concentrated ration of cottonseed meal, oat-and-pea meal, linseed meal or bran, of all the above properly balanced, forms about as good feed for breeding ewes as can be found. Corn meal is too heating and fattening. On the other hand, oats and bran carries no danger when fed to the flock from grass to grass again. If to the mixture linseed meal is added to make one-fourth of the whole, and fed at the rate of one pound daily of the mixture for 100 pounds weight of sheep, the flock will keep in fine condition.—L. F. Abbott in Orange Judd Farmer.

A Mechanical Root Cutter.

Where stock is kept in any considerable quantity and roots are fed them a steam power root cutter is almost a necessity. Where but a small herd or few animals are kept a home-made cutter may be made to fill the bill. In the cut illustrated, Fig. 1 shows a cutter complete. The figure above Fig. 1 is a basket to catch the roots as they fall from the knife at g. The frame or box, a, of heavy lines, is made of 1¼ by 4 in stuff, or a shoe box can be made to serve as a hopper by cutting out about seven inches from the front end and then placing a board, e, diagonally as shown. The heavy platform, k, is supported with legs and z and y are cross pieces for increased support. An old hand saw blade will serve for a slicing knife. It should be 5 or 6 inches wide and 10 inches long; if less than 6 inches the back of the slide can be made level with the upper side of the knife, by a thin piece of board. In Fig. 2 the knife b is fastened to the slide g. The board should be about 15 inches long and wide enough to correspond with the width of the box. Before fastening the knife in place a hole is cut through slide g 4 inches wide, the edge being even with the edge of the knife. The knife is raised from the slide g by a piece of lath ¼ inch thick and fastened by screws. In Fig. 1 the slide g is worked by the lever c, being fastened as in Figs. 1 and 2. Two pieces of 1 by 1¼ inch stuff 6 inches long are bolted loosely to the lever and slide. An old shovel handle 4 feet long makes a good lever and is fastened to the cutter leg at f, which is a board the same width as the hopper and extending down to the slide against which the knife comes at each stroke. The slide is inserted from the front before the stubbing board is put in position. The board should be made adjustable to be removed to sharpen the knife.—R. Logan, Branch County, Mich., in Farm and Home.



Baked Bones.

A correspondent of the Rural New Yorker, who seems to be very confident and positive in his statements, says:

"I got eggs all through the cold weather, and here in Montgomery county, Pa., in seven winters have never failed to fill my egg basket. I will let the readers of the Rural New Yorker into the secret of my success. The main part of it is baked bones. The bones are placed in the oven and when sufficiently baked, are taken out and crushed with a hammer or common bone mill. I feed them every day one-half ounce to each fowl. I regard the baked bone superior to the raw, and a better egg food.

"Hen houses should face the south with enough windows to give plenty of light and warmth, no ventilators, have matched board floors, with a layer of coarse straw changed every week. Constant work in cold weather, brought about by scattering wheat in the straw, is another secret of my winter yield of eggs. This and the baked bones are the mainsprings of my 'good luck.'"

Home-Made Butchers' Windlass.

Conveniences for butchering should be in every community. A plan of one in common use in the East is given below. First, prepare a strong timber, a, 6 or 8 inches in diameter and nearly as long as width of the barn. Bore a three-quarter inch hole at each end and drive in each end an iron, b, letting it extend about 2 inches. Then take two pieces of old iron, c (I use wagon tire), and bend in the form of V, fastening each end to the beam above. The iron or roll, b, will fit in the point of the bent iron, c. With a two-inch augur-bore two holes at right angles through the roll, about a foot from the end; then take eight pieces of 2 by 4 material, four of them made to fit the augur holes. The other four should be 3 or 4 inches shorter and nailed in between. Then take some strips of ½-inch stuff, 4 inches wide, d d, and nail to the ends of the eight pieces of 2 by 4. Nail strips on the edge of the 2 by 4 to keep a rope in place. If a large wheel can be secured and attached to the beam, a, it will be unnecessary to make one. A half-inch rope will hang any beef. Wind it several times around the wheel. Fasten two ropes, one is shown at f, to the roll about 6 feet apart, long enough to reach the floor. Construct a 3 inch roll 15 inches long, g, about 3 feet from the floor, with a crank attached to wind the small rope on. Attach the rope taut and the windlass is complete. I can dress and hang a 1,000-pound beef alone and can take down a quarter or side and leave the rest hanging. It is a simple, strong and cheap windlass.—E. N. Fisher, Hampden County, Mass., in Farm and Home.

Rules for Breeding.

Like begets like, only departing under strange and extraordinary influences.

Nature's laws are unerring, and, when scientifically directed, success is always attainable.

The male should invariably be line bred. His pedigree, form, constitution and disposition are his chief requirements, and should be as near perfection as possible.

Inbreeding is desirable where positive qualities are well established, and are transmitted with a certainty and strength that can not be reached by any kind of miscellaneous breeding.

The male should not be confined in dark and foul stables, but should have light and exercise and be fed with strict reference to strength and vigor.

The female requires light, air, and exercise, with a proper amount of food containing the proportionate elements of growth for the foetus.

The female should not be allowed to associate or have in sight inferior animals while in sexual heat or in early stage of pregnancy, but should familiarize with the best of her kind.

Kind treatment and regular attendance are strictly essential to success.—Ex.

Moisture Necessary.

Moisture is necessary for a good hatch. Often when chickens are hatching, the inner membrane of the egg adheres to the down of the chicken, which prevents liberation from the shell. This is usually caused by the nest being kept too dry. A great deal of trouble and loss in this way may be prevented by proper management. A shovelful of moist earth should always be placed in the bottom of the nest box. The heat of the hen's body draws up a gradual supply of moisture from the soil. If the weather or location is very damp this is not essential; but moisture must be supplied from some source, or the evaporation from the eggs will be so great that the vitality of the germ will be injured. A few days before the eggs are due to hatch, dip them in warm water just before the hen returns to her nest, or else pour a pint of warm water around the nest. If the eggs are dipped the work must be carefully and quickly done. The moisture will be converted into steam by the heat of the hen's body, and this softens the inner membrane of the egg.—M. B. Keech, in Orange Judd Farmer.

Live Stock of South America.

South America has 63,418,000 cattle, 118,229,200 sheep and 5,000,000 goats. Of these the Pampas of Argentine has 23,000,000 cattle, Brazil 18,000,000, Chile 6,000,000, Uruguay 8,000,000, Venezuela 5,000,000. Argentine has 80,000,000 sheep, Uruguay 23,000,000, Bolivia 7,000,000, Venezuela 4,000,000 and Chile 4,000,000. Venezuela and Argentine each have 2,000,000 goats and llamas.

With such immense numbers of cattle and sheep rapidly increasing, and some of them being improved by the importation of pure bred bulls and bucks from England, they will give us stronger competition in the European markets unless we grade up with more pure bred sires and raise a better class of stock. They can raise them cheaper and sell them cheaper on their boundless ranches than we can on our high priced lands, but we should be better able to raise high-class stock than any ranch country.

Stock Notes.

Cotton seed oil is said to be fatal to cattle ticks.

The Cornell station says that heavy-milking ewes, two years old, are best for early lamb-raising.

If your pullets have been properly cared for they should be laying nicely now.

Do not keep the hens until they become too old. The pullets and yearling hens pay the best.

If your hens are lousy they will not lay. A hen cannot fight lice and fill the egg basket at the same time.

The Russian war office thinks it has discovered that gray horses have more strength and endurance than brown ones.

Experiments with feeding wheat have shown that when wheat and corn are the same price per bushel, it pays better to feed the wheat and sell the corn.

One year old is soon enough for sows to breed to attain the best results. At this age they will pass the farrowing ordeal better, be better mothers, and the pigs will be larger and grow more rapidly.

If you intend to breed any sort of stock the coming season, try and get it better than you ever had before. Better not breed at all if you can't improve upon what you have been doing in the past.

Correcting the Diagnosis.

Dr. McMullin tells the following story on himself: A railroad man, occupying a responsible position on one of the great lines, was riding on a train one day when a collision occurred and his car was knocked into smithereens. He was picked up as one dead and was stretched out in some convenient place to await the arrival of a doctor to pronounce officially upon his condition. Dr. McMullin, who was then in his first year at Jefferson college, was on te same train. He bustled up, looked at the motionless form and pallid face of the prostrate official and said: "The poor fellow's a-goner, I guess." Then the embryo physician knelt down, lifted up an eyelid and saw a dull, expessionless orb. "Yes, he's dead fast enough. Take him away," he said. The supposed corpse suddenly began to move his lips. The startled McMullin listened, and this what he heard: "You blanked fool, that's my glass eye.—Philadelphia Record.

$10,000 FOR WOMEN
$1,000 FOR THE ONE WHO GUESSES BEST!

A YEAR AGO THE CHICAGO RECORD offered $30,000 in cash prizes to authors for the best "stories of mystery." The stories were so called because it was required that a mystery should run through the entire story and be disclosed only in the last chapter, the purpose being to give CASH PRIZES to those readers of THE CHICAGO RECORD who should be able to solve the mystery, or come nearest to a correct solution of it, IN ADVANCE of the publication of the last chapter in the paper.

THE AWARD OF AUTHORS' PRIZES HAS JUST BEEN MADE.

Stories from all parts of the English-speaking world, to the number of 816, were entered in the competition. Twelve Cash Prizes were offered for the best twelve stories. The first prize was $10,000, and was won by Harry Stillwell Edwards, of Macon, Ga. His story is entitled

"SONS AND FATHERS,"

AND ITS PUBLICATION WILL BEGIN IN THE CHICAGO RECORD ON MARCH 23, and continue in about thirty daily installments until completed. "SONS AND FATHERS" is beyond all question THE GREAT STORY OF THE YEAR. There will be an interval of a week or more between the publication of the last installment containing the explanation of the mystery and the immediately preceding chapter, during which period the guesses will be received by THE RECORD.

To still further promote popular interest in this remarkable story THE CHICAGO RECORD offers $10,000 in 889 cash prizes for the 889 guesses which shall come the nearest to being true and complete solutions of the mystery in the story.

THE $10,000 IS DIVIDED AS FOLLOWS:

To the reader from whom THE RECORD receives the most complete and correct solution in all its details of the entire mystery of the story, as it shall be disclosed in the last chapter when published	$1,000
For the second best solution	500
For the third best solution	300
For the fourth best solution	200
For the next 5 nearest best solutions, $100 each	500
For the next 10 nearest best solutions, 50 each	500
For the next 20 nearest best solutions, 25 each	500
For the next 50 nearest best solutions, 20 each	1,000
For the next 300 nearest best solutions, 10 each	3,000
For the next 500 nearest best solutions, 5 each	2,500
In all 889 prizes, amounting to	$10,000

FULL PARTICULARS as to the details of the conditions governing the awarding of these prizes will be published in THE CHICAGO RECORD. The principal rules are as follows:

1.—But one solution can be entered by a reader. It is immaterial whether the reader subscribes for the paper direct to the office of publication, or whether it is bought from the local newsdealer. The contest is open, under the specified conditions, to all who read the paper.

2.—The explanation of the mystery may be made in the reader's own words, in the English language, and without any attempt at "fine writing," simply giving as many of the facts that go to make a "complete and absolutely correct solution of the entire mystery" as the reader may be able to discover.

3.—The $10,000 will be awarded, under the conditions announced, according to the best judgment of the judges appointed by THE CHICAGO RECORD, and they will have complete control and final decision, beyond any appeal, in all matters relating to this unique contest.

And last, but not least,

ONLY WOMEN AND GIRLS MAY GUESS.

THE CHICAGO RECORD is pre-eminently a FAMILY NEWSPAPER, and its daily installment of a high-grade serial story is a feature intended to specially commend it to the home circle. To emphasize—and advertise—the fact that THE CHICAGO RECORD is a newspaper particularly suitable for woman's reading the further condition is made that the $10,000 in prizes shall be paid only for explanations or guesses sent in by women and girls. All may read, but only WOMEN AND GIRLS MAY GUESS.

SEND 10 CENTS AND GET THE RECORD 10 DAYS.

A SPECIAL OFFER........ THE RECORD will be sent to any address, post-paid, for 10 days, beginning with the first chapter of the story, FOR 10 CENTS, in coin or postage stamps. The story begins March 23, and it is desirable that subscriptions should be received as far in advance of that date as possible, but all subscriptions on this special offer received up to April 1 will be filled, but none after April 1.

THE CHICAGO RECORD... is Chicago's leading morning daily. In fact, with a single exception, it has the largest morning circulation in America—160,000 a day. It is a member of The Associated Press and "prints all the news from all the world." It is independent in politics and gives all political news with judicial impartiality, free from the taint of partisanship. It is Chicago's family newspaper. Prof. J. T. Hatfield, of the Northwestern University, writing to the Evanston (Ill.) Index, says:

"I have come to the firm conclusion, after a long test, and after a wide comparison with the journals of many states and countries, that THE CHICAGO RECORD comes as near being the ideal daily journal as we are for some time likely to find on these mortal shores."

The journalists' class paper, published in New York, called "Newspaperdom," says:

"There is no paper published in America that so nearly approaches the true journalistic ideal as THE CHICAGO RECORD."

Forward your subscription as early as possible, so that your name may be entered on the subscription list at once and the paper be sent you without any delay and in time for the opening chapters of THE RECORD'S GREAT $10,000 PRIZE STORY. Address

VICTOR F. LAWSON, Publisher THE CHICAGO RECORD,
181 Madison Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

TWO HEADS ARE BETTER THAN ONE—but three or four are better still. Let ALL the family join in the search for the explanation of the mystery in "SONS AND FATHERS," but remember "only women and girls may guess"—and win the 889 PRIZES.

THE NEWS RESUME.

DIGEST OF THE NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

A Comprehensive Review of the Important Happenings of the Past Week Culled From the Telegraph Reports—The Notable Events at Home and Abroad That Have Attracted Attention.

The Nation's Capital.

The secretary of the interior has held that the present boundary lines of the Red Lake reservation are correct.

Any statement or intimation that Capt. John G. Bourke of the Third cavalry, U. S. A., has been sent to Cuba on official business is wholly untrue.

Secretary Lamont's stand against the bill to confer upon Gen. Miles the rank of lieutenant general has stirred Grand Army people into a paroxysm of wrath, and they are already turning their batteries on congress.

Gov. Drake of Iowa has received from Secretary Herbert of the navy an invitation to be present at the launching of the battle ship Iowa. Miss Mary Lord Drake, daughter of the governor, is at the same time invited to christen the ship.

People Talked About.

The death of Mrs. Morris, sister of Ellen Terry, the well known actress, is announced in London.

Edwin F. Uhl, the United States ambassador to Germany, sailed from New York. He was accompanied by Mrs. Uhl, the Misses Uhl and Master Uhl.

Gov. Matthews of Indiana is painfully ill of laryngitis. He has not been at his office at the capitol for several days.

John T. Chumasero, formerly a partner of Marshall Field, is very ill in Chicago. Mr. Chumasero returned recently from California. He has been failing for a month.

On hearing of the death of Ambroise Thomas, Verdi telegraphed to the widow: "With the greatest sorrow I lament with you the loss of a great artist, of an honest man and a friend of forty years."

William Conrad, one of the best-known postoffice inspectors in the country, was found dead in bed at Greensboro, N. C. Death is believed to have been due to internal injuries received several weeks ago.

D. O. Mills of New York intends to erect, on the site of some of the worst slums in that city two colossal hotels, specially designed for the accommodation of the poorer classes. Rooms will cost 20 cents a night.

The once-distinguished prima donna, Mme. Etelka Gerster, who, after a short but brilliant career at Her Majesty's theater and also in the United States, partially lost her singing voice, is about to start a vocal academy in Berlin.

Miss Jane Douglas Rolely recently died at Swansea, Wales, at the age of ninety-six. Her father served with Lord Nelson on board the Victory, and among the deceased lady's possessions were the trousers worn by Nelson at the battle of Trafalgar.

Friends of Dr. Henry Lamott, assistant surgeon in the United States navy, who was reported missing from the Brooklyn navy yard since Monday last, state that the missing man has been heard from by telegrams from Huntington, L. I., where he was detained by sudden illness.

Accidental Happenings.

Madigan, Welsh & Co.'s cooper shop at Peoria, Ill., burned. Loss $40,000.

The tug Mascot, which left Baltimore last November, has been lost with its crew of eight men, all residents of Baltimore.

A powder mill at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., was blown up. Five bodies have been taken from the ruins and it is feared there are other victims.

Martin Vogel, a young Hollander, aged 16, fell beneath the wheels at the street stable car company's cleaning yards, south of Fulton, Ill., and was killed.

Walter Russell, a young man from Cleveland, Ohio, went skating on ice at Toronto, Can., and has not been seen since. He went there a week ago to seek employment.

Popple-Pierpont company's building in Chicago, occupied by the Electric Light Pictorial Enlarging company, M. A. Kelsey, manufacturer, and Marshall Field's shirt factory, burned. Loss $75,000.

Fire of an unknown origin destroyed the four-story brick building in Cleveland, Ohio, owned by the F. H. Kimball estate and an adjoining residence owned by B. A. Vaughan. A night watchman is missing.

Charles Morrison was killed, a child was fatally injured, a dozen persons, mostly women, seriously hurt, and the hundred or two members of a funeral party almost panic-stricken at Ottumwa, Iowa, by the running away of one of the teams in the funeral procession.

Crimes and Criminals.

Andy Stone, Peter Peering and Cal Rolan have been arrested at Guthrie, O. T., for robbing the posoffice at Liberty, O. T., recently.

Ex-Police Inspector McLaughlin, whose conviction of extortion was affirmed by the supreme court last week, has secured a stay, pending an appeal.

The body of Herserot Ransom, an Englishman, employed as a solicitor for the Texas Railway Guide, was recently found on River avenue, San Antonio, Texas, with a bullet through his heart.

James Beattie, Lincoln Lowrie and John Cornall have been arrested at Guthrie, O. T., charged with having murdered Frank Sully for his money a week ago.

Daniel Core, indicted for murder at Waukegan, Ill., pleaded not guilty. Kickham Stanley, his attorney, secured a continuance to the next term of court.

John Jones, who is wanted by Gov. Altgeld for kicking Mrs. Susan Mendenhall to death while he was town marshal of Anna, Ill., has been arrested in St. Louis.

Frank Nevels, colored, has been found guilty of murder in the second degree for having killed Mrs. Matson, who was found dead in her house in Topeka, Kan, with her head crushed in with an ax, over a year ago.

Herman Keck, a member of the Coeterman-Hinrichsen-Keck Diamond Cutting company of Cincinnati, was held in $3,000 bail by United States Commissioner Bell at Philadelphia, to await the action of the grand jury on the charge of smuggling diamonds into this country.

Mrs. J. A. Harrison, wife of the postmaster at Hobble, Ky., who was arrested for tampering with the mails, has confessed that she broke open a decoy letter with $3 in it, but did so through curiosity, and not for the purpose of obtaining the money, which was replaced.

George Smith and Frank Harding are accused of seriously assaulting Willis Scott, a non-union workman employed by Clarage & Sons at Kalamazoo, Mich. Police are stationed at at Clarages' to prevent further trouble. Clarages' men have been armed, and propose to protect themselves.

Robert E. Herman, thirty-two years old, a bartender, and Lizzie Grater, twenty years old, a domestic, guests at the Menlo hotel, New York, were found dead in their room, having been shot with a pistol which lay between them. From the attending circumstances and from letters which were found in the room, it is believed that the man shot the woman and then himself.

WANT TO ARBITRATE

ENGLISHMEN PREFER PEACE TO WAR WITH AMERICA.

Lord Salisbury States That Proposals for Arbitrating the Venezuela Trouble Have Been Made to America—Another Demonstration Against Americans Occurs at Barcelona, Spain.

London, March 24. — Lord Salisbury has sent a reply to the memorial in favor of Anglo-American arbitration of the Venezuelan question adopted by the peace society at a meeting in Queen's hall. The reply is addressed to Rt. Hon. James Stansfield, ex-member of parliament, who presided at the meeting. Lord Salisbury says: "I am glad to be able to inform you that this question is receiving the consideration of the government, and that proposals in the direction indicated by the memorial are now before the government of the United States."

Barcelona, March 24. — A renewed manifestation of the emotional spirits of the citizens of this town was made to-day, though no hostile demonstrations was attempted against the United States consulate, as on previous occasions. There was a promenade of light holiday-makers and a concert by the municipal band for the enjoyment of the promenaders. A remarkable scene occurred which seemed to be occasioned by a spontaneous movement of the crowd. Cries were raised for the playing of the national march by the band, and the regular programme of the concert had to be interrupted to satisfy the demands so importunate were the cries. The crowd then proceeded in a body to the French consulate, where a deputation entered to express sentiments of friendship and esteem for France. The people here are confident in their belief that France is pledged to assist Spain in a possible conflict with the United States. A crowd of 5,000 persons outside was meanwhile excitedly cheering for Spain, Weyler and Cuba. The American consulate and the chief thoroughfares of the city were guarded by gendarmes as a precautionary measure, but there was no attempt at violent disorder.

MR. HARMON SARCASTIC.

The Attorney General's Choler Rises.

Helena, Mont., March 24.—Last December considerable comment was aroused by the action of the United States court in ordering the United States surveyor general to produce in court the originals of some of the public records in the custody of the latter officer, copies being declared not sufficient. Surveyor General John S. M. Neill was committed for contempt of court; at least he was ordered committed unless he produced the records, and he only escaped imprisonment by appearing the day following and producing the records he had been subpoenaed to bring in. Mr. Neill will go to jail the next time the question is brought up as it was then. He has just received a letter from the secretary of the interior advising him that if it ever happened again to stand pat and his course will be vindicated. Attorney General Harmon, in a letter on the case, grows sarcastic in his reference to the proceeding. He takes advantage of his position to deliver a little homily upon the duties of judges of the United States courts. This is what he says: "If a case shall arise in which a judge orders records of the United States to be surrendered by their custodian, I shall advise such steps as will, if they should prove inadequate to protect the public records, at least challenge the action of congress to this most dangerous exercise of judicial power."

POVERTY LEADS TO TRAGEDY

Murder and Suicide by a Laborer in Omaha.

Omaha, March 24.—Poverty is supposed to have been the cause for a murder and suicide in Omaha. The bodies of John Hartman and his wife were found in their small residence in the northern part of the city, with a bullet hole in the head of each. A large revolver with two chambers empty was found by the corpse of the husband. The woman's body was doubled up, face downward, in a closet. She is supposed to have reached the position while trying to avoid her husband when he was trying to murder her. Nothing was left to indicate the cause. The man was employed by a contractor and had been out of work a long time.

Misfortunes of One Family.

Pierson, Iowa, March 24.—The family of Lloyd Baker was the victim of a most remarkable series of misfortunes one day last week. Baker himself had been ill for some time, and on the day in question breathed his last. Notwithstanding his sickness he was not supposed to be in danger and was alone in his room at the time. Feeling a sudden change for the worse he called to his wife, who was on the floor below. In hurrying to his assistance Mrs. Baker struck her head against an obstruction, was knocked senseless and did not recover until after her husband's death. At about the same hour that their father died, his two sons, William and John, were unloading grain from their wagon on the main street of the town, when a stone carelessly thrown by a bystander struck the latter on the head, cutting a deep gash and rendering him unconscious. On his way home with his wounded brother, William lost control of his team, was thrown from the wagon and broke both arms.

Against Flag Desecration.

Milwaukee, March 24. — The members of the Wisconsin National Guard association, now in session in this city, passed a resolution calling on the Wisconsin members in congress to secure the passage of a law forbidding under heavy penalty the use of the American flag for advertising or for any purpose other than that of being carried in a military procession. The resolution is sweeping in its terms, one clause forbidding the use of the flag for "political or partisan purposes."

HE ADORNS A TREE.

A Murderer in Tennessee Is Strung Up.

Chattanooga, Tenn., March 24. — A mob took William Murphy from the jail at Huntsville, Tenn., last midnight and strung him to a tree. The villagers knew nothing of it until the body was found hanging from a honey locust tree this morning, not eighty paces from the old log calaboose. He was in jail awaiting trial for the murder of Bill Knowlin, a miner, three weeks ago at Pioneer, in Campbell county, which adjoins Scott county, in which the lynching occurred. About thirty mountaineers with handkerchiefs over their faces did the lynching. The leader wore no disguise, but seemed to be a stranger. He knocked at the door, awakened Jailer C. C. Ellis, representing that he was a deputy sheriff with a prisoner he wanted locked up. As the jailer opened the door he was covered with a large army pistol and the keys demanded. He refused to surrender the keys. The mountaineers drew revolvers on the jailer's frightened wife and daughter, and the wife gave up the keys. Murphy begged hard for his life, and asked that if he was to be killed he should not be dragged or choked to death. He was roughly dragged out and hung to the nearest tree. Murphy and his victim were both miners. Murphy leaves a widow and several children at Junction City, Ky. Huntsville is near the Kentucky line.

PROTESTS BY MANUFACTURERS.

Meeting Asked to Disavow the Late Conference.

Philadelphia, March 24.—In order to correct what they allege to be a false impression growing out of the recent secret conference in Washington between silver men and Philadelphia manufacturers, three prominent members of the Manufacturers' club to-day, addressed a letter to Robert J. Jordan, its president, requesting him to call a meeting of the club for the purpose of informing the club of the real attitude of the organization on the silver question. The letter is as follows:

"To-day's papers show that the capital which the friends of free and unlimited coinage of silver are trying to make out of the Washington visit of Philadelphia manufacturers rests upon as unsound and frail a foundation as the whole structure they are trying to erect. An erroneous impression has certainly been spreading over the country that our Philadelphia manufacturers are willing to conciliate the silver senators by approving the free coinage of silver in exchange for additional protection, and has given new life to the agitation for free silver. This impression should be removed in the most public and emphatic manner, and we request you to call a meeting of the Manufacturers' club to take action and express its opinion on free silver coinage. We desire the country to know the position of the club on this vital question."

BURNED TO DEATH.

Fatal Ending of a Spree Near Bayfield, Wis.

Bayfield, Wis., March 23—Julia Bird, an old squaw and quite a character in this section, her daughter Charlotte Bird, an infant daughter of Charlotte and O. Biquette, an Indian from the Bad River reservation, were burned to death early this morning in a dwelling house on the outskirts of town. Biquette was quite well to-do. According to the testimony at the coroner's inquest the party were all drunk the night before and were suffocated and burned by the accidental igniting of the dwelling.

Pleases the Papers.

London, March 24.—The Daily News (Liberal) has an editorial on Lord Salisbury's reply to the memorial of the peace association for arbitration of the Venezuelan dispute in which it says: "Lord Salisbury's letter is the most hopeful news we have had for a long time from the premier. We hope that it portends a definite clearing of the international situation in one of the sternest quarters. We may even dream that it will presage a new and brighter era in the world's history." The Chronicle, also Liberal, echoes the Daily News' hopes that the United States will reciprocate our good will. "If so," the Chronicle adds, "there is no need to trouble ourselves further about Venezuela."

Conciliating Ballington Booth.

New York, March 24.—Many were the expressions of surprise at the headquarters of the Salvation Army to-day when the news leaked out that Col. William Eadie, the chief secretary, had received a cable message from Gen. Booth, ordering him to London. One of the stipulations that Ballington made to the three commissioners to get him to withdraw was that Col. Eadie should go to London and never return. The officers of the Salvation Army look upon this as the first step taken by the old general toward effecting a reconciliation with his son.

Went Skyward.

Niles, Mich., March 24.—The frame building containing a grocery store of Gates & Ritter at Dowagiac, was blown to atoms to-day. The roof was thrown high in the air. Reshore's floral emporium, on one side, and Bangs' saloon on the other, were slightly damaged. The plate glass in the building was hurled across the street. Many windows opposite were broken. The cause was the ignition in some way of some powder on the ground floor. Nobody was injured.

One for Quay.

Stronsburg, Pa., March 24. — The Monroe county Republicans elected Dr. Thomas C. Walton delegate to the St. Louis convention and instructed him to vote for Quay. There was a strong McKinley sentiment.

Poisoned and Grave Robbed.

Green Bay, Wis., March 24.—The alleged poisoning of her husband and the subsequent theft of his remains was reported to the authorities today by Mrs. Henrietta Droshn, of the town of Sevastopol, Door county. She states that her husband died a short time ago under circumstances which caused her to think that he had been poisoned. Shortly after his burial this feeling became so strong that she determined to have the body taken up and examined. When the grave was opened for this purpose it was found that the coffin was empty.

LYNCHED BY A MOB

A BAD COLORED MAN IN LOUISIANA DISPATCHED.

Ike Pizer Makes the Fatal Mistake of Attempting to Assault Two White Ladies—A Man in Indiana Shoots and Kills His Brother and Then Takes His Own Life.

Shreveport, La., March 24.—A negro named Ike Pizer was lynched this morning near Emporia Station, on the Shreveport & Houston railway. Yesterday afternoon two young ladies were walking home on the railroad track near Emporia. On their way, they were stopped by the negro, who offered them a gross insult, which they promptly resented. The black brute knocked them off the track and was frightened from further violence by the screams of the girls. The negro fled to the woods and the girls hastened home and detailed what had happened. The news spread and soon a mob of armed citizens was on the trail of the negro. The search was continued all night and early this morning the hiding place was discovered. Pizer was at once taken in charge and lynched by the infuriated mob.

Noblesville, Ind., March 24. — A double tragedy occurred on the farm of William Frost, seven miles north of this city to-day. James and Henry McCoy, brothers, have been living in the neighborhood for a year. This morning Henry left his home to haul some wood. Returning, he was met in the yard by James, who, without a word, emptied the contents of a shot gun into his body. The murderer then killed himself with the same weapon. No cause is assigned for the deed.

Answered With a Bullet.

Rochester, N. Y., March 24.—John A. C. Wright, well known throughout this and other states as an exponent of better country roads, to-day shot Henry Quinby, son of the late Gen. Isaac Quinby. Mr. Quinby is a bookkeeper of the Union bank. The wound was not serious. It is alleged that last week Mr. Wright wrote a note to Mrs. Quinby, widow of the late Gen. Quinby, to which the son took objection. Quinby, it is stated, went to Wright's office and demanded an apology and Mr. Quinby slapped him in the face. After some words, Wright drew a revolver and shot Quinby in the shoulder. Wright was arrested and released on $5,000 bail. It is said his family will ask for a commission to inquire into his sanity.

Hanged Themselves.

Eau Claire, Wis., March 24.—Mrs. Syver E. Brinl, wife of ex-Assemblyman Brinl, committed suicide at an early hour this morning by hanging herself from a beam in a barn on the family premises. Deceased had been in poor health for some time. She leaves, besides her husband, a large family of children.

Sherburn, Minn., March 24. — Rinehart Faber was found hanging by the neck this morning in Henry Werenberg's barn; cause unknown.

Big Fire in Colon.

New York, March 24.—The World has a special cable from Colon which says: A terrific fire raged here for five hours and burned itself out. It destroyed the better half of the commercial part of Colon. One life was lost and hundreds are left homeless. The Panama fire brigade came across the isthmus to assist in fighting the flames. The damage is estimated at $500,000, the insurance covering about one-twentieth part. Business has been suspended.

Small Riot in Boston.

Boston, March 24.—Wolf Glickman was arrested to-day by Officer Shaw at his home for alleged violation of the liquor law, but as soon as the officer appeared at the door with his prisoner he was attacked by a crowd of Glickman's friends. The officer was no match for the crowd, and after a furious fight he was disarmed and thrown down. Barnet Fellman got the officer's revolver and attempted to strike him with it and fatally shot himself.

Was Tired of Life.

St. Paul, March 24.—Despondency over want of employment is what probably caused Mathias Fansler to take his own life this morning. But little is known of the suicide. He boarded at 605 Farrington avenue, and has been doing odd jobs in the neighborhood, such as sawing wood, carrying in coal and the like. He is about forty-five years of age and has no relatives in the city so far as known.

A Revolting Crime.

Helena, Mont., March 24.—Advices from Virginia City bring to light a crime wherein Jacob Hain, a rancher, is charged with having committed rape on his thirteen-year-old daughter. Officials will give no particulars, as they are straining every effort to capture the man, who has escaped. His first offense was committed about eighteen months ago, but under threats she was induced to remain quiet.

Mrs. Kimball Dead.

St. Paul, March 24. — Mrs. Jennie Kimball, mother of Corinne and manager of the Kimball Opera company, died this morning in the president's car of the Northern Pacific, in which she had been brought from Butte, Mont., where her illness first assumed a serious turn.

Raines Bill Is Law.

Albany, N. Y., March 24.—Gov. Morton signed the Raines high license bill to-day.

Died in the Poorhouse.

Rome, N. Y., March 24. — Edward Hopkins, colored, aged 103 years, probably the oldest person in Oneida county, is dead. He died from paralysis in the poor house. He was a cook on the Erie canal for twenty-five years.

Roasted Coffee.

Davenport, Iowa, March 24.—A fire last night gutted the building occupied by the Washburn-Halligan Coffee company, and slightly damaged the plant of the Daily Leader. Loss $185,000.

DEMOCRATS IN THE FIELD.

Minnesota State Convention Will Be Held in St. Paul.

St. Paul, March 24.—Chairman McDermott, of the Democratic state central committee, has issued the official call for the state convention to select delegates to the national Democratic convention, to be held in Chicago July 7. The call provides for the attendance of 829 Democrats from Minnesota, who will in turn elect eighteen delegates to attend the national convention. They will also nominate nine presidential electors. The convention will be held in St. Paul June 11. The official call follows:

"In conformity with a resolution adopted by the Democratic state central committee at a meeting of said committee held on March 5, 1896, the Democrats of the state are called to meet in delegate convention in the Market hall in the city of St. Paul on Thursday, June 11, 1896, at 11 a. m., to elect eighteen delegates to represent the Democracy of Minnesota in the national Democratic convention, to be held in Chicago, Ill., July 7, 1896; also to nominate nine presidential electors. The representation will consist of two delegates from each county and one additional for each 150 votes or major portion thereof cast for the Democratic candidate for president in 1892."

Upon this computation the several counties of the state will be entitled to representation in said convention to the number of delegates indicated as follows:

Total, 829.

DAVIS AND M'KINLEY.

Ramsey County for the First and Hennepin for the Second.

St. Paul, March 24.—The Republicans of Ramsey county, in convention assembled at Market hall, formally presented to the people of this country the name of Senator Cushman K. Davis of St. Paul for the nomination for president of the United States, reserving as the second choice of the people, in case Mr. Davis cannot be nominated, the name of William McKinley of Ohio. The sentiment of the Republicans of Ramsey county for Senator Davis for first choice for president was almost unanimous. The resolutions endorsing him were adopted by a rising vote. The First ward, part of the Third and scattering members of the Fifth remained seated, and the First was the only ward that voted solidly against the adoption of the resolutions.

Minneapolis, March 24. — At the Fifth district congressional convention Charles A. Pillsbury and Judge Eli Torrance were chosen delegates to the national convention. S. E. Olson, W. E. Hale, F. C. Campbell and C. S. Cairns were also voted for. The following resolution, offered by Judge Torrance, was adopted:

"Resolved, That we, Republicans of Hennepin county, in convention assembled, favor the nomination of William McKinley for president of the United States, and request the delegates who shall this day be chosen to represent us in the state convention to use all honorable means to secure the election to the St. Louis convention of four delegates at large who shall favor the candidacy of William McKinley and use all proper and reasonable means to secure his nomination for the presidency."

Lamp Overturned.

Minneapolis, March 24.—By the upsetting of a lamp in the residence of G. Leinsky, at 208 Ninth avenue north, early last evening Mrs. Mary Gosmn was so badly burned about her body that she is not expected to live; I. Gosmn, her husband, was painfully burned about the head and hands; Louis Goodman, who resides on the second floor, had his left hand painfully burned, and six-year-old Sam Leinsky was painfully burned about the head and face.

Last of Life.

St. Peter, Minn., March 24.—A. H. Benham died this morning of pneumonia at the age of sixty-six years. Mr. Benham had been agent for the American Express company for the past fourteen years. Prior to that he was proprietor of the old northwestern hotel, and was at one time chief of police of this city. He was a brother of Admiral A. K. Benham, of the United States navy. His son, C. N. Benham, is secretary of the Northwestern Fuel company at St. Paul.

Coopers Win.

Minneapolis, March 24. — The journeymen coopers have won their strike, the master coopers signing an agreement yesterday afternoon giving up their demands. The master coopers had posted orders that the employes should be docked for leakage, and the journeymen went out as a protest. They returned to work this morning.

William Q. Judge, president of the Theosophical society in America, dies in New York.

Child Saved by His Jump.

St. Paul, March 24.—John R. Lemieu, Jr., of 12 Phalen avenue, narrowly missed being killed yesterday while riding on his wheel on East Seventh street, near Bradley. He jumped from his machine to save a child that was directly in his path. He underestimated the speed at which he was going and was thrown violently forward. His chin struck the curb and he fell in the street perfectly insensible and bleeding from numerous wounds on the face and head. The child was not injured.

W. A. Sorsoleil received a car load of lumber and shingles this week.

The chinook wind of Tuesday, with the aid of old Sol, did great work in this neck of the woods.

O. W. Brink left last Saturday for the southern part of the state for a car load of horses which will arrive here this week.

Monday was an extraordinary busy day with our merchants, judging from the amount of farmers seen upon our streets.

Wm. Barrage will have a nice line of sample wall paper in a few days and anyone wanting papering done this spring, will do well by calling on him and make selections.

C. W. Peters has accepted a position with D. W. Ensign & Co., who are preparing a pocket hand index map of Polk county. Mr. Peters will canvass this part of the county for them.

J. E. O'Brien the Crookston hardware man was here to-day on his way to Red Lake Falls. Strange as it may appear, J. E. is still a red hot democrat, in fact something rare in this neck of the woods.

Henry Norland, commissioner of this district, was a pleasant caller at this office last Monday. Mr Norland left on the same day for Crookston in order to be on time at the opening of the county board Tuesday morning.

On April 1st. I will have a complete stock of spring and summer millinery. I wish all my old customers to call and inspect same before purchasing elsewhere. MRS. J. A. DAINARD.

A glance at the East Grand Forks papers indicate that a change has come over that town. It used to be all whiskey, but now the merchants are in a hot grocery war, and are using page ads. Who can tell, perhaps East Grand Forks will make a model town yet.

The more adventuresome populance of the village enjoyed themselves very pleasantly at Brink's hall, Saturday evening, for which they are indebted to Mr. I. Halvorson. The crowd being select all had danced sufficient before the Sabbath hour arrived and departed feeling that the evening was well spent.

W. I. Bassett, who has been cruising on the reservation for the past month is here again and reports that he has found some excellent agricultural land. He will return in a few days to look up some more land. Mr. Bassett and the Madden boys will locate settlers this spring, and it is safe to say that they will be right onto their job.

Much credit is due the young ladies of the M. E. church for the success, literal and financialy, of the social given last Friday evening. The capacity of the church was not over taxed, but those who attended, express their regards in high terms of praise about the supper to which they were invited to partake. Net proceeds $14.

The time for the discussion of the fitness of political candidates for the various state, county and municipal offices is before the nominations of persons to fill these offices. The one thing most to be desired in the politics of today is purity. The people are behind the leaders, and the people are to blame if they allow corrupt leaders to make nominations of corrupt men. The chief education needed in politics is the education of the people to assert their rights, which would result in their choosing only the best and most unselfish men as leaders, and they in return making nominations of good men, those whom they know to be honest, reliable and unselfish. Men elected to offices are merely servants of the people, and their only business, duty and aim should be to see that the interests of the people are carefully looked after.—Atwater Press

Editing a newspaper is a nice business. If we publish jokes people say we are rattle-headed; if we don't, we're an old fossil. If we publish original matter, they say we don't give them enough selections; if we give 'em selections; we are too lazy to write. If we "puff" a man we are partial. If we compliment the ladies the men are jealous; if we don't, we're publishing a paper not fit to make a bustle of. If we remain in our office, we are too proud to mingle with the "common herd;" if we're out on the street, we're not attending to our business. If we don't go to church, we are a heathen; and if we do, we are a hypocrite. If we wear good clothes, we do not pay for 'em. Now what will we do? Some may say, we stole this from our exchanges—and so we did.

GALLOWAY STEAL.

J. N. Galloway appeared in the municipal court Tuesday afternoon, March 17th, and waived examination on the complaint made against him by Chas. Johnson, charging that Galloway had embezzled $384.03 from him. Mr. Fryberger, of the firm of Fryberger & Johnson of Duluth was here representing the different farmers of Dakota who claim to have been defrauded by Mr. Galloway.

The complaints are all signed Charles G. Rapp who had a power of attorney from all of the aggrieved parties. The names of the farmers together with the amount claimed by each is as follows: A. P. Sandberg, $250.28; Alfred Dahlstrom, $169 57; John Hedlund, $191 76; John Johnson, $277.94; L. A. Carlson $257.48; which makes a total of $1,527.07 figuring in the original complaint. Besides this the same firm represents another client for whom no complaint has been made, which will swell the whole amount to be about $2,700. It is said that there are also others who have similar claims aggregating $1,000 in all. This would make a total shortage of about $4,000.

Mr. Galloway waived examination on all the new charges also and was bound over to the next term of the circuit court which is to be held in August. Judge Hutchins fixed the bail at $800 in the case where Charles Johnson was the complaining witness and $800 in the case where A. P. Sandberg was the complaining witness. In all the other cases the defendant was permitted to sign his own bond for $800 this being merely a nominal requirement.

John Waterwarth of Duluth and Dr. John Specht of this city, went on both bonds and the prisoner was given his liberty.

The counsel for the farmers asked to have the prisoner bound over to the May term of the superior court for the reason that August was the busiest month in the year for farmers. The defendant would not consent to this, so he was bound over to the circuit court. Both the court and the district attorney entertained doubts as to whether a prisoner could be bound over to an inferior court against his will. They thought that possibly the prisoner had a constitutional right to select his court and rather than to have any question raised, they acceded to the wishes of the defendant.

Mr. Galloway has not yet selected any counsel to defend him yesterday waived examination in his own behalf.—West Superior Leader.

C. G. Rapp returned last Friday from West Superior and does not appear to have much hopes of convicting Galloway. He says "that they appear to stand in together down there and that the prisoner appeared altogether too familiar with the court." It certainly does appear that the people of West Superior are taking their time about punishing Galloway. He has stolen nearly three thousand dollars from the farmers, and if the people of West Superior want further shipments of grain from this country, Galloway must secure the punishment he deserves. West Superior citizens must act in this matter if they expect further business. If they do not, grain next fall will go anywhere but there and the farmers here will conclude that there are more thieves at West Superior than Galloway.

Valhall Society.

In the Town of Rocksbury and vicinity is a class of enterprising citizens who wish to keep up with American progress and have organized a society for social culture and amusement.

The officers of the society are as follows:—Henry Norland, president; Miss May Halvorson, vice-president; Peter Engelstad, sec'y; O. Running, treasurer.

The board of directors are:—Henry Norland, Peter Engelstad and Martin Bekken.

The hall, 24x48, is now in course of construction and will be a comodious structure. The opening will be given later in this journal.

St. Hilaire Schools.

Our schools are rapidly coming to the front under the proficient management of J. B. O'Brien, ably assisted by Miss Mary Kyle.

Prof. O'Brien has worked with such percision and caution that our schools are now on an equal bases with the schools of the county in amount of work done and practical results obtained. No doubt it was through his efforts, by the latest improved methods which he introduced, that Misses Knite Berglund and Cora Harris, members of the A class both obtained teacher's certificates and are now able to cope with any of the country teachers in the manner of presenting work and obtaining best result from pupils.

We have not heard that any steps are taken to retain Prof. O'Brien for the coming year, but it is to be hoped for the good of the schools and the advancement of the pupils, that the board will show their appreciation of his work by making it an object for him to remain another year that the village schools may keep in pace with other improvements that we contemplate making with the opening of the reservation.

John Sandberg, formerly of Black River and Miss Julia Mossefin of Crookston were married to-day. Mr. Sandberg has many warm friends in this vicinity who wish him all kinds of good luck.

A CHANGE.

With this issue Mr. John J. Soll having purchased an interest, will take editorial charge of the SPECTATOR. Mr. Soll is a newspaper man of considerable experience, and will, I think, give the people of St. Hilaire and vicinity a first class paper and I hope he will receive the patronage he deserves. Thanking you all for past favors, and wishing for the future prosperity of St. Hilaire and its citizens, I bid you as editor of the SPECTATOR, good-bye.

Yours truly,
H. E. IVES.

The county board is in session this week.

Wm. Maria of Crookston was a visitor in town to day.

A. Thompson, the Minneapolis Brewery representative was here to-day.

J. A. Dainard leaves to-day for Chicago with a car load of fat oxen and steers.

We are under obligations to a few of our kind neighbors for helping us sort out "pi."

We are under obligations to the News of Thief River Falls for the use of a case of type.

George Wylie, of the Wood Harvester Company, was in town a couple of days this week.

C. G. Rapp went down to Crookston to day to transact business with the Judge of Probate.

Another day and sleighing will be a thing of the past and it is to be hoped for the last of the season.

Street Commissioner Harris is kept busy these days making necessary improvements on the cross-walks.

Bert McDougall, the printer of the Thief River Falls Press made this office a friendly call the first of the week.

Mr. A. Monro of Glasston, N. Dak., was in town to-day. He is figuring on some farm property in this vicinity.

The Republicans held their state convention to elect four delegates to the National convention at Minneapolis yesterday.

Mine host Arthur passed around the fragrant Havanas the first of the week and of course everybody smoked—on the boy.

S. M. Dainard returned from Crookston yesterday where he had been attending the 7th Congressional Republican Convention.

Owing to an oversight at the type foundry they shipped our type by freight instead of by express. We expect to get out a better appearing sheet next issue.

The local market report at the head of this page will be changed weekly. This is very important to the farmers, especially so in regard to butter and eggs.

We want a good live correspondent from every township within 16 miles of St. Hilaire. Send in the news, we want to know what is going on in your neighborhood.

It is reported that Chas. Tedford of Thief River Falls, has the finest bar fixtures anywhere this of the twin cities. Charley is progressive and nothing is too good for him or his customers.

The Republicans held their congressional convention at Crookston last Monday. Congressman Eddy was renominated by acclamation. Ezra Velentine and O. J. Gunderson were elected as delegates to represent this district at the St. Louis conecntion.

Fred Bresette of Red Lake Falls was in town to day conferring with the officers of the Boom company in regard to fixing the river between here and Thief River Falls. Mr Bresette is a veteran at the business, having superintended the work on the Clearwater for T. B. Walker.

P. G. Paradis made a business trip down to Wylie yesterday and of course had the usual run-a way. He came back in a farmers wagon with one robe, one cushion and minus the whip and other articles. If you are not anxious for trouble don't ask him how it happened.

Three new "prairie schooners" passed through here on Tuesday on their way to the reservation. These land seekers are from North Dakota and they report a large following will head for St. Hilaire (it being the nearest point to the best land on the reservation) right after seeding.

J. M. Berg of Leavenworth, Kansas, who has been visiting with his brother L. T. of this place for the past week, leaves Friday for his new home at Williston, North Dakota. Mr. Berg was somewhat surprised at seeing fur coats worn and snow on the ground this late in the spring.

BORN.

To Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Arthur, Sunday, March 22nd 1896, a son.

To Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Twing, Sunday, March 22nd 1896, a son.

DIED.

On Thursday night, March 19. 1896, occured the death of Oscar Gigstad, the only son of Mr. K. O. Gigstad, age 8 years, after a lingering illness. Oscar was a bright boy and greatly beloved by all who knew him. He being a former pupil of our schools, it was decided by the board to close the schools Monday afternoon on which day the funeral occured from the Lutheran church that his pupil associates might pay their last sad tribute to their departed class-mate. The remains were followed to the cemetery by a long course of mourning friends.

The bereaved family has the sympathy of the entire community.

Major Baldwin Gives His Opinions on Certain Obscure Points.

Major Baldwin, chairman Chippewa commissioner, drove into Fosston last week from his home at White Earth, taking a circuitous route through the Red Lake ceded reservation, in the course of which he located several "sooner" outfits, who may or may not hear from his visit again through instructions from Washington.

His opinion in certain directions as to the Red Lake opening is of value and interest. He does not think that old soldiers will be allowed the term of their service in the army in making final proof. He believes all will be allowed to commute the term of residence by making full payment after four months' residence; that no "scrip" of any kind will be received in payment; that a first payment of $40 will not be required until the close of the first year; that pine timber only on tracts easily accessible to driving streams, and even then destroyed or in danger of destruction by fire and wind, will be sold before the early summer; that any 40-acre tract with less than 10,000 feet of standing timber will be classed as "agricultural" land, and subject to homestead entry, and that only homestead entries will be allowed.

It is learned on good authority that on July 1st, when the appropriation becomes available, the government estimators will return to work on the Red Lake reservation.

Some of the pine on the Rainy river cost $17 per thousand feet to estimate as against $3 per thousand valuation.—Crookston Tribune.

Alderman Freeman of the First Ward has a brilliant idea and will spring it at the council meeting in April. He proposes to have an ordinance passed putting a tax of ten dollars each on batchelors while residing in the village. The batchelors will probably come back and ask that a curfew bell be sounded every night at nine o'clock, warning all married men to leave for home.

Let the good work go on—two ordinances in sight for the printer.

ICEBOUND IN SALT LAKE.

An Unexpected Happening In Water That Never Freezes.

The large percentage of salt in the Great Salt lake prevents its waters ever freezing over, and yet a curious incident was related to me of how a small pleasure steamer got icebound a dozen years ago off the east end of Antelope island. My informant was the captain of the cattleboat, that makes irregular trips back and forth to carry stock to and from this largest of the Salt lake islands. I will give the story as nearly as possible in his own words:

"It was a curious thing that once happened to me an Cap'n Dahls," he began, with a preliminary undoing of the knot of his soiled neckerchief. "I wa'n't much used to sailoring at the time, an the cap'n often took me with him on short trips he made with his small steamer, the Susie. One day he got word that a boat was becalmed off North Antelope. We steamed out to see, an found a sheepboat bound for Carrington island. There was three men aboard an 200 sheep, an they'd been out ten days an hed no food an scarcely any water left. We give 'em a fair divide of the grub aboard the steamer, an, takin 'em in tow, made our way out in the main body of the lake, where we left 'em close to Carrington. It was getting late when we started back, an just op'site Bear River bay we found ourselves in a stream of ice which had come down from the swollen rivers that empty into the lake hereabout. At first it was only provoking to be hindered by the broken sheets of ice, but fin'ly it got so we couldn't make no headway. The cap'n said he'd sailed around the world four times an never was icebound before—an that, too, in a lake that's too salt ever to freeze. He was acting as engineer, an at last got so mad that he cussed an swore an complained of my steering.

"At last we had to give it up till morning, an then it wa'n't no better. There was no wind to break up the ice an it kep' closing 'bout us till we could see nauthing but it on all sides. The cap'n's temper got worse when the bread an bacon was all gone, an he growled out, 'Ketch me ever going to sea again with a green hand fer crew!' I was pretty riled, an said something back 'bout a fool of a cap'n who thought himself at the north pole. We'd always ben good friends, but after that neither of us spoke more'n we's 'bliged to all that day an the next night. When the second morning came an we saw it was still calm, we got reckless an piled in the wood till we got up steam an commenced bucking ice at a great rate. We saw the glassy sheets give way to right an left, an fin'ly we was clear of it, so we could go right ahead. It was Sunday morning, an the sea an mountains looked so bright an peaceful that I saw the pucker in the cap'n's for'ed smooth out, an he commenced to whistle soft an ole hymn tune we both knowed. I struck in where the line repeats, an when we'd ended up he said, 'Say, Duffy, you don't mind my having been sharp with you in that blamed ice, do ye?' I up an slapped him on the back, an answered, hearty like, 'Cap'n Dahls, I never served under a better cap'n than yourself.'

"We shook hands, an his big voice was a bit husky when he blurted out:

"'Say nauthing 'bout it, my boy. I'm certain sure I never hed a more able seaman than you've showed to be.'"—San Francisco Chronicle.

MINNESOTA
AT
WINONA, MANKATO, ST. CLOUD AND MOORHEAD.

These schools are organized for the training of teachers for the public schools of the state.

ORGANIZATION.—Each school comprises two departments—the Normal Department and the Training Department or Model School.

The Normal Department embraces:

(a) An elementary course of two years for teachers of rural district and elementary grades.

(b) An advanced course of five years for teachers of advanced grades.

(c) A professional course of two years for graduates of high schools.

(d) A kindergarten training course [at Winona, St. Cloud and Mankato.]

ADMISSION.—Graduates of high schools and and colleges and teachers holding county superintendents' first and second grade certificates are admitted without examination.

All others are required to pass an entrance examination.

EXPENSES.—Tuition is free to all who pledge themselves to teach in Minnesota. Text books are furnished at a rental of $3 per year. Provision is made in each school for economical living. The average cost of furnished rooms with board is about $3 per week. The Ladies' Home at St. Cloud offers board, furnished room heat and light at $3 per week. The new dormitory at Moorhead, and the ladies' Home at Winona furnish similar accommodation at a slightly higher rate. Winona accommodation $3.50 per week.

The next school year opens at Winona September 2nd; at Mankato, September 2nd; at St Cloud September 3rd; at Moorhead September 3rd.

A PAIR OF TIN TROUSERS.

That Is What a Sailor Had Who Was Caught Smuggling Rum.

"You would be surprised at the amount of smuggling that is done by the crews of sailing vessels," said one of the customs inspectors over on the Brooklyn docks. "Many rich cargoes come in here from India, South America and the West Indies, and the temptation to smuggle is too strong for the average sailor to resist. There is something fascinating about smuggling, which is the only way I can account for the fact that many an otherwise honest man doesn't scruple to defraud the government whenever he gets the chance. Among sailors this feeling is almost universal. Indeed they seem to think that their calling gives them the privilege of bringing in a few things on every trip, and they are apt to make it very uncomfortable for the officer who attempts to enforce the law. The articles they smuggle consist mostly of liquors, cigars, fine silks and such delicacies as preserved ginger, curacoa, etc.

"But let me tell you how I discovered one of the most ingenious schemes for smuggling that were ever devised. I was in the habit of visiting a little old fashioned saloon, and one day the proprietor asked me if I would sample some of his rum. It was fine old Demerara. I began to wonder where he got it, for he didn't keep it in stock all the time. Then I noticed that he got in a fresh supply every time a certain ship arrived.

"I thought I saw a good chance for a seizure and kept a close watch on the saloon the next time the vessel came in. I hung around the place all night, but not a sign of smuggling could I see. There was no doubt, though, that it had taken place, for the next day the saloon keeper was treating all hands to rum. The only suspicious thing I saw was that one of the sailors made frequent trips from the ship to the saloon. I was morally certain that he was doing the smuggling, but how he did it was a mystery, for I never saw him carrying anything.

"One day when he was returning to the ship I drew him into conversation. He had been sampling some of his own rum and began skylarking. At last he made a kick at me, and I playfully hit him on the leg with my walking cane. There was a sharp metallic sound as the blow fell. The man's face whitened, and he sobered up in a moment. It was all plain enough to me then, and I knew that the wide trousers the man wore meant more than a mere peculiarity of dress.

"There was no legal evidence against the man, as no rum was found in the ship, but I made him show me the contrivance. It was practically a pair of hollow tin trousers, of the most ingenious design, by which he could carry gallons of liquor with little fear of detection. He never attempted to work the scheme again, and some time afterward he told me that he had sold the contrivance for a good sum to a smuggler who plied his calling on the Canadian border line."—New York World.

On a Pillion.

The double saddle which enabled the lady to accompany her lord on horseback was in common use in New England during colonial times and even later. It was especially associated with the churchgoing usage of those days. The custom was brought here from England. It is said that even within "living memory" the pillion has been in common use in parts of Devonshire about Dartmoor.

There is a story told of a country parson of that region which goes to show that the same churchgoing associations were connected with the use of the pillion in the old country as in the new.

The good parson found occasion to explain the parable of the marriage supper. He knew how readily his parishioners would respond to an invitation to such a feast, and he knew in what manner they would come. He was forgetful of the distance in time and in space between that supper and his service, and so he censured severely the man in the parable who offered as an excuse for his not coming to the supper that he had married a wife, and therefore could not come.

"A frivolous excuse this, my friends, a frivolous excuse indeed. Why, he might have brought her behind him on a pillion!"—Youth's Companion.

Eat Pines Like Bonbons.

Our North American Indians eat the seeds of many plants, parching them, then grinding them and making them into gruel. Their fondness for the seeds of some pines is well known, these "pinions" being to them what sugar plums are to us.

Competent Witness.

"Say, kid, wuz dey a fight over yere? Kid sez dey wuz."

"Wuz one, but it's over now."

"Did you see it?"

"See it? I'm de kid wot got licked!"—Chicago Record.

...ity of Marble Shafts In the Shadows of Cypress Trees.

"And why do the Osmanli prefer Scutari as a burial place to any other?"

"Because it is there the trumpet of the archangel will be first heard. The true believers who lie at Scutari will first rise to answer it; next, the faithful from other parts of the earth; after that the Hebrews, and lastly the giaours who follow other gods."

Thus spoke the grave old turbaned Turk who stood beneath a cypress tree on the slopes of the world famed cemetery of the sea of Marmora.

"All know," he went on in calm, judicial accents, "that when the last days of the world are drawing near, the Osmanli will be driven forth from Stamboul by the Frank. Then, for a space, there will be trouble and turmoil on the earth; all sons of the faithful will fly up to Scutari as a refuge; there they, the living and the dead alike, will await the day of judgment."

With that, thinking it was a hurt to his dignity to parley longer with a giaour, he gathered his robes about him, saluted majestically, then passed slowly away down one of the long, broad avenues leading to the gates of the cemetery, leaving the stranger to wander at his pleasure through that forest of tall tombstones standing erect.

The coup d'œil is picturesque in the extreme. As far as one can see, the long slender shafts of marble rise beneath the shadow of the massive cypress—the tree of Allah, the Osmanli call it—which points its finger to the sky, while the luxuriant vegetation of the east clusters around the base of the slabs, emphasizing their snowy whiteness and preventing them from being too dazzling to the eye.

Each tomb bears its own decoration. A single leaflet, the drooping petals of a rose, or graceful frond of fern indicate that a female form lies below. A turban or a fez shows that the dead person was a man. Lamps, ostrich eggs, sashes, fringed and colored handkerchiefs of varied hue, all have their own significance; while here and there will be seen some tall stone, sculptured from end to end, its ornamentation in high relief, encircled by a number of smaller ones, which proves that the father of a family—a man of wealth—rests here surrounded by his wives and children. A curved scimiter shows that a man of war reposes there; an anchor marks the sleeping place of a sailor; a wand of office proves that the dead man held some post of command. So on, till something is learned of all, even though one may not be able to decipher the fantastic Arabic characters which tell with more detail the history of the dead.

The terms in which the Turk expresses his lamentations are often very pathetic, especially when they refer to the loss of his wife or child.

Here is one, taken from the tomb of a young girl, which effectually combats the common western delusion that the Osmanli believe that women are born without souls or hope of a future life:

"The cold blasts of fate caused this nightingale to wing its way to heaven. There it has found its awaited bliss. Zeinab is the name of her who lies below, and for her Lababa, who wrote these lines, offers humble petition: Weep not for her, for though dead she has become a sojourner in the gardens of paradise."—St. Paul's.

Unconscious Humor.

A simple peasant woman, having come to town on a market day, saw the newsman coming along the street and hailed him as he passed. "Are those Tribunes you are selling there, friend?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Then let me have ten copies; they are for my son; he won't be able to get to town for ten days, and he must have something to read anyhow."

A fact.—Tribune de Geneve.

Presidential Nicknames.

But a few of our presidents have any descriptive word or phrase attached to their names. Mr. Lincoln is spoken of as the "Emancipator," General Jackson is called "Old Hickory," James Monroe is famous as the author of the "Monroe doctrine," James Madison used to be characterized as the "Father of the Constitution" and Jefferson as the "Father of Democracy," while George Washington leads them all as the "Father of His Country."—New York Sun.

SERENADE.

Dearest, look up! If only I might speak
In ardent words like poets long ago,
A deeper flush would tint your glowing cheek,
For love is strong, though human speech be weak.
So lean and listen while I tell it low;
I am no minstrel, but one song I know—
Dearest, I love you! Oh, I love you so!

I love your hair—your golden wealth of hair—
The tender brow of innocence and youth;
I love your eyes, that know not guile nor care;
The smiling lips, that breathe content and truth.
Draw near and listen while I tell it low;
I am no minstrel, but one song I know—
Dearest, I love you! Oh, I love you so!

I love the jests you toss along the way,
The ready laughter that lights up the eyes,
For well I know it is but surface play,
And you can feel, and you can sympathise.
So lean and listen while I tell it low;
I am no minstrel, but one song I know—
Dearest, I love you! Oh, I love you so!

Laugh on, my glad one, for the laugh rings true;
Drink in the fragrance of your youth's bright morn.
This little posy I have plucked for you
From my heart's garden will not wake your scorn.
For lean and listen while I tell it low;
I am no minstrel, but one song I know—
Dearest, I love you! Oh, I love you so!

GEORGE COULDN'T GET HIS PAPER.

How He Tried to Protect Himself Against the Borrower.

"Found in the Sulpician seminary in Paris and presented to Worcester college by G. Goodwin, the finder," is what one may read on the back of a frame containing a letter which was written by George Washington, and which now hangs on the walls of the cabinet in Holy Cross college, Worcester, Mass. The precise manner in which the letter, sent by the retired general to Matthew Carey of Philadelphia, was carried to France and then returned to Worcester is not known.

The Rev. Peter Blenkinsop, S. J., now in Philadelphia, and the oldest living ex-president of Holy Cross, remembers that G. Goodwin, who is mentioned in the inscription, was a clergyman of Boston and an intimate friend of Bishop Fenwick, the founder of the college. The Rev. George Goodwin studied in Paris, and it is likely that he obtained the letter.

Matthew Carey, to whom the letter was addressed, was a young Irish journalist who was obliged to flee from his native land. He went to Paris, where he met Benjamin Franklin, then representing the United States at the court of Versailles. It is very probable that it was during his stay in Paris that he met Lafayette, who is mentioned in the letter.

Franklin assisted Carey, and subsequently the young Irishman went to Philadelphia, where he began to publish The Pennsylvania Herald Nov. 15, 1784. This is undoubtedly The Evening Herald named in the letter.

The note was penned by Washington while he was living in retirement at Mount Vernon. The little note tells that the retired general was anxious to keep acquainted, by means of his newspapers, with the happenings of his country, and how he would outwit the mail pilferers. The letter is preserved in the cabinet of the college and rests beside one that was written by the Irish poet, Tom Moore. It reads:

MOUNT VERNON, 15th Mar, 1785.

SIR—I purposed as soon as I understood you intended to become the publisher of a News Paper in Philadelphia to request that a copy of your weekly production might be sent to me.

I was more pleased with the determination when, by a letter from my friend the Marquis de la Fayette, I found he had interested himself in your behalf.

It has so happened, that my Gazettes from Philadelphia, whether from inattention at the Printers or Post Office, or other cause, come very irregularly to my hands! Let me pray you, therefore, to address those you send me, in the appearance of a letter. The common paper, usually applied, will do equally well for the cover.

It has sometimes occurred to me that there are persons who, wishing to read News Papers, without being at the expense of paying for them, make free with those which are addressed to others. Under the garb of a letter, it is not presumable this liberty would be taken.

I am, Sir, Yr Most Obed Serv.
GO. WASHINGTON.
Mr Matthew Carey, Printer of The Even'g Herald.

One of John Randolph's Similes.

Much new material is embodied in the article "John Randolph of Roanoke," by Powhatan Bouldin in The Century. The following simile by Randolph is found in a note to a speech which he delivered in congress:

A caterpillar comes to a fence; he crawls to the bottom of the ditch and over the fence, some of his hundred feet always in contact with the subject upon which he moves. A gallant horseman at a flying leap clears both ditch and fence. "Stop!" says the caterpillar. "You are too flighty; you want connection and continuity. It took me an hour to get over; you can't be as sure as I am, who have never quitted the subject, that you have overcome the difficulty and are fairly over the fence." "Thou miserable reptile!" replies our fox hunter. "If, like you, I crawled over the earth slowly and painfully, should I ever catch a fox, or be anything more than a wretched caterpillar?"

A JACK RABBIT HUNT.

There Is Lots of Fun In It, and It Is Quite a Social Occasion.

A Missouri man crossed his legs reflectively in one of the clubs the other night and told a party of Meadowbrook gentlemen that they did not know what hunting really is.

"I've seen you fellows riding across country after a fox that wasn't any fox at all," he said. "You all look mighty pretty in your rigs, and your horses are good ones. But, bless me, you ought to come out to my place and see Missouri society take a whole day off and go out on the prairie hunting the jack rabbit.

"Gewhittaker! There's a snap to it that you fellows don't have in your eastern hunts. Talk about foxes. Why, foxes can't touch jack rabbits for sport. Jack rabbits are blue blazes to catch, and we hunt 'em with the finest greyhounds in all creation. Some of those dogs are worth clear up to $1,500.

"You know it's all dead level prairie round that way. They grow sunsets there, though, that can knock out anything they have on the Alps. For miles and miles the prairie stretches along almost as smooth as a dancing floor. Well, when a party of us start out for a hunt we carry along the finest society people. Probably it's a party of a hundred, sometimes a darn sight bigger. The most of them go on horseback, but there are tallyho coaches, too, and lots of carriages.

"You see, it's a game. The party rides along with the dogs and the umpire in the lead until a jack rabbit is scared up. Then the first two dogs are slipped. Away they go after the jack, and the umpire keeps as close to them as possible, and behind, in a strung out line, come the whole field of horsemen and horsewomen, tallyhos and carriages, everything going at the fastest clip it can set its legs to.

"Like a dead flash of lightning the jack scoots across that prairie, getting over the ground with those enormous jumps of his that make him seem like a little kangaroo. Gee whiz, how those jack rabbits can go! It takes a mighty peart greyhound to come up with 'em. It's entirely a race by sight. There's no real trail, for the hounds don't follow by smell at all. What they have to do is to keep the jack in sight and follow him in the turns and doubles he makes. A good umpire can keep up with the dogs every trip. He has to, for the point of the game is to see just which dog plays for that jack rabbit the best. For example, the dog that swerves the least in the track and follows the jack in the straightest line has a point in his favor. One of the hounds, for instance, might run a little off the track, and the jack in making a turn might swing around in his direction, so giving him the lead. But it would count for the other dog just the same, for it would be just an accident of the chase.

"It isn't necessarily the hound that kills the jack that gets the prize, although that counts pretty big. It's the hound that can run the straightest, double the turns the prettiest and cut off distance when the jack commences to double. About the middle of the day a big lunch is spread, and there's a lively popping of wine corks, and the fellows whose dogs have won get toasted in great shape. Sometimes the girls pin ribbons on them, and it's the biggest social triumph a man can have out in that region for his dogs to be winners."—Chicago News.

How He Found It.

Dean Hole is responsible for the following anecdote of one who was born and lived close to the cataract of Niagara: When he came to manhood, he had the opportunity of reading Southey's poems, and the well known verses on the waterfall of Lodore excited his curiosity. "Ah," he sighed as he put down the book, "what if some day I might see Lodore!" That day came. He was among the lakes, and, wearied by fruitless wanderings in search of the cataract, he sat down on a bank, and, seeing a countryman approach, he addressed him: "Friend, I have come between 4,000 and 5,000 miles to see your famous cataract. Tell me where are the great waters of Lodore?" And the rustic drew nigh and said, "You be a-sittin on it."

Sour

Stomach, sometimes called waterbrash, and burning pain, distress, nausea, dyspepsia, are cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. This it accomplishes because with its wonderful power as a blood purifier, Hood's Sarsaparilla gently tones and strengthens the stomach and digestive organs, invigorates the liver, creates an appetite, gives refreshing sleep, and raises the health tone. In cases of dyspepsia and indigestion it seems to have "a magic touch."

with severe pains across my shoulders, and great distress. I had violent nausea which would leave me very weak and faint, difficult to get my breath. These spells came oftener and more severe. I did not receive any lasting benefit from physicians, but found such happy effects from a trial of Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I took several bottles and mean to always keep it in the house. I am now able to do all my own work, which for six years I have been unable to do. My husband and son have also been greatly benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla—for pains in the back, and after the grip. I gladly recommend this grand blood medicine." MRS. Syrup of Figs

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

THE HOT-IRON TEST.

What Prof. Babcock Has to Say About It.

Cheesemakers habitually use the hot iron to determine the condition of curds. It consists simply of touching a piece of curd from which the whey has been pressed with a piece of iron heated nearly to redness and then pulling it away. Under certain conditions the curd will adhere to the iron and when pulled away will be drawn out into fine threads. The length of the threads is supposed to be in proportion to the acidity of the curd, and this is said to have one-fourth of an inch or one inch acid, accordingly as the threads will pull without breaking, one-fourth of an inch or one inch in length. Prof. Babcock, in the Twelfth Annual Report of the Wisconsin Experiment station, shows, however, that the hot iron test has no necessary connection with the degree of acidity in the curd, but that it indicates a condition of the curd which may be brought about in a variety of ways. It is, in effect, a test of the more or less plastic condition of the particles of the curd, and of the degree to which they will adhere to each other, and when they are in this condition and are piled they will flatten and assume the meaty texture desired in the cheddar process before they are put to press. The cheese will close up well, showing few mechanical holes. A variety of organisms contribute to bringing the curd into this condition. The lactic, or acid, form predominates usually, but others which have a peptonizing or digestive action on the casein have also a considerable influence in producing the desired condition. Moreover, curds precipitated by the natural developing of lactic acid in the milk will not always "string" under the hot iron test. In other words, there may be a high degree of acidity without bringing the curd into the condition desired, or the condition desired may exist without any high degree of acidity. The practical bearing of this fact is that the attempts that have been made to substitute an acid test for the hot iron to determine the condition of the curd will not answer, because the condition wanted has no necessary connection with the degree of acidity.—The Homestead.

As It Goes.

From the locality where this is written thousands of gallons of milk go daily to the great city, and it is a complaint that the farmer receives too small a share of the sum for which this milk retails in the city. To this is added, by some, that the railways offer little protection to the farmer, in this, that they charge the farmer near the market too much for freight upon the milk, and the far-away farmer too little; so that the man 300 miles away from the city, on cheap land, competes on equal ground, with the farmer near the city market, living on high-priced land. There is reason in this, but not exactly equity. If the man near the city cannot make more milk from an acre than the man 300 miles away, his land is not worth any more than the other. It is what a man's land earns him that gives it its value, and we do not think this man has a case with the railway company; but all of these farmers, far and near, do have a case with the city dealer. Milk selling for 7 to 8 cents a quart, and sent to the city for less than ½ cent a quart freight, should have more than a 2½ to 3-cent value to the farmer, and, in this, we know of no remedy, save in meeting organized buyers with 400 times as many organized sellers or producers. In one thing we think the farmers could do a more effective work in demand, and that is in making a better milk, i. e., better cared for, and sent forward better, and so have yet better ground for an advance. We know it is a difficult thing for 10,000 farmers, living in fact hundreds of miles apart, to organize to meet the few buyers who live in close touch; but in some way these farmers must give delegate powers to a few and then make good their agreements. If milk could be corded up like wood the dealers could be boycotted, but it will not keep, and every day adds equal volume to it, and a boycott means great loss. So, at last, we think the difference between buying and retail price of milk will have to be lessened by arbitration, or a total withdrawal of all material and making the milk into butter and cheese, and thus command the attention of buyers, by a sort of independence that has a personality, a self-defense of its own.

Making Butter Without Hay.

The scarcity of hay complicates the feeding problem, especially for those engaged in dairying. I have eighteen cattle and five horses. All the rough feed I possessed last fall was straw from ten acres of short oats and ten acres of shredded corn fodder. The problem was what to feed the cows so as to get an average of one pound of butter per day from each cow milked, as I needed that amount to supply customers. I began feeding corn fodder as I would hay, adding a liberal ration of corn, bran and corn-and-cob meal. This method, however, consumed the fodder too rapidly, much of it being wasted, and the milk yield was not satisfactory. I then changed my method to the following, with much better results: Six bushels of mixed straw and fodder are slightly moistened with salt water. To this is added one bushel of bran, one-half bushel of corn meal, six quarts of oil-cake meal and the whole mixed with a fork. This is fed to nine cows each morning, and the same amount is given at night. The ration gives better results than any mixture of these feeds that I have ever tried. Bran is worth $11 per ton, corn 25 cents per bushel—to which 5 cents is added to pay for grinding—and oil cake $20 per ton, thus making the daily cost of the grain for nine cows 75 cents. Each horse is fed a basket of straw and fodder night and morning, and is also given six to eight ears of corn three times a day. They are in better condition than when given all the hay they will eat. The cattle are registered Jerseys.—William West, Illinois.

Dairy Improvement.

The first step in the line of dairy improvement is to procure a thermometer. It is hardly necessary to tell even the most old-fashioned butter maker how absolutely necessary it is to use a thermometer if he or she wants to make a good selling article of butter. Every body by this time probably knows it, whether acknowledging it to themselves or not. The point most necessary at this day to call attention to is the necessity for obtaining a correct instrument, one that is not so poorly made that it will soon get several degrees out of correct marking. Dealers in dairy implements now sell thermometers made especially for dairy use, that can be easily cleaned and are well made.

One test of a good instrument is to turn it upside down, and see if the mercury rises to the other end in a solid column. If it does, then the tube is clean and evenly open all the way; but if it sticks so that the column is broken it is sure not to move regularly when right side up. The cream of different herds is apt to work at slightly different temperatures, and it is only by trying different temperatures that you can tell at which one yours does best, and then mark your thermometer accordingly. This variation in the quality of cream is usually so slight that only the most careful workman takes note of it, but in the course of a year the amount of loss may be considerable, and is, therefore, worth guarding against.—Home and Farm.

Bogus Butter.

The produce exchange of Chicago gives the following figures on bogus butter: In 1894 in the United States there were manufactured 70,000,000 pounds of oleomargarine, equal to the product of 500,000 cows, of which in Illinois there were made about 60,000,000 pounds, equal to the product of 450,000 cows. During the above period the agricultural producer for the raw material entering into a pound of butter received 16 cents, while under the same condition for the raw material entering into a pound of oleomargarine he received 3 cents. This difference represents a loss of 13 cents on every pound of oleo sold and consumed as butter—over $8,000,000 in the United States and $7,500,000 in Illinois. It is a conservative estimate that 80 to 95 per cent of the oleo consumed is consumed as and for butter at the price of butter. Every pound of the oleo consumed takes the place of and destroys the sale of a pound of butter. It is further true that it is the yellow color, or the shade of yellow color artificially given to oleo that enables it to be sold and consumed as butter at the price of butter. In other words, it is the means whereby the fraud is committed and the public deceived. The consumer is thus defrauded and cheated—but everybody is a consumer, therefore in this connection the terms consumer and the public are one and the same thing. But legislation seeking to protect the public from fraud is not class legislation, and it is further true that legislation against fraud is not class legislation.

The Dairy.

The United States department of agriculture, in its bulletin on the souring of milk, says the real cause is not the temperature but bacteria.

A dairyman says that the best practice of feeding cows is to regulate the character of the food by the character of the animals fed; feeding superior cows nearer to the limit of their production than inferior cows; feeding, if for butter, more concentrated and nutritious foods than for cheese; feeding for cheese, product succulent material, which will increase the quantity of the milk yield.

It is not good dairy farming to dispose of the calves as soon as large enough for green veal and to depend upon hap-hazard buying to replenish the dairy stock. Procure a young bull from the best dairy breeds and rear the calves which come from the mating with your cows. At a slight expense the herd will be kept growing better and better.

It is accepted that soft food in a dairy is better than dry food, and that with plenty of good ensilage it is no trouble to keep up the summer flow of milk all through the winter. The experiment with ensilage may be tried as cheaply, even by packing ensilage corn in a celled bin, that each farmer may know its worth for himself.

It has been shown that cows without salt for a week shrank about 15 per cent in quantity of milk, and in quality also; that it turned sour in much less time than milk drawn from the same cows when receiving salt every day. This shows the importance of giving them a regular supply, and they should always have access to it.

Good flavored food produces good flavored butter, whatever may be said to the contrary. A young dairyman prize taker, it was afterward learned, picked bright clover heads every day for his pet Jersey which gave the milk. Improper foods, with flavors not of the standard sort, will not give the best products.

Cleanliness Necessary.

To show the degree of cleanliness to which dairying is now advancing, the idea is now suggested that the cows should be kept so clean and the milker so neat that it is forbidden that the milk should be strained. Straining is done to take the dirt and the cow hairs out of the milk that should never be allowed to get in it. This is true whether it is practical or not. If the cow is properly bedded and brushed, and the udder wiped clean before milking, and the man has clean hands and keeps his head away from the cow's flank, as he should, there is no dirt to get in the milk that a strainer could get out, and it does look as though all the dirt that the strainer catches could be kept out, while the real harmful dirt that gets in dissolves and goes into the milk through the strainer.

To be sure this is a pretty high notch, but we are coming to it. This is a high standard, but let us acknowledge that milk should be like Caesar's wife and patent baking powder—absolutely pure. Then if kept pure it will be an easy matter to make perfect dairy goods from it; for after all the trouble we have with milk all comes from our own carelessness in letting it become injured before we are ready to work it. Hence the need of haste in hurrying it from the cow to the table. This is the trend of all modern improvements.—Home and Farm.

Will Thunderstorms Sour Milk?

The popular belief that thunderstorms will sour milk is so widespread that it would seem as if there must be some foundation for it. It has been asserted by many that the ozone produced in the air by electricity, a condition which is particularly noticeable in the high altitudes of the Rocky mountains, causes the milk to become sour. In experiments in which electric sparks were discharged over the surface of the milk, however, little or no effect has been produced upon it. The conclusion is that electricity is not of itself capable of souring milk or even of materially hastening the process. Nor can the ozone developed during the thunderstorm be looked upon as of any great importance. It seems probable that the connection between the thunderstorm and the souring of milk is one of a different character. Bacteria certainly grow most rapidly in the warm, sultry conditions which usually precede a thunderstorm, and it frequently happens that the thunderstorm and the souring occur together, not because the thunder has hastened the souring, but rather because the climatic conditions which have brought the storm have at the same time been such as to cause unusually rapid bacterial growth.—Denver Field and Farm.

HOW ARE YOUR FENCES?

A Very Important Question with Farmers and Others Just Now.

Probably there is nothing that interests the land owner more at this time of the year than fencing. They are desirous of securing the very best article they can for the purpose they desire to use it for and at the cheapest price going. While this is good business, price should not take the place of quality. In building a smooth wire fence you do not build it for temporary use but expect it to last you for years and to get this kind of an article it requires a certain amount of good material to make it.

The De Kalb Fence Co., of De Kalb, Ill., has the largest and most complete line of smooth wire fencing of any plant in the country. We desire particularly to call your attention to their goods and write them for a catalogue which they will mail you free.

No line of goods has grown so rapidly in demand or given such general satisfaction as the fencing manufactured by this company. Their steel web picket fence for lawn and yard purposes, their cabled field and hog fence for farm use, their cabled poultry, garden and rabbit fence for its use, are all they claim for them.

You will hardly do yourself justice if you do not thoroughly investigate their lines before placing your order.

The Unkindest Cut of All,

As Shakespeare says, is to poke fun or sneer at people who are nervous, under the half-belief that their complaints are imaginary or an affectation. It is neither, but a serious reality. Imperfect digestion and assimilation of the food is a very common cause of nervousness, especially that distressing form of it which manifests itself in want of sleep. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters speedily remedies nervousness, as it also does malarial, kidney, bilious and rheumatic ailments. The weak gain vigor speedily through its use.

Judging from the insanity returns, sixteen cases in a thousand are caused by love affairs.

THE Indian has given to their "pale faced" and weaker brothers, the greatest boon of modern civilization, Nature's own medicine, Kickapoo Indian Remedies made from roots, herbs, gums and barks, just the same as the Indians have made them for centuries. Their wonderful physique, power of endurance, and great durations of life, are evidences of the efficacy of these remarkable preparations.

On the arrival of the first settlers in this country, the Indians did not endeavor to hide their knowledge, but went among them

"Teaching them the use of simples,
And the antidotes for poison,
And the cure of all diseases;
Then was first made known to mortals
All the sacred art of healing."

From that day to the present thousands of cures have been effected by these most potent preparations, the most wonderful in its results being the now famous KICKAPOO INDIAN SAGWA Blood Purifier, the greatest known specific for all derangements of or troubles resulting from the kidneys, liver, stomach or blood. Thousands have obtained immediate relief and effected a speedy cure by its use.

No harm can possibly result from it, as it contains no minerals or other poisonous ingredients, and their power to cure is almost miraculous.

Many are alive to-day to give it praise, who but for its timely use, would now be filling graves—the victims of Catarrh, Nervousness, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Kidney Complaints, Impure Blood and the many other diseases resulting from a derangement of the great life-maintaining organs.

Other Kickapoo Indian Remedies: Kickapoo Indian Cough Cure, Kickapoo Indian Oil, Kickapoo Indian Salve, Kickapoo Indian Worm Killer. Sold by all druggists.

UNAPPRECIATED KINDNESS.

He'll Not Advertise the Next Pocketbook He Finds.

A prominent physician of this city will hand the next pocketbook he finds to the police. He picked up a purse in the street a few days ago. It contained some receipts for making cake and preserving fruit, some samples of dress goods and $2.25 in money. He advertised the find, and it was remarkable how many people there were who had lost pocketbooks. Each tried to obtain some idea of what the one found was like in order to notify friends, but the doctor was not easily beguiled.

Finally a lady came in and said:

"Are you the man who found a pocketbook?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Well, it's mine."

"What kind of a pocketbook did you lose and where did you lose it?" asked the doctor.

"It was a leather pocketbook, and of course I don't know where I lost it. If I did I'd have gone back and found it. But I want my pocketbook."

"I only wanted to see if it was the one you lost," pleaded the doctor.

"Didn't I tell you so? Do you think I am lying about it? If you don't give it to me now I will have the police get it for me."

"Madam, if it is yours I want you to have it. Now, what did the one you lost contain?"

"Let me see. There was some money, and some receipts for making cake, and one of my mother's for putting up tomatoes. But it is none of your business, anyway. You had no right to open my pocketbook and read the papers, even if you did find it."

The doctor was convinced that the woman owned the pocketbook and showed it to her.

"Is it yours?"

"Of course it is mine. How many times do you want me to tell you so?" Then she opened it and counted the money.

"There ought to be a dollar more," she said. "I had a five dollar bill changed and only bought some little things. I don't remember what, but it didn't come to over $1.75. Well, I suppose one can't expect a man to be honest, and you can keep the dollar. I hope it will do you more good than ill-gotten gains usually do," and she left the office with a look of scorn at the man who had found the purse.—Philadelphia Times.

RUINED BY A CONTRACT.

An Iron Founder Who Knew Nothing About Bronze.

The founder of the Vendome column in Paris met with financial ruin in his contract. The French government, when it decided to erect the notable column, entered into a contract with an iron founder. He knew nothing whatever of modeling or casting in bronze. The government agreed to supply him with cannon captured from the Russians and Austrians during the campaign of 1805, in quantities sufficient to found the monument. The contractor, knowing nothing of the phenomena which the fusion of bronze offers, found, when two-thirds of the column was completed, that he had used up all his metal. Sufficient bronze had been given him to complete the monument, and he was responsible for the entire amount. Finding himself face to face with bankruptcy, he melted up his scoriae and mixed the metal with cheap refuse, which he purchased, and so completed the founding. The castings, however, were found to be so full of flaws that the work was stopped and the founder ruined. The moldings of the different parts of the bas-relief were so badly executed that the chisellers who repaired the defects removed no less than seventy tons of bronze. They received for their labor £12,000, to which was added the seventy tons of bronze, which became their perquisites. The whole transaction was very, very French.—Philadelphia Record.

A Prisoner's Ingenious Escape.

A military deserter, who was sentenced to seven years' imprisonment in the military prison at Pilsen, devised, says our Vienna correspondent, a novel and amusing means of escape, and has not been recaptured. His cell and the corridor outside it are lighted all night, and the patrol looks through a grating to make sure the prisoners are safe. The deserter dressed up a straw doll in his cloak and cap and laid it on the bed. He got rid of his shackles by prying off the peg in them with a buckle. Then he burned out the lock of the door with the red-hot fire shovel and escaped into the corridor. A number of furnaces which heat the ovens open upon the corridor and he remained during the night in one of these, blacking himself and his clothes like a sweep's. When the prison doors were opened he walked out as a chimney-sweep, whom no sentinel suspected.—London Daily News.

A New Kind of Sandwich.

Have you eaten of the very latest dish? I say latest in every sense of the word, for it's a dish that goes with the midnight Welsh rabbit, and is the newest and best sort of a sandwich. You take fresh bread and perfect butter. Then you have some fresh roasted peanuts—it's the fad to roast them yourself—ground fine in a coffee-mill. Next you mix the ground nuts into a paste with a little sherry or old port, spread them on the bread and there you have the sandwich everybody is eating. You may substitute mayonnaise for sherry, or add a drip of almond essence, but a peanut sandwich you must have if you are to follow the fashion set, they say, by the wife of a cabinet member.—Washington Post.

To Combat Razors.

A gentleman in the Southern states of America has given us an order for a peculiar shaped dagger for use on niggers who carry razors."

"What for? To shave them?" "No; to fight, to stab them with. They attack with razors. He said it was impossible to make a move for his revolver, which he carried on his right hip under his coat, without their being beforehand with him. This dagger he will carry in a sheath attached to the left side of his waistcoat. You see, you can make a short quick prod with it." The manager had the thing see, you can make a short quick prod with it." The manager had the thing in his hand.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Oxygen in Drinks.

Beverages are now aerated with oxygen in Germany, and sold in bottles or syphons like lemonade. Oxygen gas is, of course, a medicine of considerable value in cases of diabetes, anaemia and some diseases of the respiratory organs. It may not be out of place to mention here that helium, the new gas, long recognized in the sun, has been found in the mineral waters of Wildbad, in the Black Forest, and also in another spa near Carterets, in the Pyrenees.—London Public Opinion.

Almost Crazed.

THOUGHT HER CHILD WAS GOING TO DIE.

The Terrible Ordeal of a Mother—Her Little Girl Almost Faded Away—Saved in the Nick of Time—A Story that will Touch the Heart of Every Mother.

From the Journal, Detroit, Mich.

A very grateful mother is Mrs. A. L. Harthess, of 676 Grandy Avenue, Detroit, for the wonderful cure which her daughter has received by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Said Mrs. Hartness: "Yes, my daughter's life has been saved by using Pink Pills, thanks to a kind friend who recommended them to me.

"Blanche was sick for over three years. She had the care of the best physicians procurable, and no expense or trouble was spared to give her relief. She was so thin that she was fairly skin and bones, her digestion was out of order and she had the most awful headaches. We gave up all hope of her recovery. Her long, thin, listless face made me nearly half crazy, and we did every thing in our power to give her strength and induce her to take an interest in anything.

"One day a friend told me about the Pink Pills, and Mr. Hartness went down town and got three boxes. She had taken about one box, when, to my amazement, one morning I heard her playing on the piano. I could hardly believe it, for it had been over a year since the piano had been opened.

"Soon she began to take short rides on her bicycle, and soon she went singing around the house, our own happy, hearty little daughter once more.

"She thinks nothing of a spin on her wheel over to Mt. Clemens or Pontiac, and is as well as she ever was.

"I had a girl living at our house who was a great sufferer from impoverished blood, and who received instant and permanent relief from the use of one box of the pills.

"If this information can be of any use to help some poor sick one, it is given with the greatest of pleasure."

The proprietors of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills state that they are not a patent medicine but a prescription used for many years by an eminent practitioner who produced the most wonderful results with them, curing all forms of weakness arising from a watery condition of the blood or shattered nerves, two fruitful causes of almost every ill to which flesh is heir. They are entirely harmless and can be given to weak and sickly children with the greatest good and without the slightest danger. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50—by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

PITH OF THE NEWS.

EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

A General Resume of the Most Important News of the Week, From all Parts of the Globe, Boiled Down and Arranged in Convenient Form for Rapid Perusal by Busy People.

Washington Talk.

The battleship Massachusetts has made a successful trial trip.

Mr. Burnham, the United States consul at Zeitoun, has been ordered to Killize to report upon the disturbances which took place on March 20.

The state department has now in press the introductory review of the commerce of the world, compiled from the commercial relations of the United States with foreign countries.

The senate committee on Indian affairs united in a letter to the president recommending that a regiment of United States troops be stationed permanently in Indian Territory, for the purpose of preserving order there.

People in Print.

As an acknowledgment of Queen Victoria's hospitality to his son a few months ago the ameer of Afghanistan has just sent her presents valued at £120,000.

Sir John Millias' first picture was purchased by Charles Reade, the English novelist. Ruskin said that it was not a failure, but a fiasco, and kicked a hole in the picture.

Mrs. Clara Wood of Klamath, Or., is one of the best mining experts in the West. A high commercial value is placed upon her knowledge of the minerology of the Klamath river region.

The five composers selected to adorn the "crown" center piece to be presented to Theodore Thomas are Beethoven, Wagner, Brahms, Berlioz and Rubinstein. Thus, Germany, Austria, France and Russia will be represented.

A French newspaper publishes the following advertisement: "M. Emile Zola of Plambeuf, inventor of the spring nippers, notifies his customers that he has nothing in common with his namesake, Emile Zola, the writer."

A statue of Lord Byron, by two French sculptors, Chapu and Falguieres, has been unveiled by King George at Athens. The poet is represented as advancing with outstretched arms to meet Greece, who holds out to him a laurel crown.

Henry B. Fuller, the Chicago author whose "Cliff Dwellers" and other books have made him well known in the East, is a very shy and retiring man not yet 40, and younger than that by several years in appearance. Some of his ways are boyish in the extreme. The fair sex is fond of him, and he has become popular in society, where he has only recently begun to show himself.

Casualties.

The British bark Alexandria was towed into port at San Francisco in a burning condition.

By the burning of their home, near Charleston, W. Va., William Coxey, wife and child, lost their lives.

A heavy rain storm at Webb City, Mo., flooded many zinc and lead mines and caused a suspension of operations and much damage to miners and operators.

At Elgin, Ill., Herman Rossdeutcher, a lad of an inquiring mind, looked into the muzzle of a gun to see if it was loaded. It was. Both eyebrows and a big patch of skin are now missing.

The village of Berrien Springs, near St. Joseph, Mich., was nearly burned up. Seven buildings, including the postoffice, were destroyed. The loss is $25,0000 and insurance $1,500. It was the work of an incendiary.

Mrs. Pavey, the wife of W. H. Pavey, seventy years old, of Marion, Ind., awoke during the night with a severe pain in her stomach. She started for the pain cure, and just as she reached the fireplace, in which there were two logs of wood burning, she lost consciousness and fell into the fire. She was badly burned about the head, neck and breast. She will lose her eyesight entirely.

Evil Doings.

Keornan Reed, a retired manufacturer of New York, aged eighty-seven years, committed suicide. Illness was the cause.

Elijah Rutter died at Brice, Ohio, from pistol wounds received by John White, who, also, is expected to die from a corn-cutter wound made by Rutter. The trouble was about Rutter's wife and White.

Edward Meyers and Timothy Buchanan, members of the local fire department at Hinsdale, Ill., were indicted for arson. They are accused of having originated a number of fires in that vicinity.

Following a lecture given at the Christian church at Dunmore, Pa., by an alleged ex-priest named Ruthven, a fight broke out, during which about fifty shots were fired and resulted in four men being injured.

A mob took William Murphy from the jail at Huntsville, Tenn., and strung him to a tree. Murphy was in jail awaiting trial for the murder of Bill Knowlin, a miner, three weeks ago, at Pioneer, Campbell county.

An unaccountable tragedy occurred in Hamilton county, Ind., near Noblesville. James McCoy met his brother, Henry, and without a word, emptied the contents of a double-barreled shotgun into his body. He then reloaded his weapon and killed himself by a shot in the mouth.

Hiram W. Morrison, who was placed under arrest in Boston, after his wife had been found dead in their house, with finger-marks upon her throat and other bruises upon her face and head, has confessed that he choked the woman to death while in a fit of jealous rage.

Intelligence has been recieved in Philadelphia of the arrest in Rio Janeiro of John L. Wilson, formerly assistant manager of the Keen-Sutterlee Leather company of Philadelphia, which failed for nearly $1,000,000. He is charged with forgery and embezzlement.

At Rochester, N. Y., John A. O. Wright, well known as an exponent of better country roads, shot Henry Quinby, son of the late George Isaac Quinby. Mr. Quinby is a bookkeeper at the Union bank. The wound is not serious. Quinby had demanded an apology for a letter Wright is said to have written to Quinby's mother.

From Foreign Shores.

A strong protest was made in the house of commons against the agriculture bill, which would seriously injure British stock raisers.

The German reichstag is now considering a bill framed at the instance of the Agrarians to restrict the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine.

The rebels recently attacked the Japanese near Tusan, Formosa. After several day's fighting the rebels were repulsed.

The vanguard of the Egyptian army under Collisson Bey occupied Akashot on Friday, the dervishes having evacuated the town and fallen back to concentrate on Dongola.

The insurgents have burned forty houses in the village of Punta Brava and on the farm of San Ramon in the Santi Spiritus district of the province of Santa Clara.

Abnormal climatic disturbances still prevail in the Antipodes. A second heat sent the thermometer upwards the mercury climbing to a point never before reached.

Mr. Fitzmaurice, the British vice consul, has returned to Constantinople from Urfa and reports that 8,000 people were massacred during the recent disturbances there.

In the reichstag Gen. Bronsart von Schellendorf, minister of war, discussing the premature publication of the emperor's amnesty decree, assailed the Socialists and brought on a stormy debate.

Miscellaneous.

The Glendon Iron company, one of the oldest in the Lehigh valley, has made an assignment.

Logging camps on the Menominee river are breaking up. The winter's cut amounts to 320,000,000 feet of logs.

Dudley, Brown & Co., tobacco manufacturers at Martinsville, Va., failed for $37,000.

The Ohio senate has passed a bill introduced by Senator Jones of Madison county, providing for substitution of electrocution for hanging.

Executions on judgment, notes aggregating over $20,000 have been issued against Hugh J. Hamil, trading as R. Hamil & Bro., Philadelphia.

Puget sound is excited by rumors that the western terminus of the Great Northern is to be finally fixed at Bellingham bay. This means a boom for New Whatcom and Fairhaven, towns which adjoin each other and are practically one.

Leon & H. Bloom, the largest wholesale dry goods house in Texas, has made an assignment at Galveston. It is announced that the liabilities will amount to $2,000,000 with assets at $2,500,000.

The people of Morton, Iowa, at a meeting adopted resolutions directing Gov. Drake to have his daughter, Miss Mary Lord Drake, use water, instead of wine in christening the battleship Iowa.

G. M. Witten, ex-mayor, ex-police judge and retired banker of Chattanooga, Tenn., has been missing since March 14. The river and Cattett creek have been dredged. He had about $5,000 on his person when last seen here.

The J. F. Seiberling company, manufacturers of the Empire mowers, reapers and binders, made an assignment at Akron, Ohio. The failure was precipitated by an attachment for $10,000 in favor of the First National bank of Ravenna. The liabilities will reach $250,000.

Carthage, a Cincinnati suburb, has an independent ticket in the field, which bears the name of father, mother and son. These are R. C. Phillips, for township clerk; Mrs. Lou Phillips, his wife, for member of the board of education, and Harry Phillips, a son, for councilman.

There is a lively row in the congregation of the new Tremont temple, a Baptist church in Boston. It is because the pastor, Rev. George C. Lorimer, is a Knight Templar. An effort is being made to deny him the right to partake of the sacrament because he is a member of a secret society.

The hardware manufacturing concern of Sargent & Co., New Haven, Conn., employing about 1,500 hands, and the largest factory in the state, has reduced hours from fifty-four to forty-two per week, involving a weekly reduction in wages earned of about 22 per cent.

Internal revenue officers have returned to Danville, Va., from a raid in Patrick county, where they seized 1,500 gallons of spirits on which no tax had been paid. Four barrels of the whisky captured was the property of Isaac Adams, Patrick county's representative in the lower house of the Virginian legislature.

Prof. D. C. Miller of the Case School of Applied Science at Cleveland succeeded in obtaining a photograph of his own ribs and backbone by means of the Roentgen rays. The exposure lasted an hour, the professor lying face downward on a photographic plate 8x12 inches without divesting himself of his clothing; the Crookes tubes being suspended over his back.

AGAINST THE G. N.

IT CANNOT CONSOLIDATE WITH THE NORTHERN PACIFIC.

The United States Supreme Court Decides That Under the Great Northern's Charter and in Opposition to the Act of the Minnesota Legislature of 1874, It Cannot Consolidate With the Northern Pacific.

Washington, March 31. — Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the supreme court to-day in the case of Thomas Pearsall vs. the Great Northern Railroad company, and also of the Louisville & Nashville Railway company vs. the Commonwealth of Kentucky, as to the right of parallel and competing lines to consolidate, holding in the case of the Great Northern that it could not, under its charter, and in opposition to the act of the Minnesota legislature of 1874, be consolidated with the Northern Pacific, as was sought to be accomplished. Justices Field and Brewer dissented in the case.

Justice Brown declares that Thomas W. Pearsall's bill of injunction as a stockholder against the consolidation is valid, reverses the decision of Judge Walter H. Sanborn, of the circuit court of appeals, and substantiates the position taken by Judge William Louis Kelly, of the Ramsey county district court. But Judge Brown's decision goes farther than this. It declares against the consolidation on broad grounds of public policy, holding that the act of the Minnesota legislature of 1874, to be solemnly observed, maintained and executed.

Justice Brown's decision is not lengthy and goes right at the heart of the issues involved. After reviewing the early history of the old Minneapolis & St. Cloud, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba lines, it cites the act under which they acquired vested rights. It also cites the history of showing that it was the original vote carried out under certain acts of congress. The Great Northern became the only competitor of the Northern Pacific, covering the territory contiguous to a line of road 4,500 miles in length.

The question before the court, Justice Brown remarked, was one of vested rights. The court has held that vested rights do not extend beyond rights of property obtained by executed contracts. For 300 years it has been repeatedly held, both in the English and the courts of this country, that a broad and emphatic power, when existent, shall not be extended to an unlimited degree. It would be against public policy to permit a consolidation giving the Great Northern absolute control of a transcontinental system from St. Paul to the Pacific coast. Cases were cited where a consolidation of gas, street car and municipal improvement corporations had consolidated under sanction of courts, but in this case the question of public policy was the paramount issue. The injunction demanded by Pearsall in his bill of equity is therefore granted, and the decision of the lower court reversed.

Thus ends one of the most famous railroad cases of the present generation, in a decision which will be cited for years to come. Justices Field and Brewer dissent from the decision, and will probably file opinions setting forth their views.

EVADED THE CENSOR.

Insurgents Are More Aggressive Than Spanish Reports Have Said.

Key West Fla., March 31.—(Sent from Havana, March 28, to avoid press censorship). — The 25,000 insurgents under Maceo are swarming over the provinces of Havana and Pinar del Rio, destroying property, ripping up railways and tearing down telegraph lines. Forty-five thousand Spanish soldiers are in the same territory and more are coming. Gen. Maceo is in immediate command of the center column of rebels, with about 9,000 men. Gen. Gomez is in the southern part of Havana province with about 6,000 men, and Gen. Lacret is hovering about the outskirts of Havana with about 6,000 cavalry. The other 4,000 men are divided into small bands of pillagers. The insurgents are well equipped and have plenty of ammunition, and are capable of giving the soldiers a warm reception. The activity noticeable about the palace of Gen. Weyler seems to bear out the idea that a crisis is near at hand.

Murder at a Funeral.

Antlers, Ind. T., March 31.—At a funeral at Cedar church, thirty miles east of here, Isaac Reuben shot and killed Sheriff Campson Battiest of Cedar county. Both are bull-blood Choctaws. Reuben claims that Battiest fired two shots at him with a pistol. He then shot out the sheriff's brains with his Winchester, dismounted from his horse and put eight more bullets into the prostrate body. Immediately he took the dead man's revolver and kept on firing and reloading until he had put twenty-seven bullets into the corpse. He has not yet been arrested.

High Water in the East.

Lyons, N. Y., March 31.—The Clyde river is higher than at any time since 1865. It commenced rising yesterday and is now about fifteen feet above its normal level and is still rising. The Standard Oil company's plant is submerged. Several bridges along the smaller streams have been swept away.

Pittsburg, March 31—Both rivers at this point are booming, caused by the rains and melting snow in the mountains. At a late hour 10.30 feet is reported from the dam and rising at the rate of about an inch an hour.

Chink for Chippewas.

Rolla, N. D., March 31.—Attorneys W. Armstrong of Washington and Frank Palmer of Fort Totten are here making arrangements for perfecting the treaty of 1892 whereby the Turtle mountain band of Chippewas will receive $1,000,000 and other perquisites.

Chamberlain, S. D., March 31.—The government is distributing among all the men, women and children of the Sioux nation a cash payment of $3 each as interest on the amount derived from the sale of 11,000,000 acres of their reservation.

SMUGGLERS AT WORK.

Wholesale Violations of the Revenue Laws.

West Superior, Wis., March 31.—Immigrant Inspector M. T. Stokes returned to-day from Rat Portage, where he went to investigate complaints of violation of the alien contract labor law which had been preferred against the Co-operative Fishing company, a concern composed of Buffalo, Ohio and Twin City parties who operate on the American side of the line. It was charged that they systematically violate the law regarding the importation of labor. The inspector took the affidavits of seven workmen, copies of which he has already forwarded to Washington. If the department considers that there is cause of action, Stokes will lay the case before the United States district attorney at St. Paul. Inspector Stokes says that while at Rat Portage he heard numerous stories of wholesale violations of the revenue laws, and says that he was told that opium, whisky, lace and other merchandise supposed to pay tribute is smuggled boldly across the line in fishing smacks, the skippers of which know every turn in the numerous lakes. The treasury department has been informed of these depredations before and is supposed to be taking some steps to suppress the traffic, but as yet no arrests have been made. The cases of violation of the contract labor law which were investigated are said to be a very small proportion of the number which will bear looking into.

BLUFF BY ZELAYA.

Rebels Promptly Decline the Demand for an Absolute Surrender.

(Copyright, by Associated Press.)

Managua, Nic., March 31.—The peace commission, consisting of Dr. Prudente Alfaro, vice president of Salvador; Gen. Commans of Salvador and Senor Ramierez, the Nicaraguan minister for foreign affairs, has returned here from La Paz, where the conference with the representatives of the insurgent Leonists has been held. The terms offered by President Zelaya are understood to have been the absolute surrender of all arms; the payment of all war expenses and the surrender for trial by court martial of the leaders of the insurrection. The insurgents not only refused to accept these terms but they demanded that President Zelaya turn over to them the government of Nicaragua. Consequently all hope of peace is gone, and the war will be continued with renewed bitterness on both sides.
